HEAD COACH GARY HENDERSON

Gary Henderson, the 2012 SEC Coach of the Year, is in his eighth year as the head coach and his 13th year overall with the Kentucky baseball program. A graduate of San Diego State, Henderson has directed the Wildcats into an unprecedented era of success as UK has set the school wins record three times during his tenure and have annually re-written the century old UK record book.

Henderson, who has carved out a reputation as one of the top pitching coaches in the NCAA, has led UK to the best 12-year stretch in program history, highlighted by a historic 2012 season and the first SEC Championship in school annals in 2006. UK shattered nearly every school record in 2012 while soaring to No. 1 in the nation for three weeks, a first in program history, and has equaled the best finish in the NCAA and SEC Tournaments in UK history twice in the last four years.

The fastest coach to 200 wins in Kentucky history, Henderson has ushered in a staggering amount of talent at UK, as a school-record nine players were picked in the 2012 MLB Draft – second most in the NCAA – and a total of 68 UK players have been picked in the MLB Draft or signed as a free agent under his guidance.

While directing UK to its eighth all-time NCAA Tournament berth in 2014, the Wildcats had one of the best seasons in program history – boosted by the nation's top offense. Highlighting the campaign was the performance of two-way star AJ Reed, who blossomed into one of the top individual performers in the history of college baseball. UK's Friday-night ace for two seasons and its primary run producer at the plate, Reed was the unanimous national player of the year. Reed became the first player in league history to lead the SEC – and the nation – in homers and also pace the circuit in pitching wins, going 12-2 with a 2.09 ERA. Reed belted 23 homers, hit .336 and had a SEC-best 73 RBI and a .476 on-base percentage. His 23 homers were more than 185 teams combined to hit during the 2014 season.

Henderson served as the pitching coach on the USA Collegiate National Team during the 2015 summer, joining the coaching staff of St. John's Ed Blankmeyer, along with fellow Team USA assistant coaches Elliot Avent (N.C. State), Paul Mainieri (LSU) and Rich Hill (San Diego). While managing a dynamic pitching staff, Henderson oversaw a Team USA no-hitter over the Cuban Senior National Team, the first time Cuba had been no-hit in international play. Team USA won its series meetings with Cuba and Taiwan.

Henderson's impact on the UK program can be seen directly in the amount of talent it is producing, as UK saw a program best 68 players selected in the MLB Draft or signed as a free agent, including a UK record nine in 2012. Overall, Henderson has seen 27 of his pitchers drafted at Kentucky and a total of 68 of the 167 players drafted in program history have come under his watch, a staggering 41 percent.

Henderson's 2012 season also marked a season of firsts for the UK program, as UK was ranked No. 1 in the nation for three weeks in the middle of SEC play, the first No. 1 national ranking for the program. UK finished the 2012 season with a No. 11 national ranking by Baseball America and the No. 14 NCAA RPI, both program highs, leading the SEC a record eight of 10 weeks and winning seven of its 10 weekend series, also a program first. UK ran up a school-record 22-game winning streak, the second-longest winning stretch in the storied history of the SEC and won its first ever series over a No. 1 ranked team, taking two of three games from LSU at home when UK was ranked as high as No. 2.

The Wildcats are coming off their eighth all-time NCAA Tournament berth in 2014, with Kentucky posting one of its most successful seasons in program history. Under Henderson's guidance, UK two-way star Reed blossomed into one of the top individual performers in the history of college baseball. UK's Friday-night ace for two seasons and its primary run producer at the plate, Reed was the unanimous national player of the year, winning the USA Baseball Golden Spikes Award, the Dick Howser Trophy, Baseball America College Player of the Year, American Baseball Coaches Association National Player of the Year, SEC Male Athlete of the Year, SEC Player of the Year and the John Olerud Trophy.

Reed became the first player in league history to lead the SEC – and the nation – in homers and also paced the circuit in pitching wins, going 12-2 with a 2.09 ERA. Reed belted 23 homers, hit .336 and had a SEC-best 73 RBI and a .476 on-base percentage. His 23 homers were more than 185 teams combined to hit during the 2014 season. Reed's first full professional season saw him lead minor league baseball in homers, runs, RBI, slugging and OPS, while soaring to triple-A in the Astros organization.

Following the season Reed and UK star centerfielder Austin Cousino – a two-time Rawlings Gold Glove Award winner – were selected in the top three rounds of the 2014 MLB Draft. Overall, UK had six players drafted or sign a professional contract, including Reed (second round), Cousino (third round), infielder Max Kuhn (13th round), righty Chandler Shepherd (13th round), catcher Micheal Thomas (22nd round) and shortstop Matt Reid (free agent).

UK's 2012 campaign that ranked as the best in the history of the program, with Henderson voted Southeastern Conference Coach of the Year by the league coaches. Henderson directed the Wildcats to a school-record 45-win season, with UK completing its best finishes in the SEC and NCAA Tournaments in school annals.

The 2012 season features a bevy of record-setting statistics, with Henderson's pitching staff setting new program records in saves (22), innings pitched (570), strikeouts (502) and opponent average (.260). UK also set a new program standard with a .976 fielding mark. A key piece of the UK 2012 season was the dynamic Wildcats bullpen, which owned a staggering 40-0 record when leading after seven innings and a 32-1 mark when leading after four frames. Overall, UK's bullpen owned a 17-6 record, a 2.97 ERA, with 22 saves and a .235 opponent average.

Following the season, a school-record nine UK players were selected in the 2012 MLB Draft, the second-most in the NCAA and the Wildcats sent a nation-leading nine players from its 2013 roster to play in the Cape Cod League or on the USA Collegiate National Team.

The Wildcats posted another 30-win season in 2013 that saw UK ranked in the top-25 for 12 of 15 weeks. Kentucky again took aim at the UK record book under Henderson's tutelage, as UK set a new program record for bullpen ERA, with UK boasting a dynamic relief corps that included record-shattering closer Trevor Gott. UK sported a 2.29 bullpen ERA, went 25-0 when staked to an eighth inning lead and finished the year winning 88 consecutive games when leading after eight innings, dating back to 2011. UK also had the third-best fielding percentage in school annals, with two of the top three marks coming under Henderson's eye.

Kentucky again made a splash in the MLB Draft in 2013, as Corey Littrell (fourth round), Gott (fifth round), J.T. Riddle (11th round) and Jerad Grundy (12th round) were all signed to their first professional contracts. Gott has already debuted in the big leagues and is quickly establishing himself as one of the top young relievers in MLB. Riddle has earned a spot on the Marlins 40-man roster entering 2016 after a strong fall in the Arizona League.

During the summer of 2012, Henderson started working with USA Baseball, serving as an instructor during the USA Baseball 14-U National Development Team Program, joining Arizona State head coach Tim Esmay on the USA staff, along with former New York Yankees general manager Bob Watson.

During his five years as the associate head coach, Henderson helped lead the Wildcat program to two then-record 44-win seasons, two NCAA Regional Championship appearances, an NCAA Regional host and the first SEC Championship in UK's 75-year history in the SEC.

Henderson's 2008 pitching staff was the best in the SEC, pacing the conference with a 3.71 team ERA, ranking as the second-best ERA in school history.

A former national assistant coach of the year in 1996 at Florida, Henderson is in his second collegiate head coaching job, with assistant coaching stops at San Diego State, Fullerton State, Riverside CC, Pepperdine, Florida and Oregon State. Henderson's head coaching experience came as the head coach at Chapman University (Calif.), where he helped transition the program to Division I, guiding the program to a national ranking in just its first year.

Henderson's impact on the UK pitching staff has been dramatic helping transform the Wildcat staff into one of the top in the nation. Individually, impact can be seen by the improvements made to 2008 senior pitchers Andrew Albers, Brock Baber and Greg Dombrowski, a trio which exited UK among the pitching record holders. UK's 2007-08 Friday night starter Chris Rusin became the first Wildcat pitcher tabbed as a first-team All-SEC selection since current MLB reliever Scott Downs in 1997.

After securing the fourth-best recruiting class in the nation in 2008 – a school record – Henderson has helped mentor the group into the next phase of their baseball careers, most notably 2011 first-round MLB Draft pick Alex Meyer, who became the second-highest UK draft pick in program history.

Henderson worked tirelessly with Meyer, who arrived at Kentucky as a 6-foot-6, 175-pound projectable right-hander. Meyer and Henderson worked to smooth mechanics and develop on and off the field into a dynamic starter that earned All-SEC honors in 2011. Meyer finished his UK career ranking among the career and single-season record holders, fanning 253 in 211.2 innings, with 13 wins. In 2011, Meyer finished with a 2.94 ERA and a 7-5 mark, striking out 110 in 101 innings. Just a year later, Meyer was on the mound in the MLB Futures Game at Kaufmann Stadium in Kansas City, as the 50th-best prospect in the game.

With Henderson guiding the pitching staff in 2009, Kentucky ended the season setting a school-record for strikeouts in a season, fanning 523 as a staff. Kentucky also had three pitchers drafted in the 2009 MLB Draft, including two players who signed contracts. Rusin, a 2009 senior, signed to play in the Chicago Cubs organization after being drafted by the Cubs in the fourth round and has since made his MLB debut. In 2010, UK junior Logan Darnell went in the sixth round to the Minnesota Twins, after going undrafted in high school out of Nashville suburb, Joelton, Tenn.

Henderson's pitching staff became a force during the 2006 SEC Championship season, ranking third in the conference in ERA. The Wildcats' pitching staff improved under Henderson immediately, as the team improved from a 5.23 ERA in 2005 to a 3.95 ERA during 2006. Most impressively, Henderson transformed the 2006 pitching staff into a weapon, using journeyman weekend starters, Greg Dombrowski, Craig Snipp and Aaron Tennyson, a trio of players without imposing "stuff" that bought into Henderson's approach on the mound. Most notably, Henderson turned Dombrowski – a 5-foot-11 side-arm righty with an 82-mph fastball – into a 10-win performer in 2006.

In 2008, despite playing in a "hitters ballpark", Henderson's pitching staff allowed the fewest home runs in the SEC. That staff also allowed the fewest runs and the fewest earned runs in the SEC in 2008.

One of the stalwarts of the UK pitching staff in 2008 was Albers, whose leadership and competitive fire was a key element to UK's run. Albers was a 10th round pick in the 2008 MLB Draft by the San Diego Padres, playing in the minor league system for one season before having Tommy John surgery. After rehabbing and proving his health in the independent leagues, Albers traveled to Lexington to stay in Henderson's basement and workout. Henderson arranged for scouts from the Minnesota Twins to watch an Albers bullpen and after a second workout session in Florida, Albers signed with the Twins. He completed his fairytale rise to the big leagues in 2013, setting a franchise record for consecutive shutout innings to start his career and earning Twins Minor League Pitcher of the Year accolades.

Regarded as one of the top coaches in college baseball in terms of controlling the running game defensively, Henderson had four consecutive years, from 2005 to 2008, where each of his Wildcat staffs led the SEC in fewest stolen bases allowed. Overall, UK has allowed the fewest steals in the SEC in six of his 10 seasons directing the pitching staff.

Henderson's impact can not only be seen in the pitching staff but also in his recruiting ability. His impact was immediate upon his arrival, as UK's first recruiting class under Henderson was hailed as one of the top 25 in the nation by Collegiate Baseball. Henderson has continued to recruit the best players in the country, as the 2007 class was ranked among the nation's best and the 2008 class was tabbed No. 31. Henderson's 2008 (2009 newcomers) class was widely regarded by many as one of the best class in the nation (fourth overall) and the top recruiting class in program history. The 2009 (2010 newcomers) class wasn't too far behind, ranking in the top-15 in Baseball America and as the sixth-best class in the nation by Collegiate Baseball Newspaper. Henderson has kept up the recruiting momentum, signing the No. 16 class in the NCAA in 2010 and the No. 25 class in 2011 (2012 newcomers). His 2012 class (2013 newcomers) boasted five previous draftees, a program best, ranking as high as No. 11 in the nation.

Prior to his current post, Henderson spent five seasons as pitching coach and recruiting coordinator at Oregon State. The Beavers notched the school's first ever College World Series titles in 2006 and 2007, riding the arms of several players recruited by Henderson. The most notable was CWS MVP Kevin Gunderson, who pitched a brilliant postseason in leading the Beavers to the title.

At Oregon State, Henderson coached eight Beaver pitchers who were drafted by major league teams, five of whom were selected in the top eight rounds. With the help of Henderson's recruiting efforts, the Beavers improved from 19 wins in 1999 to 31 in both the 2001 and 2002 seasons, finishing 31-24 and 31-23, respectively. In his time with the Beavers, two of Henderson's recruiting classes were ranked among the top 30 nationally. Meanwhile, his pitching staff led the Pac-10 Conference in complete games in both the 2000 and 2001 seasons.

