Peak Vista Family Medicine Residency Program Announces Class of 2022

Colorado Springs, Colo. – Peak Vista Community Health Centers (Peak Vista) announces its Family Medicine Residency (FMR) program class of 2022, into post-graduate clinical training.

Twenty Four FMR resident slots remain filled by qualified medical school graduates from across the nation. The three-year program emphasizes primary care clinical training areas – from outpatient pediatric and family medicine to very rigorous inpatient training in both partner hospital systems.

“With the ever-increasing need for primary care across the country, we are privileged to help shape the next generation of family physicians,” comments Residency Program Director, Scott Robinson, DO, “we experienced a very successful recruitment and Match selection of our fourth class. Bringing this young, talented group of new physicians into Family Medicine Residency Program with its robust learning opportunities and talented staff has been rewarding to oversee.”

The FMR program is a traditional three-year Family Medicine Residency with community support from local hospitals and numerous specialty physician groups.

The class of 2022 includes:

- Amanda Neidermyer, MD, Colorado Springs native, graduated from the University of Colorado School of Medicine
- Ann Treisman, MD, from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, graduated from the University of Chicago, and the University Of Colorado School Of Medicine.
- Derek Fritz, DO, from Gilbert, Arizona, graduated from A.T. Still University School of Osteopathic Medicine
- Gretchen Nonawzki, DO, from Oregon, graduated from the University of New England College of Osteopathic Medicine
- Lisa Reimer, MD, graduated from the University of South Florida Morsani College of Medicine
- Matthew Bonello, DO, from Southern California, graduated from Touro University Nevada
- Nicholas Sloan, DO, from Pueblo, Colorado, graduated from Rocky Vista University
- Vinesh Jeevanandam, DO, from New York City, New York, graduated from Sidney Kimmel Medical College
