Most people in Virginia have immunity to measles through vaccination, so the risk to the general public is low. However, anyone who was at the potential exposure sites at the times listed should:

- Report your exposure to the Fairfax County Health Department by completing this short survey. Public health officials will follow-up with respondents if additional actions are needed.
- Verify whether they are up to date on their measles vaccine. If you are unsure if your child is up to date with their measles vaccine, you can check their vaccination record on portal or message your provider.
- Watch for symptoms of measles for 21 days after the potential exposure. If you notice symptoms of measles, immediately isolate yourself by staying home and contacting your provider via phone or portal.

While this is the 2nd case of measles in our area this year, we are NOT yet in an outbreak situation. It is not yet indicated to give the measles-mumps-rubella (MMR, dose 1 or dose 2) early. If you have specific questions, please message your CAP provider.