In 1996, Collegiate Baseball Newspaper tabbed Henderson as the National Assistant Coach of the Year. At the time, he was in his second year at Florida, where he served as pitching coach and recruiting coordinator for the high-octane Gators from 1995-98. In that time, he helped the Gators to the SEC Championship and the College World Series in both 1996 and

* One of Gary Henderson's cornerstones in building a pitching staff is an ability to control the opponent's running game, fundamentals that have taken on increased importance with the bat standard changes since 2011.

QUOTING UK GREAT ALEX MEYER

On Gary Henderson's influence on his career ...

"One of the things that I can thank coach Henderson the most for is the maturation process that he made me go through. When I showed up at Kentucky, I was thinking that I was going to come in and dominate right away and I would be the big guy right from day one. Pretty soon I figured out that it was going to be a lot harder than I thought and he was there for me from day one. He was there the whole time, through the good and the bad. He would tell me that I was going to get through the struggles. After fall ball my freshman year, I was worried. I started pretty good but by the end of it our veteran hitters started to understand what I was going to do. And all of a sudden I couldn't get a guy out in my freshman fall. And he told me that I was going to figure it out and this is part of the process. That I was going to be successful and if I stuck with it I would be successful. He did a real good job of keeping everything in perspective."

On Henderson's attention to the mental game ...

"One thing that he told me that I will never forget. And I have told people this, when I go to speak to a local middle or high school team, one thing I always tell them that resonated with me from coach Henderson is that baseball is truly a game of failure. When he told me that, I didn't necessarily understand what he was talking about. But he told me to think about it, if a guy fails seven times out of 10 at the plate in baseball you are going to go down as one of the best to ever play the game. And that is over half the time failing. So if you fail seven times and you let that eat you up, it is just going to wear on you and break you down. That is something he really preaches, is that you are going to fail. And he says he isn't going to get mad at you when you fail, he is going to talk to you and hope you can learn from it and give you another chance to go out and prove that you can learn from it. That is something he did a great job with me. When I messed up, he would explain what I was doing wrong. When you have a coach that is able to break things down for you and make things so simple, it can really help you out and make things easy for you."

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING ABOUT HENDERSON

"No question that this program is going nowhere but up. Coach Henderson has played a huge part in so many players lives. He is one of the best recruiters in the country. I mean he found me all the way up in Saskatchewan, Canada. Not many guys make it from up there down here. He does a great job and I think his ability to form relationships with players and their families really just attracts people to this program and it should. He has that personality and is just a tremendous person. He's very intense, is a tremendous competitor and he's locked in at all times. Guys just want to be around him, he's a winner."

- Minnesota Twins 2013 Minor League Pitcher of the Year Andrew Albers

"I love Coach Henderson. He actually came out to a game here in Reno (when Cowgill played for the Triple-A Aces). He was recruiting a kid in Sacramento, I think, and just jumped over a night and we sat outside at the field for at least an hour and just talked about everything from baseball to his son, Ty. He's a friend and he's been great mentor to me. The way he treats us when we come back in the offseason to work out, he does everything he can to help us. He'd do anything for us and, at the same time, we try to do everything we can for them. It's a great relationship I have with them and they take great care of me, so I can't thank them enough for what they've done."

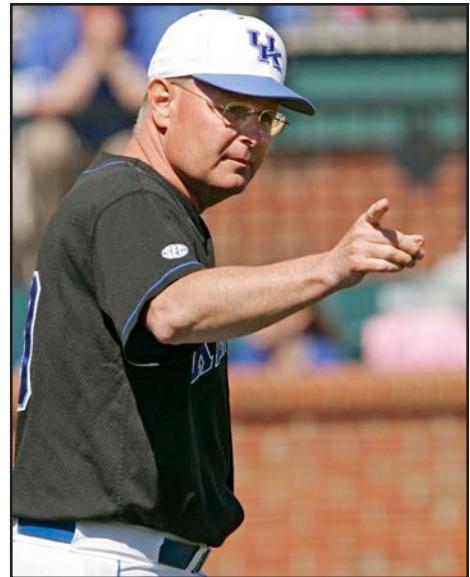

- Former UK All-American and Los Angeles Angels outfielder Collin Cowgill

"Gary is one of the top coaches in the country and I am so proud of having gotten to work with him and be apart of his life. Gary's work ethic, his attention to detail and his pure knowledge of what is going on with all aspects of the game makes him an outstanding coach. Gary is someone who has always been ahead of the game when it comes to recruiting and someone who has had an amazing impact on programs. He has earned the job, he is a man of integrity and someone who will do an outstanding job at Kentucky."

- Oregon State Head Coach Pat Casey

"Gary Henderson is going to be a phenomenal head coach, I am really happy for him and the University of Kentucky. Gary is a guy who really knows his stuff and him getting a head coaching job in the SEC is a really long time coming. He is a coach that can really relate to the players, a guy who is smart and witty, definitely one of the funniest coaches I have ever had. Gary Henderson deserves to be a head coach at a top-notch major school and he is going to do an outstanding job."

- MLB Catcher David Ross

ASSISTANT COACH TOBY BICKNELL

FIRST YEAR AT UK

After spending five seasons as an assistant coach at the Air Force Academy Toby Bicknell is in his first year as Kentucky's recruiting coordinator.

"Toby Bicknell is a proven coach and recruiter widely respected in our industry," Henderson said. "Toby's unique skills, experience and background will compliment a coaching and support staff I am proud and excited to lead. We look forward to welcoming him to the Kentucky baseball family."

Bicknell joins the Kentucky coaching staff after serving as Air Force's recruiting coordinator, hitting coach and defensive coordinator from 2011-15. Known for a tireless work ethic and passion for the game, Bicknell joined the Air Force coaching staff after two seasons with Davidson as the offensive and defensive coordinator, and two campaigns with Clemson as the volunteer assistant with the Tigers.

"I am honored for the opportunity Coach Henderson extended me to become a part of The University of Kentucky and the baseball program," Bicknell said. "I am excited to work with such an amazing group of coaches, staff and players. I am looking forward to competing in the SEC and continuing the championship culture that is already in place here at Kentucky."

Bicknell had a positive impact on the Falcons program, recruiting a competitive roster in the Mountain West. He recruited three top-100 recruiting classes and led the Falcons to a Division I school-record for wins in 2015. The 2011 Air Force team had its most wins since 2002, while setting a school-record for fielding percentage, which was later shattered by his 2015 club. Prior to Air Force, Bicknell dramatically changed the landscape of the Davidson program in his two seasons and during his time at Clemson, saw the Tigers total 70 wins and advance to the NCAA Starkville Super Regional.

During his time at Air Force, Bicknell helped outfielder Tyler Jones earned freshman All-American honors after batting .338 in 2014. Under Bicknell's guidance, Jones became Air Force's first freshman since 1991 to earn all-conference honors.

In 2012, Bicknell coached a trio of Falcons to Mountain West Baseball All-Conference team. The Falcons were led by senior Blair Roberts who earned first-team honors at second base. Roberts earned the selection with a .302 conference batting average, becoming Air Force's first all-conference Bicknell spent the 2009 and 2010 seasons at Davidson College. At Davidson, Bicknell dramatically helped turn around the offense and defense. During his first season with the Wildcats, the 2009 team improved in eight offensive categories - home runs (30 to 66), doubles (89 to 122), runs scored (272 to 313), RBI (252 to 283), total bases (647 to 827), slugging percentage (.375 to .468), on-base percentage and stolen bases (45 to 56), and finished seventh or higher in the Southern Conference in five offensive categories. Prior to his time at Davidson, Bicknell spent two seasons as the Volunteer assistant coach at Clemson University. During his time at Clemson, Bicknell worked primarily with infielders and hitters along with coordinating summer camps at Clemson. The Tigers compiled a 70-51-1 record during his two years.

In his first season at Clemson in 2007, Bicknell helped coach one of the best infields in Tiger history, led by first baseman Andy D'Alessio, shortstop Taylor Harbin, and third baseman Marquez Smith.

The Tigers advanced to the NCAA Super Regional in 2007 after capturing the NCAA Regional title. Clemson had 12 wins over teams ranked in the top-25 and had a school-record 11 players selected in 2007 MLB draft, including five players in the first three rounds.

Prior to his time at Clemson, Bicknell spent two years as an assistant coach at North Carolina-Pembroke. The Braves posted a record of 63-47 in those two years, received a national ranking as high as seventh, and posted back-to-back 30 win seasons for the first time in program history, while tying the school record for wins at 32. The 2006 team posted school records in seven offensive categories while also having six of its starters hit .315 or better.

Bicknell, who is entering his 15th year as a coach, spent seven years coaching high school and travel baseball in the Charlotte area. He coached 30 high school players that played college baseball.

As a collegiate athlete, Bicknell was a starter for the Wingate baseball team, where he played third base.

Bicknell earned his bachelor's degree in physical education at Wingate University in 2002, and his master's degree in sports administration at UNC-Pembroke in 2006.

ASSISTANT COACH RICK ECKSTEIN

SECOND YEAR AT UK

Rick Eckstein, the hitting coach for the Washington Nationals for five seasons and most recently the player information coach for the Los Angeles Angels, is in his second season as Kentucky's offensive coordinator.

Eckstein joined the UK staff in 2015 after serving as the player information coach for the Angels during the 2014 season. Eckstein previously spent 2009-13 as the hitting coach for the Washington Nationals.

Eckstein has spent the previous six seasons in Major League Baseball and has been in professional baseball since 2004 after a three-year stint as an assistant at Georgia.

In his first season with Kentucky, Eckstein led an offense that was spearheaded by hit machines Kyle Barrett and Ka'ai Tom, in addition to slugging All-SEC standout JaVon Shelby. Barrett led the SEC in hits at the end of the regular season and Tom excelled as one of the top hitters in UK history. Shelby slugged nine homers, ranked third in the SEC in OPS in league games, and enters 2016 as a consensus preseason All-America selection.

"I am thrilled to join the staff at Kentucky," Eckstein said. "Having had the opportunity to work with coach Henderson when I was a player and assistant at Florida, I was excited to rejoin his staff. I want to thank Mike Scioscia and everyone with the Angels for a wonderful opportunity to work with a first-class organization. The opportunity to return to the nation's best collegiate baseball league, the Southeastern Conference, and work at such a well-respected program is very exciting and I can't wait to get to work."

Henderson and Eckstein reunite after spending three seasons together at the University of Florida, where Henderson coached and recruited Eckstein for the 1996 season before Rick joined the staff as the volunteer assistant for the 1997-98 teams. Florida posted a historic season in 1996 – Rick's final season as an athlete – with Henderson serving as the pitching coach as the Gators advanced to the College World Series.

"We could not be more thrilled to bring Rick into the Kentucky baseball family," UK head coach Gary Henderson said. "Rick is one of the most respected minds in baseball and his teaching skills and baseball knowledge will be a great asset to our program. Rick has experience at all levels of baseball and will bring a unique big-league experience to our student-athletes. I have had the pleasure of working with Rick as a player and colleague and know the kind of positive impact he will have on our program. With Rick joining Brad Bohannon and Keith Vorhoff on our staff, we will continue to have an outstanding coaching staff."

Eckstein joined the Angels coaching staff for the 2014 season, with an official title of player information coach, also functioning as assistant hitting coach and an advanced scout. During his time with the Angels in 2014, Los Angeles has been positioned squarely in the American League Western Division title hunt. Eckstein has worked with Angels hitters that include former UK All-America outfielder Collin Cowgill, and stars Albert Pujols, Mike Trout and Josh Hamilton.

Before joining the Angels coaching staff, Eckstein served as the hitting coach for the Nationals for five seasons, from 2009-13. During his time with the Nationals, Eckstein helped direct the club to a first-place finish in the National League Eastern Division under manager Davey Johnson in 2012. During that 2012 season, Eckstein's offense ranked among the NL's top five in homers (194, second), slugging percentage (.428, third), doubles (301, third), OPS (.750, fourth), average (.261, fourth), hits (1468, fourth) and runs (731, fifth). Washington set a new franchise record with its 194 homers.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING ABOUT ECKSTEIN

"Rick Eckstein has one of the most creative baseball minds I have been around. His knowledge of fundamental baseball, combined with his passion to achieve, will allow him to connect with players in a special way. Players will not only prosper from his knowledge at the collegiate level but will be better prepared for professional baseball."

- Los Angeles Angels Manager Mike Scioscia

"The guy doesn't get outworked by anybody. He has an incredible work ethic, not just on the field but off the field. He knows baseball. He knows how to be a hitting coach and he knows how to teach kids. He has a gift of being able to break things down in a way that people can understand them. There is nothing more important as a hitting coach, than being able to explain something to someone that is going to make them understand it and be better for it. That is the best kind of coach you can have. As far as Rick goes, that is him. He can explain things and show people things in a way that they are so easy to understand and digest. He is a guy that just eats up baseball."

"He's been a hitting coach in the big leagues for 10 years or so. He felt like he could really get in touch and connect with the college age group. He is going to have so much information that is going to be so much more beneficial for players at that age, players that can be sculpted early in their development so much easier. Where at this level, you usually have an extremely solid educational foundation and there is only so much you can build on. But when you have 18-year old players coming in fresh out of high school and coming into the SEC, Rick is going to be so good at helping them reach their potential."

- Los Angeles Angels outfielder and UK 2008 first-team All-American Collin Cowgill

"The University of Kentucky is really lucky to have Rick. He is an extremely hard worker and very dedicated. I'm not sure around anyone who knows about hitting as well as he does. He is a player's guy. You feel like he is in the batter's box with you all the time fighting to get a hit. He's been a big-league hitting coach and has worked with some of the best in baseball. He is coming from Anaheim and I know Albert Pujols, he had some experience with him in St. Louis, and Albert thinks a lot of him as well. That kind of speaks for itself, where he has been and the players that he has worked with. It is a great hire and it's exciting for the program."

- Former Washington Nationals, 12-year MLB Outfielder and Lexington High School star Austin Kearns

ASSISTANT COACH KEITH VORHOFF

NINTH SEASON AT UK

Keith Vorhoff, a former volunteer assistant coach at Southeastern Louisiana University, is in his ninth season as the volunteer assistant coach with the Kentucky baseball program.

As the volunteer assistant coach for the Wildcats, Vorhoff serves a myriad of roles, including assisting with the pitching staff and development of the catchers, assisting in camp coordinating and video production, organization of practice and class schedules, and assisting in the day-to-day management of the UK baseball program.

Vorhoff also assists as the UK first base coach, helping direct a high-octane UK offensive attack on the base paths.

As the catching coordinator, Vorhoff's tutelage can be seen directly in the backstops produced by the Wildcats during his tenure. In 2010, senior Marcus Nidiffer had a breakout year and continued that success into his professional debut. In 2011 and 2012, Vorhoff managed a pair of dynamic catchers who shared the position, Luke Maile and Michael Williams. The duo formed one of the best catching tandems in the NCAA, complete with lockdown defense behind the dish.

UK's 2014 season saw great development of UK fifth-year senior catcher Micheal Thomas, who belted eight homers and was a stalwart behind the plate. In addition to Thomas, UK saw one of the best individual seasons in the history of college baseball from two-way star AJ Reed. Reed led the NCAA in homers, slugging and OPS, while pacing the SEC in wins, RBI, on-base percentage and total bases.

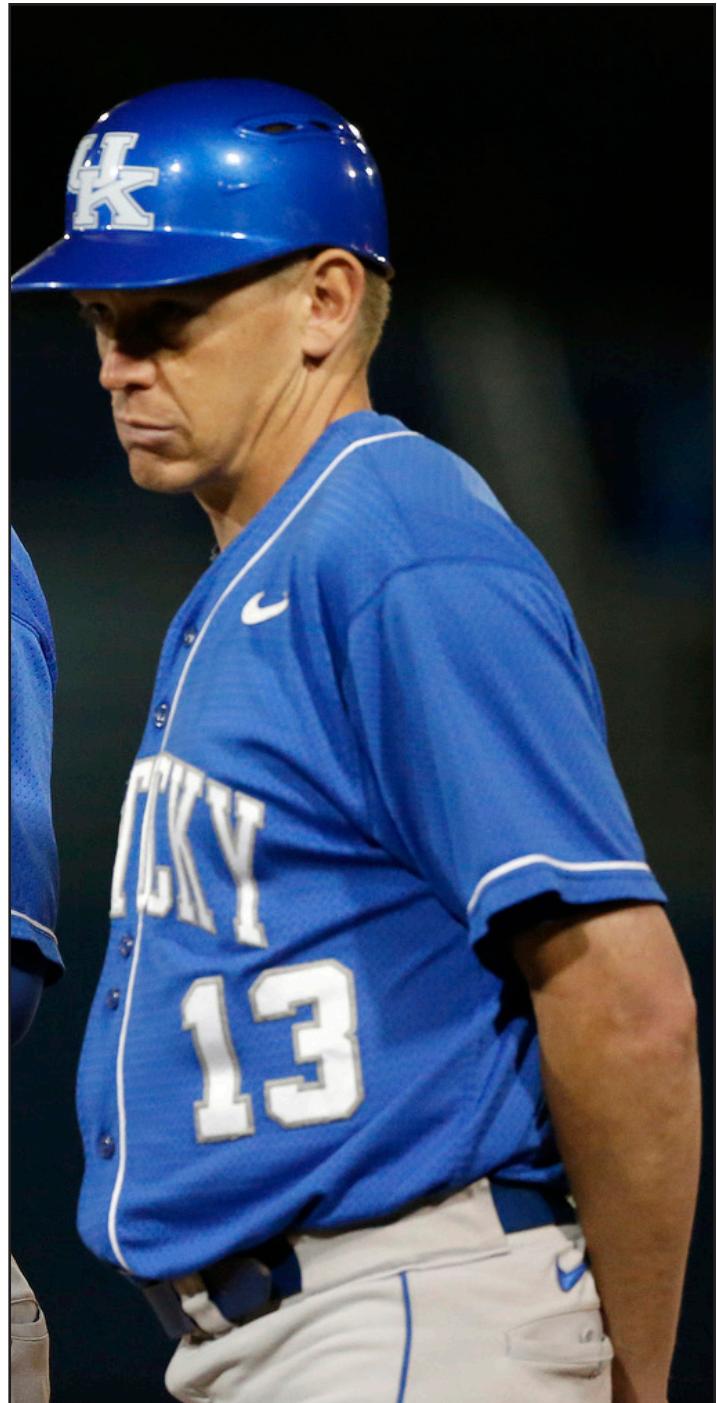

The 2012 season marked another historic campaign for Kentucky, which won a school-record 45 games, soared to a No. 1 national ranking for the first time in program history and equaled UK's best ever finishes in the Southeastern Conference and NCAA Tournaments. The combination of Maile and Williams were instrumental in UK's success, combining for 15 homers and over 87 RBI, with UK leading the league in pickoffs and allowing the fewest steals in the SEC.

The UK pitching staff was one of the tops in program history in 2012, as UK owned the second-best team ERA in program history, 3.41, just shy of the school record set in 1983. UK shattered the school pitching records for saves (22), innings (570), strikeouts (502) and opponent average (.260).

He was honored at the 2012 American Baseball Coaches Association convention in Chicago, presenting on "The Catching Foundation: Receiving and Blocking". He is the third consecutive member of the UK coaching staff to present at the ABCA convention, as head coach Gary Henderson presented in 2010 in Philadelphia and assistant Brian Green presented in 2011 in Nashville.

In 2013, Vorhoff's impact could be seen in the defensive progress of Micheal Thomas behind the plate, as Thomas worked his way into the starting lineup and committed just one error from his backstop post, coming on a catcher's interference.

Vorhoff has worked closely with some of the top sluggers in UK baseball history, including All-Americans Sawyer Carroll and Collin Cowgill, with Cowgill helping the Arizona Diamondbacks win the 2011 National

2012: ABCA Convention featured speaker

League Western Division and the Oakland Athletics win the 2012 American League Western Division crown.

In 2008, Vorhoff worked closely with a UK pitching staff that led the SEC in ERA, helping mentor dynamic UK pitchers Andrew Albers, Greg Dombrowski, Chris Rusin and James Paxton. Albers, Paxton, Rusin and 2011 first-team MLB Draft pick Alex Meyer all improved their draft stock into the top 10 rounds after working with Vorhoff, with Paxton also going in the first round in 2009.

Vorhoff spent the 2007 season working with the Southeastern Louisiana University baseball program, working mainly with the pitching staff. Vorhoff helped improve the staff ERA from 5.34 in 2006 to 4.07 in 2007, good enough to pace the conference. As the pitching coach, Vorhoff emphasized keeping the ball down in the zone in an effort to force ground-ball outs, translating into the Lions leading the NCAA in double plays. The Baton Rouge, La., native had several roles for Southeastern Louisiana, including managing the scouting reports for future opponents, handling all the video needs for the program, and assisting with organization and planning of camps.

Among the individual accomplishments of his pitching staff in 2007 was third-round MLB pick Chris Province, a Boston Red Sox draftee who had never been drafted before undergoing Vorhoff's tutelage.

Vorhoff has served as a summer league coach for two excellent clubs, including serving as the head coach for the Chillicothe Mudcats during the summer of 2007. Vorhoff also served as the assistant coach for the Anchorage Bucs in the Alaska Summer Collegiate Baseball League, coaching 19 players selected in the MLB Draft. During the 2004 season the Bucs led the ABL in team batting average, team slugging percentage, and runs scored. Also during the 2004 season, the Bucs represented the ABL in the National Baseball Congress World Series, finishing with a 32-15 overall record.

Aside from being very active in summer collegiate leagues, Vorhoff spent two seasons on the staff at Northeast Texas CC. Vorhoff handled Northeast's base-running philosophies, resulting in a school record for stolen bases, swiping 145 bases in 176 attempts. Vorhoff also worked with the pitchers, outfielders, and hitters while at Northeast.

Before coaching at the collegiate level, Vorhoff completed his college playing days at Missouri Valley College. During his senior season, Vorhoff helped the Vikings win the coveted Heart of America Championship. For his contributions to the Viking's success both on and off the field, Vorhoff was named to the NAIA Academic All-American Team. As MVC's best closer, Vorhoff had a 4-1 record in his senior season.

Before transferring to Missouri Valley, Vorhoff played one season for Arkansas State University, in Jonesboro, Ark. Vorhoff went to Arkansas State after completing two years at Pratt Community College, in Pratt, Kan. During his freshman and sophomore seasons at Pratt, Vorhoff was an integral part of the Beaver pitching staff, helping set the school record for wins during the 1999 season. In his second year at Pratt, Vorhoff was named to the Jayhawk League All-Star team, as well as a second-team All-Region selection.

Vorhoff is a graduate of Redemptorist High School, and is a native of Baton Rouge, La, where his parents Carol and Conrad still reside. Keith received his B.S. in exercise science, with concentrations in sports management and health & fitness, from Missouri Valley College in 2004. Upon graduation, Vorhoff worked two seasons with his alma matter as a student assistant coach, handling pitchers, outfielders, and assisting in player development.

Vorhoff, 36, is married to the former Brooke Szabo and the couple has a son, Easton (two) and resides in Lexington, Ky.

Brandenburg, Ky.
(Meade Co./Air Force Academy)

• 2015 SEC First-Year Academic Honor Roll

Outlook

Transferred from Air Force Academy for the 2015 season and became a go-to weapon late in the year ... Arrived at Kentucky with a low arm slot and has dropped down to a true sidearm delivery, which presents matchup problems for right-handed hitters ... Is a tough as nails competitor with good athleticism and an ability to pitch in key situations ... Is a great story, as he was the top reliever for his first two seasons at Air Force ... A civil engineering major at AFA, he did not pass the vision test in depth perception required for pilots following his sophomore year in 2014 ... After his junior season, Wilson would have been committed to five years of active duty, for a total commitment of nine years, without the option of becoming a pilot, his lifelong goal ... Because the opportunity to live out his dream and follow in his father's footsteps of being a pilot was no longer an option, the NCAA granted a waiver that allowed him to compete immediately ... Appeared in 48 games in two years with Air Force, with two saves in 81.2 innings.

EXPERIENCED, PHYSICAL ARNOLD READY FOR TEST

For the vast majority of catching prospects, there is no supplement for experience.

Tools and player makeup are obvious keys to success, but often times a catcher doesn't fully come into their own until they have the experience of playing high-level competition.

That career trajectory is no different for Kentucky senior backstop Zach Arnold.

A former star at Franklin County High School, Arnold was a drafted in 2012 by the New York Mets, before electing to continue his baseball career 30 minutes east in Lexington.

He arrived at Kentucky knowing that he had a major focus in his development, adding strength to his projectable 6-foot-2, 165 pound frame.

Arnold has accomplished that mission, adding 25 pounds over his career, and combined with the experience he has gained over the previous three years under Coach Gary Henderson's guidance, is poised for a strong senior season.

"(Adding strength) has been a real big part of it, just from the standpoint of having that kind of wear on your body when you are that small and in the catching position, you need to be a big target," Arnold said. "I am still a tall catcher, but putting on the weight has helped me with my swing and it has also helped me oddly better at blocking. When I was younger, it was not that much of a wall. Now I am a little bit wider, bigger and seem to be blocking the ball a little bit better. I love working out. Getting in the weight room is a plus on a daily basis."

Over his career, Arnold has always had a catcher with a bit more experience ahead of him on the depth chart. In 2013 and 2014, he served as the third catcher behind Greg Fettes and star Micheal Thomas.

As a sophomore in 2014, Arnold served as the primary back-up catcher to Thomas, making three starts behind the plate and showing his line-drive approach at the plate with a 13-for-24 showing. His highlight came as a pinch-hitter who beat out a walk-off single in the 13th inning of the SEC Tournament vs. Mississippi State.

A strong summer in the Northwoods League in 2014 helped set up Arnold for 2015. He was an all-star, hit .304 and had a 19-game hitting streak during the summer.

During 2015, Arnold was the back-up to Fettes, playing in 36 games with 29 starts and hitting .283 with 10 RBI and six doubles. Following the season, Fettes graduated and moved into the high school coaching ranks in his hometown of Detroit.

Now in 2016, Arnold, along with freshman Kole Cottam, and sophomore Troy Squires, will look to anchor the catching position, with the experience gained over his first three seasons key in Arnold's approach this season.

"Going into this year, I knew it was going to be a different role," Arnold said. "I knew I needed to be a leader, a veteran catcher for this team. I just take it day by day and bring energy and show the younger guys. I am not a super vocal guy, but I just try to lead by example out there and maybe inspire some young guys to play hard, which is the way we want to play. I need to be aggressive and set a good example."

After serving a vital role in Henderson's daily work with the pitching staff, and working with UK catching coordinator Keith Vorhoff, Arnold has become an extension of the coaching staff.

"By this point, I can kind of take the words out of (Henderson's) mouth," Arnold said. "I've been fortunate to be able to listen to him for four years. The real thing is to take what he has been preaching to our guys, some guys can overthink those small adjustments, so what I try to do is put my own spin on the adjustments they need to do, but also using his methods. Taking basically what he is saying and trying to make them feel more comfortable or more relaxed in accepting it and implementing the plan."

With Beggs, Cody and Friday-night ace Zack Brown returning to the weekend rotation, it has the Wildcats poised for a big season. And no one has a better view of the dynamic stuff in that rotation than Arnold.

"Obviously you have ZB, who as far as stuff goes, his is some of the best in the country," Arnold said. "His two-seamer at the next level is just going to be a bat breaker. You have a max effort, powerhouse guy in ZB on Friday nights. His stuff is going to be more of the 'here it comes, get ready for it.' Dustin is more of the polished, veteran. His slider and curveball mix is tough for any hitter in the country, considering he can throw them both for strikes and he can throw a really good change-up to lefties. Obviously you saw last year, the command of Beggs is the best of the three. Kyle is just Kyle. You are going to see 95-98 with the ability to throw a curveball. Gosh he has developed that curveball so much. It is going to be a weapon for him. With two strikes, or in any point in the count, we can go to that now, as opposed to last year when it wasn't that sharp. He is going to be one of the best pitchers in the country."

Arnold joins a veteran senior class that features Beggs, Cody, Dylan Dwyer, Zach Strecker, Bo Wilson and Dorian Hairston, a large number of seniors in today's era of college baseball.

"Our senior class is very welcoming to the younger guys," Arnold said about the leadership impact of his class. "Since we are such a close-knit group of guys, it is good that we are able to make the freshmen feel welcome, so they can make that adjustment easier. You will see that in our younger guys, they are playing comfortably and to me that is one of the biggest things on a baseball field, is to have fun while you are competing. Our senior class really does a good job of making guys feel comfortable on a baseball field."

UNKNOWNSGONE, BEGGS READY FOR SENIOR YEAR

It wasn't until a matchup against No. 6 Vanderbilt in May of 2015 that Kentucky right-hander Dustin Beggs knew he belonged among the elite.

Beggs, a 6-foot-2, 200-pounder, entered the start vs. Vandy with a sparkling 6-2 record and a 2.84 ERA as UK's Saturday stud. But his strong performance against the eventual College World Series runner-up signaled he could beat anyone.

The native of Roswell, Ga., fanned 12 over eight strong innings in a UK win. It marked the fourth consecutive time he had worked at least eight innings in a quality start, including road outings at Arkansas and No. 5 Florida.

"That was an eye-opening experience," Beggs said. "It gave me confidence that I belong here and I can do this."

It was a highlight in a strong season for a pitcher who, despite being selected in the 33rd round out of Centennial High School in 2012, opened his career in the junior college ranks at Georgia Perimeter College.

During his two-year career at GPC, Beggs excelled under the tutelage of former MLB reliever Brett Campbell, concluding in a 2014 campaign that saw him lead the nation's junior colleges in strikeouts and land a spot at Kentucky.

"He (Brett Campbell) really took a liking to me and wanted to help develop me into a really good pitcher," Beggs said. "Under his leadership it really helped me grow, thrive and have a good sophomore year."

Beggs had a decision to make after his strong 2014 season. He was selected in the 17th round by the St. Louis Cardinals in the MLB Draft and ultimately declined a second offer a professional baseball to pitch at Kentucky.

He immediately stepped into the weekend rotation for the Wildcats, making three consecutive Friday-night starts – including the season lidlifter – before sliding into a successful role as the Saturday starter.

Beggs finished the year as Kentucky's leader in wins (seven), innings (93.2), strikeouts (75) and opponent average (.234), boasting a 3.65 ERA.

Once again, Beggs had a decision to make as the Miami Marlins picked him in the 32nd round of the 2015 MLB Draft. He made the choice before ever being drafted, pledging his commitment to Kentucky and his desire to lift the 2016 Wildcats into a historic season.

"There was a lot of growth to be had," Beggs said. "I talked with Coach Henderson and Coach (Brad) Bohannon before the draft towards the end of the season. They just had faith in me that there is room to grow to set me up to have a major-league career and not just a minor-league career. That has proven to be true that there is room for growth in me, I've seen that in the summer and fall as well."

Beggs, coupled with the return of 2015 second-round pick Kyle Cody – UK's Sunday starter in 2015 – returned the three-man weekend rotation for the Wildcats.

"This team has just incredible potential," Beggs said. "We've known since August that we are going to have a really good team. We have a lot of leadership that can help us thrive and put us in position to be a team that goes to Omaha. We just need to stick to our guns, play our brand of baseball with the right mentality, we will reach our goals."

With junior flame-thrower Zack Brown heading the rotation with a bulldog mindset on Friday, Beggs above-average command inducing weak contact on Saturdays, and Cody's elite fastball-curveball combination on Sunday, it sets up the Wildcats with an elite rotation.

"Dustin is more of the polished, veteran," UK senior catcher Zach Arnold detailed. "His slider and curveball mix is tough for any hitter in the country, considering he can throw them both for strikes and he can throw a really good change-up to lefties. Obviously you saw last year, the command of Beggs is the best of the staff."

Beggs credits lessons learned and the intense work ethic of his weekend mates as instrumental in setting a tone for the pitching staff.

"The main thing Kyle and Zack have is just a desire to get better," Beggs said. "Seeing Kyle and ZB last year and how much they have grown to now, it is just amazing. You look at them, their stuff and say, how can they get better? And then throughout the fall and intrasquads, they have just improved incredibly. Their work ethic and always wanting to get better every day, sets a really good example for the whole staff."

An infectious personality in the clubhouse, he helps set a key example to young pitchers – the ability to control your emotions throughout the highs and lows of baseball – a strength for Beggs.

"I feel like I have a mentality that is flat-lined," Beggs said. "Not really having emotions when things are going well or poorly, being able to use those emotions to focus on taking it one pitch at a time and allow my mentality to spread to the rest of the field as well. Pitchers set the tone because we are involved in every pitch. That is the biggest thing that separates me."

Now a veteran weekend starter in the Southeastern Conference who has experienced the highs and lows of the nation's best circuit, Beggs feels prepared for his final spring collegiate season.

"The biggest thing is the unknown," Beggs said on the differences in his mindset compared to 2015. "Last year in the fall, I was a little more tentative. It has been really good this year, having confidence out there after having had some success."

ZACK BROWN READY FOR 2016

Kentucky junior right-handed pitcher Zack Brown has an electric arm.

There has been no hiding that over his first two seasons.

After feeling his way through the Southeastern Conference in 2014 as a freshman, Brown became UK's Friday-night ace as a sophomore, a role befitting the flame-throwing Brown.

As a star prep shortstop and pitcher in Indiana, Brown set the Seymour High School record with a 0.54 single-season ERA as a senior.

He was selected in the 38th round of the 2013 MLB Draft by the Chicago Cubs, before electing to attend Kentucky to further his development.

During his collegiate debut, Brown was used in 19 games with five starts, showing glimpse late in the season that he was capable of pitching on the weekends.

He starred in 2.1 shutout innings at No. 9 Louisville, before making his first career SEC start at Georgia in the regular-season finale. But it was his performance in the NCAA Louisville Regional semi-final that pushed him to the next level in the offseason. He pitched UK to the win over Kansas with five innings for his first career win.

Brown, a 6-foot-2, 200-pounder, finished his freshman season with a 1-1 record and a 5.65 ERA in 28.2 innings, striking out 18 and walking 11. After the season, he worked in 36 innings in the Perfect Game League, setting himself up for a breakout sophomore season.

Brown immediately went into UK's weekend rotation in 2015, joining fellow laser-armed right-hander Kyle Cody and command artist Dustin Beggs.

He shined as UK's Friday-night starter, owning a 6-6 record and a 3.48 ERA, leading the SEC with his three complete-games and two complete game shutouts. Over 93 innings, Brown allowed only 87 hits, walking 38 and striking out 71.

After he tossed eight shutout innings in a 3-0 series-opening win at No. 5 Florida, Brown was named SEC Pitcher of the Week. Three weeks later, with UK's season on the line, he threw a complete-game shutout in a 1-0 win at Missouri on the season's final weekend.

"I would say that I had two really good starts that I can vividly remember, Florida and Missouri, but I remember the bumps in the road too, Vanderbilt, Texas A&M, Arkansas," Brown said. "Those failures are going to help just as much as the victories. Looking back at those games, I feel like I have grown in the areas I need to and I'll be able to make sure the negatives don't happen as often this year."

After a career-high workload, Brown – who had opportunities to pitch for the USA Collegiate National Team for his own Coach Gary Henderson or in the Cape Cod League – elected to stay in Lexington during the summer.

"It was good to be here, taking classes but get healthy was the main thing, and continue to get stronger," Brown said. "That has really been crucial for me. It was great to just being here with the guys. We knew what we needed to do over the summer, we took into account our goals for the season and I think it served us well."

Now entering his junior season, Brown is now longer just an electric arm. Sure he can run his fastball into the high 90s, but it has been his development in the mental approach that has spurred success.

"It was all physical for me when I got here. I had no idea about the mental side of pitching," Brown said. "Coach Henderson is obviously one of the best in the country at emphasizing the mental approach, which is definitely what I needed. Fulfilling the role that I did last year, coming in this year with a year of experience, it is an immense difference from last year to now. It is not just the two and a half years I have been here, I've has grown a lot in the past 12-16 months."

Kentucky's biggest two recruits in 2016 came in the form of Beggs and Cody, a pair of seniors who elected to postpone professional baseball for a final run at college baseball.

"It instills confidence in everyone," Brown said about the return of Beggs and Cody. "We feel it in the locker room, out on the field. People are going to play as hard as they can behind us because they know we are going to keep them in the game. Having Kyle and Dustin back, it is huge, not only for the team but for myself to keep pushing myself to get better, and also push them. We are going to push each other as much as we can and keep getting better."

The trio allows UK to return its entire weekend rotation, and each pitcher has only improved over the fall and preseason.

"Well they've all gotten better and that's not an opinion, that's a fact just in terms of pure ability to grade out their pitches," Henderson said. "The next step for Kyle (Cody) and Zack (Brown) is staying emotionally intact with what the process of pitching will allow them to do. They will both get better through the first month of the season."

In terms of his stuff, Brown has worked to refine his breaking ball, while implementing a change-up.

"I probably threw 15 change-ups all of last year," Brown said. "It has become a lot better and more consistent. The curveball, just shortening it up and throwing it in any count, early and not just as a two-strike pitch. I am going to be more of a three-pitch mix this year because of the growth in the change-up."

Henderson knows the mental approach is a key to the development of his weekend pitchers, as well as refining their arsenal of weapons on the mound.

"(Brown and Cody) have really, really good arms, very good," Henderson said. "The command of the secondary stuff for both of them has improved dramatically in the bullpen. The next step is to bring those pitches into a competitive environment, especially out of the stretch, with two guys on and the count is 2-1. Now we are challenged. That is where the game is really played. That is when you are going to make your money pitches. If we can get those guys to really buy in to the value of that and not revert to, 'I'm going to throw the next pitch through the brick wall.' Which you see a lot of in college baseball. That is where you are going to see their growth. They know that. This is not a new conversation for those guys. They know what the challenges are and they will get there. It won't be perfect but they'll get there. Because they care, they work hard, they are great kids and they want to be successful."

Now that he has a year of experience, pitching under the bright lights in the SEC, Brown is more prepared for the role.

"My mindset is a lot different than this time last year," Brown said. "Coming into last year, I didn't really know what my role was going to be on the team. Whether it would be starting or coming out of the bullpen. Now, I feel like I have defined my role on the team. Proving that role and leading the team in the right direction is going to be a big thing. After last season, I feel like I still have a lot to prove."

CARSON FIGHTS THROUGH ADVERSITY

Baseball, played at its highest level, is a game of failure.

No Kentucky baseball player in 2015 learned that lesson more than outfielder Marcus Carson.

The pride of London, Ky., Carson opened his sophomore season 0-for-17.

He waited until UK's 14th game of the year, in the second month of the season, for his first hit.

"Last year was a big learning experience for me," Carson said. "The first three weeks I didn't have a hit. I had some hard hit balls but they just didn't fall. (Offensive coordinator Rick) Eckstein always tells us to trust the process not the result. That is hard thing to learn because everybody wants to get hits."

As a star, two-sport, high school athlete at North Laurel High School, failure was something new to Carson. He finished his senior season with a .534 batting average, setting school career marks in average (.447) and hits (231).

As a freshman in 2014, Carson didn't exactly struggle in his chances. He hit .364 in 33 at-bats, over 25 games and four starts – including the opening-day start in leftfield – but was behind star Austin Cousino in centerfield.

"Coming in as a freshman, I played behind Cousino," Carson said. "I knew I wouldn't get a lot of opportunity but I took my freshman year as a way to pick Cousino's brain. Just about outfield tips and anything really, just getting advice from him helped."

A 5-foot-8, 170-pound sparkplug, Carson stepped into a more prominent role as a sophomore. With junior Kyle Barrett taking over for Cousino in centerfield, Carson spent the year fighting for playing time as a part-time starter.

He served as the designated hitter in the season opener, before starting on what could be a crippling slump for young players facing the rigors of the Southeastern Conference.

A player who earns constant praise from the coaching staff for his competitiveness, Carson fought out of the slump and back into the lineup. He credits his work with Eckstein in the drastic turnaround.

"Eckstein has done amazing things for me," Carson said. "He is one of the best coaches I have ever had. He sees the game different than normal people see the game. The things he says blows my mind, which has helped take my game to a different level mentally and physically."

He finished March with three consecutive multiple-hit games, including three-hit games at No. 1 LSU, leading UK to the series win at Alex Box Stadium.

After ripping an RBI double in the SEC Tournament, Carson finished the year with a .226 average, with four doubles, five RBI, seven walks and five stole bases. He played in 35 games with 22 starts, sporting a .283 average after collecting his first hit of the year.

Now as a junior, Carson is prepared to fight for another opening-day start. With Barrett and hit-machine Ka'ai Tom graduated to professional baseball, there are openings in the UK outfield.

Carson, fellow junior Storm Wilson, and senior Dorian Hairston provide UK experienced options, with newcomers Tristan Pompey and Zach Reks giving the lineup flexibility.

"A lot of times there is that pressure the second year, no question," UK head coach Gary Henderson said about Carson's struggles as a sophomore. "You get a taste of it, have a good start and put a lot of pressure on yourself that second year. What we would really like from Marcus is the ability to be consistent, hit line drives and pressure the defense, and defensively, to catch doubles and triples."

The challenges of fighting through adversity as a sophomore will only help Carson grow as a player. That experience, combined with a furious work ethic, have him prepared for what lays ahead.

"It all goes back to my parents," Carson said about how he learned his work ethic. "My dad wakes up at 4 a.m. and goes to work, gets off at 1 or 2 p.m. If he needs to he would go in at 1 or 2 a.m. just to be able to come to one of my games. Seeing that work ethic growing up makes me want to be the same, a hard worker. Everyone has nothing but praise for my dad, which has really rubbed off on me in my work ethic."

The pride of his hometown, Carson's success is heard throughout Laurel County.

"London means the world to me," Carson said. "It's a small town. Not a lot of athletes, or people in general, get a lot of opportunity. I always know that they are behind me. It means a lot to me to know that I have a whole community behind me and wanting to see me succeed. If you would have told me growing up that I was going to be a D1 player at the University of Kentucky, I would have said no way. God has just truly blessed me to be in the position that I am."

3-PITCH CODY RETURNS FOR SHOT AT OMAHA

When Kentucky right-hander Kyle Cody got to Lexington in 2013, he worked almost exclusively off a fastball.

This was just fine, because it's a very good fastball.

A 6-foot-7, 245-pound flamethrower, Cody was the Wisconsin Gatorade High School Player of the Year as a senior in Chippewa Falls, Wis., where he was drafted in the 33rd round in 2012.

Since he joined the Kentucky program, Cody has been a fixture on the UK pitching staff. His hard work and dedication has led to legitimate development of a second and third pitch, adding a devastating breaking ball and a quality change-up to his arsenal, which is of course highlighted by that upper 90s fastball.

"I have gained control of my three pitches," Cody said about his pitch development over four years. "When I got here I barely had a secondary pitch. I have a really good out pitch now. I did not even have a change up in high school, but now I can throw one in a 2-1 count. It makes the game a lot easier and lowers my pitch count."

As a freshman, Cody established himself as a weekend starter late in the year, sporting a 3-3 record and a 4.84 ERA in 57.2 innings.

Cody battled a minor injury that limited him to relief midway through his 2014 season. He missed a month, before returning to a fastball-only relief role as he worked his way back to 100 percent. Nonetheless, Cody finished with a 4-0 record and a 2.84 ERA, with five saves to lead the team.

After serving as the starting pitcher in the 2014 Cape Cod League All-Star Game, Cody entered 2015 off a dynamic summer. He got off to a strong start, which featured seven no-hit innings in week three, earning Southeastern Conference Pitcher of the Week honors.

"The seven inning no-hitter against Nebraska-Omaha stands out," Cody said. "It is probably the best outing in my career."

After a tough stretch over six outings in late March and April, Cody turned it around. He rolled off three dominating starts to end the year and push the Wildcats into the postseason. He carried a shutout into the ninth inning vs. Georgia, fired 5.2 innings vs. No. 5 Vanderbilt and worked seven shutout innings in a series rubber match at Missouri.

As a draft-eligible junior with a coveted fastball and frontline frame, Cody was picked in the second round of the 2015 MLB Draft, going No. 72 overall to the Minnesota Twins.

After a negotiating with the Twins during the summer, Cody elected to return to Kentucky for his senior season. He joins fellow righty Dustin Beggs as a senior to return to school after being drafted, and gives UK its second consecutive season with the same rotation.

With its weekend starters returning, Kentucky enters the season ranked No. 25 by Baseball America. The starters and a veteran bullpen will be tested throughout the year and will be leaned on to provide leadership to some young talents on the pitching staff.

"Last year I was a little more immature," Cody said. "I was not ready for that role. This year we have a group of guys that want to lead more and that makes me want to lead more too. The younger guys want to follow and it makes it easy."

Cody has formed a quality relationship with Henderson after working with the pitching mind for four years. As a senior, there has been a unique trust and bond formed.

"He has really been laid back and let me make my own adjustments," Cody said. "We have a good relationship. We trust each other and we can communicate about anything. If I feel something during a game, I can tell him what tendencies I see and he gives me feedback about it."

UK's senior standout is poised for a strong season but has only team-focused goals in mind.

"The most important to me is working nonstop to be the best team UK has ever had, and going to Omaha," Cody said. "That is where I think we are headed."

THE WALL WINS: DWYER LEARNS FROM INJURY

Dylan Dwyer was having a solid sophomore season.

The Kentucky left-handed pitcher had made several spot starts in Southeastern Conference play, posting wins over Missouri and at Texas A&M, in addition to a complete-game shutout of Cincinnati in midweek action.

"I would say Cincinnati, Texas A&M, and Missouri, were big for me," Dwyer said. "My first (SEC) start, Missouri, I got the win and that was pretty awesome. I will also always remember (Austin) Cousino throwing the guy out at the plate to end the inning. I felt that changed the momentum and I remember how pumped up I was."

It was the regular-season finale at Georgia, with Kentucky competing to secure a spot in the NCAA Tournament, when Dwyer's sophomore season ended.

He came off the mound after allowing a pair of earned runs in an inning vs. the Bulldogs and did what many a player has done over the years, punched a clubhouse wall. His hand was broken, ending his promising 2014 season before he could pitch in the postseason.

"It was immature. I let emotions get the best of me," Dwyer reflected. "Now I give myself a little breather and think about the consequences of what I am about to do."

With UK needing to take a full 27-man roster to the SEC Tournament immediately following the game, Dwyer and Kentucky's legendary academic advisory, Michael Stone, hopped in a rental car and drove back to Lexington from Atlanta.

An infectious personality to all he encounters, Stone knew how Dwyer was feeling. He knew the lefty wanted to take back an emotional reaction.

"Michael Stone and I are extremely close," Dwyer remembered. "The first hour there was not much said. He let me have my time to think and then talked a little. He of course has his jokes and they cheered me up. We were close before that and now we are very close. He took time out of his own life to help me out and it really means a lot to me."

After rehabbing all summer, Dwyer returned to the mound as a key member of the UK relief corps as a junior. He appeared in 16 games, with a 2-0 record and a 3.03 ERA, fanning 26 in 29.2 innings.

Dwyer, a native of Murray, Ky., and a product of Calloway County High School, then appeared in 12 games in the highly competitive Northwoods League over the summer, striking out 37 in 59.1 innings.

Over his career, Dwyer has done it all for the UK pitching staff. He has appeared in 44 games with 10 starts, owning an 8-3 record and a 4.50 ERA over 102 innings. In addition to his starts, Dwyer has been used in long-relief, middle innings, to get a key lefty out, or to finish off a game in his career.

"It allows me to get in the game more, and it allows (Coach Henderson) to have someone that he can put in, in any situation," Dwyer said. "I have been in a lot of different situations and will be ready for anything. We have guys that can be put in at any time, for any situation. The versatility and experience of this group is going to help a lot this season."

Now a senior, Dwyer has formed a special bond with UK's seven-man senior class, which features his close friend, Kyle Cody, who elected to return to UK for a final season in 2016, and is poised for a big year.

"I have been with Kyle since day one and so I have known him for four years now," Dwyer said. "He has really changed his body this year. He has changed the way he has eaten and worked really hard in the weight room. You can really tell how he has grown on and off the field and it has been fun to watch."

HAIRSTON BECOMES LINEUP FORCE

This offseason has been a new experience for Kentucky outfielder Dorian Hairston.

A product of Lexington's Tates Creek High School, Hairston spent his first two seasons fighting to find his place in the lineup.

After a highly productive 2015, that saw him belt four homers in Southeastern Conference play, Hairston enters 2016 a vital senior in Kentucky's lineup.

"This offseason it was a fantastic experience for me, after playing last year, because you get difference feedback in the spring than you can from the fall," Hairston said. "The feedback I got from being an everyday guy midway through the season allowed me to go into the fall with a focus on different aspects of my game. Then I extended that into the offseason. The mental approach, probably being the biggest thing I have been working on. Confidence and making sure that I am walking into a game knowing that I should be there instead of questioning it like I would do when I was younger. That has been the main focus."

Hairston, a 5-foot-11, 210-pound right-handed hitter, played in only six games with one start as a freshman in 2013. He fought his way into the lineup more as a sophomore, hitting .400 in 17 games and four starts in 2014.

Despite boasting a .333 average as mostly a part-time player, it was a series rubber match at No. 1 LSU in 2015 when Hairston established himself as a force in the UK lineup.

The first two games of the series with the top-ranked Tigers were unpredictably thrilling at Alex Box Stadium. A UK win in 11 innings in the opener set the stage – with Hairston contributing a double and steal – before LSU evened the series with an inside-the-park homer from its slow-footed, power hitting catcher in game two.

Hairston smashed Jake Godfrey's first pitch of the second inning in the finale over the right-centerfield wall, giving Kentucky an early lead in an eventual 12-10 win over 12 innings.

After that at-bat, things changed for Hairston. He found himself starting 26 of UK's final 28 games and hit fifth in the order 25 times. Over his final 98 at-bats, Hairston belted four homers and had three doubles.

"There is a little bit of a surprise with Dorian (emerging as a key hitter) but there wasn't a lot, and I'll tell you why," UK head coach Gary Henderson said at preseason media day. "(Former UK hitting coach) Brian Green told me when Dorian got here he was going to end up hitting balls hard. And when Rick (Eckstein) got here he told me the same exact thing."

Hairston shined against the best as a junior, posting a .318 (27-for-85) average in SEC play with a .518 slugging and a .376 on-base percentage, stealing five bases.

"Really two things about Dorian improved offensively," Henderson detailed. "His ability to damage mistakes has gotten better, no question, and so has his ability to fight off secondary pitches. We are not looking for guys to be above-average curveball hitters and below-average fastball hitters, that's not the plan. But if you can fight off a secondary pitch and get to that next fastball, then that puts you in position to do damage and that is what he does a good job of. The game has started to slow down a little bit for Dorian. He is certainly going to be counted on to provide offensive production for us, no doubt about it."

Over his career, Hairston has worked diligently with Green and Eckstein in changing his approach. A former star centerfielder locally, Hairston has been learning that he doesn't need to focus on a pull-only approach.

"Coach Eckstein has been huge in my development as a player," Hairston said. "He has pushed me further and harder than I have ever been pushed in the game. He holds me accountable in a way I've never experienced from other coaches. He believes in me and makes sure that I also believe in myself, simultaneously. His views on hitting and his approach have given me a lot of freedom at the plate. He has identified what we really well and he wants to continue to put us in a position to do it very well. We are not going to try to mold you into a hitter that you are not. This is your key, this is your gift – use it – and we are going to give you the tools to do that. The confidence and the freedom that I have at the plate is a direct result of what he has done in the last year and a half that I have spent with him."

As that laser homer at to centerfield at LSU can attest, Hairston has the ability to drive the baseball to all fields.

"Yes, with confidence. It is better. No question," Henderson said about Hairston's ability to go the other way. "The ability to stay gap-to-gap when the pitch gives you that, not to force it, not to necessarily hunt the right-center gap, but to take it when that is given to you, is improved. He has done a very nice job. He is like a lot of guys, if you can get them to play to your strengths, minimize and understand your weakness, then you have a chance to have a really good player. Let's not spend a lot of time worried and boohooing over what we can't do, let's hone in and focus on what we can do. You put then in a position to maximize his strengths and I think Dorian is in a position to do that."

Among the highlights for Hairston in 2015 came in key homers at Arkansas and vs. Vanderbilt and Georgia. He ranked as UK's third-best hitter against top-25 foes, sporting a .315 mark.

A pair of moments, unrelated to offense or defense, will also be forever etched in Hairston's memory from 2015.

His younger brother, Devin, earned the everyday shortstop job for the Louisville Cardinals as a true freshman. That set up a pair of brother-against-brother matchups, which helped to further spice up a unique rivalry. It marked the first time the brothers had ever been on opposing teams.

Louisville won both meetings, giving Devin bragging rights. UK held Devin to a 0-for-5 performance in the two games, with Dorian making a catch of his younger brother's line drive in rightfield in the second meeting of the series. Dorian finished 2-for-9 with a double vs. Devin's Cardinals in 2015.

"That was a great experience for me," Hairston said. "Growing up we played baseball and basketball on the same teams. We've played baseball, basketball and football in the backyard against each other so that wasn't the first experience I've had playing against him, but it was the first experience I've had playing him in organized activity. Seeing him become an everyday starter brings a lot of joy to me. To be able to come in as a freshman and to end up as the starting at shortstop for one of the best teams in the country, they almost made it to the College World Series – I was pulling for them at the end of the season – for him to be a huge part of what they were doing made me very proud as an older brother."

Hairston joins a talented outfield cast in 2016, including juniors Marcus Carson and Storm Wilson, and newcomers Trey Miller, Tristan Pompey and Zach Reks. The six each has the ability to play centerfield, or either outfield corner, giving Henderson and Eckstein lineup versatility.

HEADY MORE POLISHED IN THIRD YEAR

A decorated in-state athlete from Oldham County High School, Connor Heady joined the Kentucky baseball team as a star member of the 2014 recruiting class.

As a key member of USA Baseball's U-18 National Team in 2012, Heady brought strong qualifications into his freshman season in 2014.

A six-foot, 180-pound right-handed hitting shortstop, Heady also brought a toolsy package to UK, featuring elite athleticism, a strong defensive skill set and a line-drive approach at the plate. He was rated as the 38th best freshman in college baseball in the preseason by Baseball America.

There is no substitute for experiencing the Southeastern Conference however, especially for a middle-infield talent in Heady.

Heady made 19 starts and played in 30 games as a freshman, making 11 starts and second base and eight at shortstop. He was limited to a .133 average (8-for-60) with three doubles and 10 RBI, fielding .940 defensively.

After the graduation of three-year starting shortstop Matt Reida from the 2014 club, Heady took over the majority of the shortstop duties for the Wildcats in 2015.

He played in 51 of UK's 55 games, making 50 starts at shortstop. Heady finished with a .211 average (32-for-152) with 27 runs, two doubles, two homers and 11 RBI. He sported a 21-25 walk-strikeout ratio and an admirable .355 on-base percentage.

A highlight for Heady came in four games – three in March and one midweek tilt in May – when he squared off against his brother, Quint's Northern Kentucky squad. Connor had hits in each game against NKU, leading UK to a 4-0 mark against his older sibling.

"That was cool," Heady remembered. "That was the first time we've actually ever played against each other because we have always been on the same team. It was really fun, I enjoyed that experience and it was something neither of us with ever forget."

Defensively up the middle, Heady struggled early in 2015 in replacing the hard-nosed Reida. He made 16 errors in his first 28 games of the year, with the team fielding .961.

"I struggled early in the spring and put too much pressure on myself," Heady said. "Pressure is a good thing, it keeps you dialed in and focused. I let it get the best of me. I had some talks with my dad, the staff, and stepped back and looked at it from a man's perspective. I needed to go harder and I needed to push myself harder on these specific things, physically and mentally. I finally got to the point where I was comfortable at shortstop, was consistent and felt like nothing was going to get through. I got to that point towards the end of the year, cleaned everything up, my feet and hands were working better."

Heady fought through the adversity and finished strong in the field, committing just four errors over his last 23 games, with UK sporting a .979 fielding percentage during the stretch.

At the plate, Heady had a strong April, belting a key homer in a win at No. 5 Florida and collecting a 3-for-3 game vs. No. 6 Vanderbilt behind a Dustin Beggs pitching win.

He spent 34 games in the Northwoods League following UK's 2015 season and entered UK's fall with a renewed approach on focusing on his fundamentals.

"I've made some mechanical changes with my swing, lowering my hands, pushing them back a little more," Heady said. "I've been able to get to some more strength with my feet and legs. That has helped with the confidence part. Conquering that part of the game when you are fundamentally sound, it has allowed me to be able to work with Coach (Rick) Eckstein to refine what I need to do for this team. Really trying to drive the ball more, thinking right, left center, thinking through the middle and elevating the ball more. As a freshman and sophomore I was just focused on doing whatever I could do to get on base, had a lot of singles and have shown glimpses of power. I have become a much more consistent player in driving and squaring up baseballs."

Heady, who has always been blessed with an ability to dazzle with a jaw-dropping defensive play, is in a better mental position to succeed consistently as a junior, after the experience of the ups and downs of his first two seasons.

"Coming in as a freshman, you have a perspective of your abilities, and that is great you need to know where you stand, but you haven't gone through the SEC," Heady said. "You haven't played a full 56 games, plus postseason, and you don't have that perspective. No matter how much the coaches and team try to bring you along, you have to go through it. For me, I've had to go through it twice now to really feel comfortable and learn how to prepare myself in the offseason, fall and winter, all to get me to a position where I am now where I am prepared with my skills offensively and defensively. I do feel like I can relax, not from a working hard perspective, but just to take a little pressure off, be comfortable in my position in the box and what I need to do to set myself up to be successful."

During the fall, Heady worked diligently with Eckstein, the former hitting coach for the Washington Nationals, who has helped refine his approach and tap into his offensive ability.

"Eckstein has made a big difference in my game and has made a big difference in a lot of players at Kentucky," Heady said. "He has really allowed me to focus on the mental side of the game. He gives each player the freedom to define what we want with our career and how we want to go about our business. It allows me to go to work, define who I want to be as a player and as a person. He has taught me a lot of life lessons through the game of baseball, through failures, success. He has made a big difference in my career. Glad he is here and came to us from the big leagues."

Heady has spent the preseason battling for a spot in UK's middle infield, along with sophomores Riley Mahan and Trey Miller, and newcomers Luke Becker and Zeke Lewis. With preseason All-America slugger JaVon Shelby switching to third base, there has been no shortage of competition for the vacant roles.

"We have a lot of guys that can play all over the diamond, which is unique to have a team that has so many guys that can play anywhere," Heady said. "We've done a good job this fall of trying out new positions, new places to play so that when it comes to game time and someone's number gets called, it is not going to be a surprise, or have anyone caught off guard."

Now as a seasoned junior, who has seen the highs and lows in the nation's best league, is prepared to help lead Kentucky back to the NCAA Tournament after a one-year hiatus. A big boost in that goal came in July, when right-handed weekend starters Dustin Beggs and Kyle Cody elected to postpone their professional careers to return to Kentucky for their senior years.

"On the weekend, in the SEC, when you have those three guys on the mound (Zack Brown on Friday), we have a lot of confidence," Heady said. "They each have a great mound presence and you can count on them to go out and compete. It has been awesome playing behind those guys, especially last year. It is unusual that you get to play behind the same three guys on the weekend for another year. It is just a joy to be able to play with those guys and we are going to have a lot of success behind them this year."

LOGUE A STRIKE-THROWING MACHINE

When Kentucky right-handed pitching stars Dustin Beggs and Kyle Cody turned down the 2015 MLB Draft and elected to return to school for their senior seasons in July, it was a huge boost to the program.

Combined with junior righty Zack Brown, it allowed the Wildcats to return their entire weekend rotation for 2016.

There was one consequence of the return of the seniors however, it bumped sophomore southpaw Zach Logue out of the potential 2016 weekend rotation, after he showed signs of brilliance as a freshman.

“Sure,” UK head coach Gary Henderson said when asked if Logue was going to be in the rotation before the return of Beggs and Cody. “Then you are wondering who the third one is going to be. Just from that standpoint in and of itself, I am going to be a much better pitching coach than I would’ve been if those two (Dustin Beggs and Kyle Cody) were playing professional baseball. That is the nature of what we do and how it works. But absolutely, and (Zach) will be moving forward.”

The ultimate team player, Logue welcomed the return of the veteran righties.

“Obviously for the program it is great that Dustin and Kyle came back,” Logue said. “They add experience and some really quality arms to our staff. For me, I am just trying to do anything I can to help the team. Obviously, I would love to be a weekend starter, but this year if it means coming out of the bullpen, throwing midweek games, or anything like that – we have a team that can make a real push in the postseason – I am just glad to help that.”

A product of Mason, Ohio, Logue showed a versatile ability to fill any role on a pitching staff as a freshman in 2015. Over 19 appearances, Logue made three starts with a save, a 2-2 record and a 5.18 ERA. He threw 33 innings, allowing 38 hits and only seven walks, striking out 24.

He had several strong outings, including his first career win in midweek action in the home opener, allowing a run in 6.2 innings. But after allowing 12 runs over three outings to end March, Logue was scuffling to figure out his most successful role on the staff.

With UK traveling to Arkansas in a crucial series in conference play, Logue was called on in relief in the rubber match at Baum Stadium. He worked 4.2 innings to keep UK in the game.

“Arkansas was definitely that moment for me,” Logue said on his key outing as a freshman. “I had struggled a little bit before that. But I was able to go out there and give us four strong innings and get some of the best hitters in the nation out. I was able to walk away from that series with a lot more confidence.”

Following the season, Logue starred in the Perfect Game Collegiate League. He was named the PGCBL Pitcher of the Year, owning an 8-0 record and a 2.21 ERA in 10 starts. He fanned 55 in 57 innings, with his last seven starts all going as quality outings.

“The summer was very important to my development,” Logue said. “I had a lot of fun up there with Riley (Mahan), Brad (Schaenzer) and guys from other schools. It was real important for me to go out there and get all of the reps that I needed to throw my offspeed, figure out the rhythm of the game and develop all of my pitches.”

As a high school star at Moeller in Cincinnati, Logue teamed in the PGCBL with UK sophomore shortstop Riley Mahan, his childhood best friend. Mahan also had a breakout summer, earning the starting shortstop job in the PGCBL All-Star Game.

“Riley and I have been playing on the same team since at least eighth grade and sporadically before that as well,” Logue said. “I’ve always just kind of had Riley back there behind me at shortstop. It is real comfortable for me to have him back there and it was great to have him back there over the summer. For each other, we are someone that we can go to if we are struggling. It is always a safe place for us to go and it is also great to share this experience with my best friend as well.”

The relationship between Logue and Mahan, and even sophomore first baseman Evan White – a product of Gahanna, Ohio – is a unique aspect of Kentucky’s program.

Another bond that has blossomed over the two years Logue has been on campus has been the relationship with Henderson, his knowledgeable pitching coach.

“Coach Hendu and I have a pretty tight relationship,” Logue said. “He knows that I work hard and am coachable. And if he tells me something I am going to try and incorporate it what I am doing. He knows he can trust me, with classes and everything, so that furthers the relationship. He knows he can have an honest conversation with me. He doesn’t have to sugar coat anything. He can just tell me what we need to do and how we are going to work towards getting better.”

MAHAN REFINES MENTAL APPROACH

Trailing by a run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning of a series-deciding finale at No. 1 LSU, Kentucky turned to freshman Riley Mahan to pinch hit.

In the midst of a 1-for-8 skid, Mahan was seeking to keep the game alive and find a way on base.

"I came up to the on-deck circle, took a deep breath and looked around and thought to myself, 'this is one of the coolest things I have ever gotten to do,'" Mahan said. "LSU had a packed house for a Sunday ballgame. I was just thankful for the opportunity. I was going up there being aggressive."

He took a ball to open the at-bat, before punching a shallow pop-up down the leftfield line.

"Not necessarily a line drive like you are hoping, but placed it well and I have always been taught to play hard and run hard at all times," Mahan said. "I took off out of the box running hard and fortunately kept rounding the bases. It was pretty crazy."

LSU leftfielder Jared Foster – who opened the game at second base – extended in an effort to make the game-ending, diving catch. The ball skidded past his glove, however, and rolled to the warning track. LSU All-America shortstop Alex Bregman sprinted to the track, grabbed the baseball but slipped to his rear as he tried to skid to a stop.

"When I rounded second and got near third, I saw (base coach Brad Bohannon)," Mahan said. "I did not believe that he was waving me so I peeked over my shoulder, saw what was going on back there and just took off."

The mistimed jump and Bregman's stumble allowed Mahan to be heroic. A headfirst slide beat a jaw-droopingly close throw from Bregman to even the score at 10-10, shocking 10,732 at Alex Box Stadium.

It was the most exciting moment of the year for Mahan, the former star infielder out of Cincinnati's Moeller High School.

A left-handed hitting shortstop, who drips projection in his lithe 6-foot-2, 190-pound frame, Mahan opened the year with four starts at shortstop in the first two weekends of his collegiate career.

After a 3-for-4 game with a steal in the home lidlifter, Mahan started to get hot while serving as the replacement in the infield at third base, while Evan White returned to health at first base. He took a .326 average into his Southeastern Conference debut at a challenging venue vs. No. 12 South Carolina, fanning three times against USC ace Wil Crowe.

With White back in the lineup, and senior Thomas Bernal shifting back to third, Mahan couldn't maintain a presence in the lineup midway through the year and found himself 0-for-18 heading into the regular-season finale at Missouri.

Bernal suffered a season-ending injury the night before vs. the Tigers and Mahan emerged in the spotlight at third base. He responded with an RBI double, two hits and a walk in helping UK to the series-clinching win. He followed that with a strong performance vs. Auburn in the SEC Tournament.

"It was definitely a roller coaster ride last year," Mahan reflected. "On opening day, when they announced the lineup and my name wasn't on it, it was a big letdown and I could have handled it a lot better in different aspects. I learned throughout the year how to be a team guy and stay positive so when my opportunity comes, when Missouri and the SEC Tournament rolled around, I was just trying to help my team and do my part."

Mahan finished the year with a .232 average (22-for-95), playing in 39 games with 22 starts. He had five doubles, three triples – the thrilling homer – and eight RBI.

Following the season, Mahan starred in the Perfect Game League, teaming with his high school teammate and childhood best friend, UK sophomore Zach Logue, in addition to UK sophomore southpaw Brad Schaenzer. He had a .303 average over the summer, earning the starting shortstop job in the PGCBL All-Star Game.

"It was a blast being able to play some games and get some reps," Mahan said. "It was fun to go up there with Zach and Brad and get to know some of the other guys up there. It was a really good experience to see how people play the game in different ways and their mindset. It was a fun experience."

Logue has had a front-row seat for Mahan's development, as the brother-like duo has played on the same team for over a decade.

"Riley has always been a very gifted athlete and he has definitely changed his body over the last year," Logue said. "But the biggest growth that I've seen in him is his mental game. In high school, he would make an error or something and he could carry it with him throughout the game. Over the last year, I've seen him grow tremendously in that area. If he makes a mistake, it is an aggressive mistake and he is able to put that past him and move on to the next pitch."

Mahan credits his work with UK offensive coordinator Rick Eckstein as being instrumental in his understanding of the importance of honing in on a mental approach.

"It has been huge, there are so many mental things go into this game, obviously," Mahan said. "I've been working with Coach Eck a lot on mental stuff. He has tried to pound it into my head for a while, ever since last year. This year I am starting to come around on that and understanding the points that he has made. It has just put me at a whole different level."

Mahan, a 40th round pick in the 2014 MLB Draft by the San Francisco Giants, is poised for a strong season. After JaVon Shelby shifted to third base in the fall, Mahan has joined in on an infield competition that features junior shortstop Connor Heady and newcomers Luke Becker, Zeke Lewis and Trey Miller.

"We've got four guys, right now as it stands vying for time in the middle," Henderson said at preseason media day. "Two guys at the forefront are the returners. Nothing has been decided and nothing will be decided until we get the season going and see where the first two weekends go. Riley Mahan is a sophomore that you saw play a bunch last year that has developed also physically. He is a better player now than what he finished up the spring season. He had a nice solid summer. Those two guys are at the forefront of what we are doing (in the infield)."

With several talented options in the infield, UK is hoping to have a strong defense that supports a proven weekend pitching staff.

"Having a strong defense is going to be huge," Mahan said. "We all know what our pitching staff is going to be like, so we are going to win games playing defense and our pitching is going to keep us in a lot of ball-games. Our guys take a lot of pride in our defense, knowing that we are back there helping out those pitchers and making plays for them."

SALOW USES TOUGHNESS FOR EDGE ON MOUND

Kentucky southpaw Logan Salow stood on the McKethan Stadium mound looking to retire Florida preseason All-America shortstop Richie Martin in the bottom of the ninth inning and lift his team to a series-clinching win.

The sixth-ranked Gators had rallied with four runs in their final opportunity, and with the tying run on third base and two outs, it was a matchup between Salow and Martin.

Salow threw a first-pitch ball and then evened up the count. With rain pouring for the first time in the game, Martin attempted to lay down a bunt on the third base line. Salow jumped off the mound, scooped up the ball in his right glove and flipped it to catcher Greg Fettes, who applied the tag to finish the win for the Wildcats.

The night before, Salow had entered the game vs. the Gators with the tying run at the plate and two outs in the ninth inning. He delivered by striking out a pinch hitter to secure the win.

"That weekend proved I could do it," Salow said. "You want to be in that situation; Friday, Saturday night, in Florida, on the road with the game is on the line. You come in with adversity. I came in with some tough situations and when it came down to it, the play that mattered I was able to get it. From then on out, it proved that I could pitch against the best ... When you feel that feeling that you can pitch and you belong here, you can really then take that next step in wherever you are in pitching."

That was a key weekend for Salow in his development into one of the top left-handed relievers in the Southeastern Conference as a sophomore.

He finished the year without eye-popping numbers, but his value to the 2015 Wildcats was unmatched. Over 23 appearances, Salow started two games, had a 1-1 record and a 5.32 ERA, with three saves and 27 strikeouts in 23.2 innings.

Following the season, Salow went to the prestigious Cape Cod League to continue his development.

"It is the best summer baseball you can possibly play," Salow said. "If you grow up watching college baseball, you also grow up aspiring to play in the Cape. It is everyone's dream to play in the Cape and it was certainly mine. To be able to get there and be moderately successful - I had my ups and downs - but to learn that I can compete at a high level was really special. It is going to help me this year and going forward."

Salow's arsenal features the ability to throw several pitches for strikes, get swings and misses and induce weak contact. But it is his toughness that keeps earning him key roles over the first two seasons.

"My mental approach has gotten a lot better," Salow said. "Freshman year, I just wanted to be tough, and that was my mentality on the mound. Now I can take that, along with some skills I have developed over the last few years with some pitches, tweaking this and that, and my overall mental approach and the ability to concentrate on each pitch. You put it all together and you get a lot more on the mound than just someone who is going to be tough, grit their teeth, but being able to go out in the situation and execute, instead of hoping for the best."

Salow will look to lead a bullpen that features several returnees, including lefties Dylan Dwyer and Zach Logue and right-handers Zach Strecker and Bo Wilson.

"Our bullpen is full of guys that can come in at any situation, whether it is the beginning, middle or end of the game," Salow said. "That just speaks to our abilities to just come together as a team. Everyone is a starter in high school and the best success is when you can put your ego aside, fit into a role for the team, and we've got a lot of young guys who have just said they want to pitch for this team, doesn't matter when, and that is going to help us from here on out. Especially this year, we have plenty of guys that just want to be on the mound. Being able to come out of the bullpen has really helped us develop as pitchers and not just be limited to one role. If you can do that, you are going to be on the mound a lot more."

SHELBY FAMILY LEGACY LIVES ON WITH JaVON

When JaVon Shelby was 10 years old, there was one way he could get checked out of school early.

Kentucky baseball games at Cliff Hagan Stadium.

His older brother John T., was starring in the UK lineup as a slugging second baseman, which made for a convenient excuse to skip out of school early.

John T. played for the Wildcats from 2004-06 and etched out a permanent place in program history as a fixture on the 2006 Southeastern Conference Championship club. He anchored a lineup that featured SEC Player of the Year Ryan Strieby, helping Kentucky become the first team in SEC history to go from a last-place finish to the league title in the span of two seasons. John T. finished with 33 homers over his UK career, with a .307 average and 131 RBI, before reaching triple-A in the Chicago White Sox system.

JaVon joins his brothers John T. and Jeremy (Grambling State) as collegiate baseball standouts, following in the footsteps of their father, John, who charted 11 years in the big leagues, winning a pair of World Series Titles with the Baltimore Orioles and the Los Angeles Dodgers. John serves as the first-base coach for the Milwaukee Brewers and John T. also serves as a scout with the Brewers.

Ten years later, right back at Cliff Hagan Stadium, JaVon is carving out his own path in UK baseball history.

"I'm just living on the legacy," JaVon said. "My brother did a great job in the early 2000s and hopefully my brother (Jaren) can too. I was sitting down talking to my dad yesterday and was just telling him how good UK has been for our family and how they treat us as a whole. I am just embracing it and taking it one day at a time and enjoying the experience with all the guys, the coaches and our support staff. It makes you just want to rep that Kentucky blue."

Entering 2016 as a consensus preseason All-America selection, JaVon has proven himself as an all-conference second baseman his first two seasons. He was named to the SEC All-Freshman Team in 2014, before earning first-team accolades as a sophomore.

After all that success, JaVon has made a positional change. A player with an ability to play anywhere on the field, he is shifting across the diamond to third base.

"It has allowed me to be more versatile in my game because I've proven I can be a premier second baseman in the nation's best conference," JaVon said. "We have some young players who may fit really well at second base. I am just embracing it and am looking forward to the challenge it is going to bring to me this year."

Over his first two seasons, JaVon led all SEC second baseman in defensive assists, showcasing his range and competitiveness.

"The skill set was well suited for third base," UK head coach Gary Henderson said. "It's clear he's all-league second baseman. So he can certainly do that at a high level. For a number of reasons it made sense to put him over there. He has played well. Nobody is perfect in our game. We are not looking for perfection in the infield. But he is going to be a good player and he is going to do a good job over there. And his arm works well over there at third base."

As a sophomore, JaVon hit .312 (63-for-202) with 12 doubles, two triples, nine homers and 44 RBI. He ranked third in the SEC in OPS in league games, behind only sluggers Andrew Benintendi and Kyle Martin, ripping seven homers and 17 extra-base hits in 29 SEC games.

"JaVon is a physical presence," Henderson said. "Power, obviously he is a very accomplished offensive player."

JaVon, a 6-foot-2, 195-pound right-handed hitter, opened 2015 in exciting fashion vs. Ball State in the season opener, hitting a homer in front of his father for the first time in his baseball career. With John wrapped up in MLB Spring Training and the 162-game regular season throughout his adult life, he hasn't had a bevy of opportunities to watch JaVon's baseball career from the stands.

"He's seen, at the most, 12 of my games, total in my lifetime," JaVon said. "Last year was fun, I just embraced it. I ran into one and dad got it on video. That is going to be a memory that lasts a lifetime."

No player or coach has had a better vantage point for JaVon's development than his prep teammate, and friend for over a decade, UK senior outfielder Dorian Hairston.

"It still shocks me to see some of the things he is able to do on the baseball field," Hairston said. "The place his swing is right now, and the pitches that he is able to turn around, is impressive. JaVon is going to give you the best he's got and the best he's got is really, really good baseball."

JaVon and Hairston join a sizeable class of upperclassmen in 2016, a rare but impactful fact today's college baseball. The veterans will be expected to provide crucial leadership throughout the ups and downs of the SEC.

"We have a group of guys that have been around together for a while," JaVon said. "We knew that when we became juniors, this was going to be our team. Within that group of guys, we can break it up where I can help some of the younger infielders, or ZB (Zack Brown) can help some of the younger pitchers. We love having that role and we will do anything to take this team to the next level."

The youngest of the Shelby brothers, Jaren, is a slugging senior outfielder at Tates Creek High School and signed his National Letter of Intent to play at Kentucky in 2015.

"I'd say Jaren has a different skill set than all of us," JaVon said. "Jaren has the ability to hit a ball 430 feet, at his age, right now. He has lightening bat speed. He just threw 95 mph from the outfield. So Jaren has more plus potential than all of us did at his age."

No matter how JaVon's 2016 season will turn out, Hairston knows it will not change the infectious personality of his longtime buddy.

"JaVon has developed as a player but he is still JaVon. He has always been JaVon," Hairston said. "He has not changed one bit in the 10-12 years I have known him and his family. He has always been JaVon and will always be JaVon."

STRECKER A BULLPEN WORKHORSE

Back in the summer of 2011, after Zach Strecker had concluded his career at Louisville's Eastern High School, he pitched in a summer league.

Strecker thought his baseball career was over after that stint, but his summer league coach, Jim Wiley, thought different. He pushed the 6-foot-4, 225-pound Strecker to attempt to walk-on through tryouts at Kentucky.

Kentucky volunteer assistant coach Keith Vorhoff was charged with walk-on tryouts and immediately spotted the potential in Strecker. The duo, along with manager Ben Jackson, worked together in an effort to see if Strecker had the desire to play collegiate baseball.

"The first month and a half, I wasn't on the team and it was just individual workouts," Strecker remembered. "Just me, Vor and Ben Jackson, and he ran me, did individual workouts, long toss, all stuff I had no idea I could do. He just pushed me, basically to see if I wanted to be a part of it. I give Vor a lot of credit for putting me, and making me who I am and getting me on the team."

That started an unforeseen path for Strecker, who enters 2016 poised to become one of the most used relief pitchers in Kentucky baseball history.

"It has been a crazy ride for me," Strecker said. "I came to UK just to go to school honestly. Jim (Wiley) gave me the courage to try out and honestly, I never expected what has happened. From my freshman year to now is unreal and I credit Hendu (Coach Gary Henderson) a lot for that. He just makes things easy for me to understand. It is unreal how much I have gotten better since freshman year."

He opened his career with a redshirt season in 2012, watching as the Wildcats rolled off a school-record 45 wins and ascended to the program's first No. 1 national ranking. During the redshirt season, Strecker and Henderson worked on refining his arsenal, developing a devastating splitter and improving upon a slider, all working off an upper 80s, low 90s fastball.

"When I first started, I had just learned a slider over the summer, so I didn't really have that at all," Henderson said. "I didn't have a splitter, which I do now. Hendu has worked on those two pitches and they've gotten tremendously better and more consistent."

As a redshirt freshman, Strecker emerged as a consistent performer in Henderson's bullpen. The first outing of Strecker's career came in Spartanburg, S.C., on opening weekend of 2013.

"I remember my first outing here at UK against Niagara," Strecker said. "I threw nine pitches, struck out two. I actually crossed up the catcher a couple of times, I think it was Arnie (Zach Arnold). It was a flawless 1-2-3 inning and it was everything that I had dreamed of."

That first outing signaled that Strecker was ready to pitch for Kentucky. His biggest outing came in an 18 inning matchup with Western Kentucky at Bowling Green Ballpark.

"The biggest ah-ha moment in my early career was the Western game in extras, that 18 inning marathon," Strecker said. "I ended up giving up the walk-off home run but I came in bases loaded and no out and that was kind of a moment that I like to look back on."

He sported a 2.35 ERA and a 1-1 record in 16 games as a redshirt freshman, before appearing in 18 games as a sophomore. In 2015, Strecker became UK's most-used reliever, appearing in 25 games, with a save and a 2-2 record in 30.2 innings.

Strecker earned his second win of the year in a big stage in 2015 at No. 1 LSU, working three innings in relief, allowing just one unearned run.

"That was just a wild weekend to begin with, playing No. 1 LSU. I think I came into a tie game in the ninth and I just wanted to go out there and do what I knew I could do. It wasn't the atmosphere that was intimidating because I had pitched there before my freshman year. It wasn't the fact of 11,000 people screaming at you, it was more the pressure of not letting your teammates down. We had the No. 1 team in the grips and we were able to come through. A lot of lucky breaks along the way for us in that game, the (Alex) Bregman ball that hit his foot, that Connor Hale hit was fortunate."

Strecker will join a talented and veteran bullpen that has the ability to fill a multitude of roles. Submariner Bo Wilson will be joined by Strecker from the right side, with lefties Dylan Dwyer, Zach Logue and Logan Salow poised to make a big impact.

"We have a lot of guys that can fill any role that needs to be done," Strecker detailed. "The lefties can throw to right-handed hitters. The righties can throw to left-handed hitters. We have a bunch of guys that have so much experience in the SEC last season that we have a lot of guys that had great summers as well, they can come in to any role that may give them a challenge and they can do whatever they need to. I trust anyone of our relievers to come in seventh, eighth and ninth bases loaded and get out of it. Any one of us can do it."

Now as a fifth-year leader, Strecker can be spotted in the bullpen instructing the 18-year old true freshmen he once aspired to be. With a seven-man senior class, Strecker's just one of several leadership options for the youthful talents.

"I've grown up with these guys last four years now," Strecker said. "You just get personal and group relationships with all of them. It is just a bond between us that really hasn't been at UK baseball for a few years, probably since that 2012 team, honestly. It is something that really, you can't replace. Everyone has each other's back and everyone is there for each other."

WHITE AN ELITE ATHLETE AT FIRST BASE

Not many teams in college baseball boast an elite athlete playing first base.

Kentucky is in that position with sophomore Evan White, a native of Gahanna, Ohio.

White, a 6-foot-3, 200-pound right-handed hitter who throws left-handed, is a game-changing talent. His prowess defensively as a freshman was unprecedented in Kentucky baseball history.

"We probably have the best first baseman in America. His name is Evan White," UK head coach Gary Henderson said. "He is a very, very good player. He is athletic enough that if we needed to get an extra bat into the lineup we could move him into the outfield. Those of you who watched him last year, you were impressed. He's bigger, he is stronger, he is faster and he is going to be a better player this year. We are really fortunate to have Evan in the program. He is a good player and you are going to enjoy watching him."

He earned Southeastern Conference All-Freshman Team honors in 2015 and was named to the SEC All-Defensive Team.

"Evan is just everything you can ask for," Kentucky sophomore infielder Riley Mahan said. "We are very spoiled to have him over there at first base. Seeing him progress body wise this year is going to be exciting to watch."

As a skinny, projectable freshman in 2015, White hit .318 (69-for-217), showing an advanced ability to collect hits to all fields. He scored 27 runs, had 12 doubles, one triple, two homers and 28 RBI. He finished with a .779 OPS, adding three stolen bases.

He had several strong moments as a freshman, including six hits in three games vs. each No. 1 LSU and Tennessee. A pair of three-hit games and a homer highlighted a huge series at Missouri, helping UK clinch a postseason berth. He also belted a homer at Southern Cal, sailing it over the centerfield fence at historic Dedeaux Field.

Following the season, White – who was slated to go to the Cape Cod League – stayed in Lexington for the summer to focus on building strength to his quick-twitch frame.

"It was definitely huge," White said. "I got to get stronger, heal up my hamstrings and focus on improving my body. It was nice to be able to hit in the cage whenever I wanted too, kind of have more of laid back schedule and really focus on the strength aspect."

He has concentrated on improving his approach at the plate during the offseason and work with UK offensive coordinator Rick Eckstein, the former hitting coach for the Washington Nationals.

"I would say my approach has really matured," White said. "I really know that I need to focus on the pitches that I can handle, instead of trying to go after the pitches that are just going to get me out. It has definitely been something that Coach Eck and I have worked on day in and day out. I am really happy with the process and how things are coming along but there is still a ways to go and I am looking forward to improving as we move forward."

The most noticeable change has been his physicality and the impact it has made on his ability to pepper the outfield gaps with line drives. During the annual UK Fall World Series, White went 11-for-12, capping a fall practice season that saw him hit .394 with a 1.019 OPS in 66 at-bats.

"My very first impression of Evan White was how mature he was as an 18 year old kid," Henderson recalled on his initial meeting with White. "What he has improved the most of since he has been here? He has become a better baseball player just in terms of his skills. The most noticeable thing he has improved is his strength. His body has changed. He is not 172 pounds anymore. He is 195 or 198, probably on his way to 208 in the next 15-16 months. He is stronger. He moves really well. He is really confident. His bat speed is better than it was nine months ago. His knowledge of hitting has improved. His work with Coach Eckstein has been really, really valuable. His work ethic has allowed him to make some really noticeable jumps. He is a very impressive kid."

White, who will have the ability to play centerfield in professional baseball, dazzled with his glove throughout the 2015 season at first base and his value is unquestioned to UK's talented infielders.

"Defense is always something I've taken pride in," White, who played first base in high school and centerfield in high school summer baseball, said. "My dad instilled that in me growing up, so it really sparked from him. It has helped me in other aspects of my game as well, showing you can play both positions, you can do pretty much anything you want to do. It instills a lot of confidence in me. Going forward, it helps me to have that versatility and being able to play both positions at a high level."

His elite athleticism and future position creates an interesting quandary for the bevy of scouts who line the stands at Cliff Hagan Stadium on a daily basis. There will be no shortage of eyes watching whenever White sheds his first base mitt for an outfield glove and heads to the outfield grass, whether it is in batting practice or competition.

White and his UK teammates are excited for the 2016 season, which was boosted significantly by the return of senior weekend starters Dustin Beggs and Kyle Cody.

"It is absolutely awesome playing behind those weekend guys," White said. "Honestly I didn't think I would even get a chance to play behind Beggs and Kyle again, and that is something I am very thankful for. I am really looking forward to it. Those guys are awesome and they are fun to watch pitch. I am glad they are on my team. Being able to work with them in the fall has been a big help to all the offensive guys, because those are some of the best pitchers in the country and those are the types of guys you are going to see night in and night out in the SEC. They've been a big help to this team. They are great leaders as well as great pitchers. It is great to have them back and we are looking forward to playing behind them every weekend."

BO WILSON FINDS ARM SLOT, HOME AT UK

His whole life, Bo Wilson wanted to be just like his father and be an Air Force fighter pilot.

Wilson followed in his father's footsteps after high school in Brandenburg, Ky., going to the Air Force Academy to continue his education and pitch collegiately.

A mechanical engineering major, Wilson spent two seasons at the Air Force Academy, before his dream was crushed. He failed a depth perception test, required for pilots following his sophomore year.

After his junior season, he would have been committed to five years of active duty, for a total commitment of nine years, without the option to become a pilot, his lifelong goal.

With his dream shattered and his goal of following in the footsteps of his father no longer an option, the NCAA granted a waiver that allowed Wilson to transfer to his home-state school, play for the Wildcats immediately, and have two seasons of eligibility remaining.

"It was definitely a dream crushed," Wilson remembered. "That is what I've wanted to do my whole life. That is what my dad did. It was a little bit of a blow at first and it took a few days to let it sink in, think about my options. I definitely could have stayed there, continued studying engineering. There are multiple other jobs in the Air Force that I could have done, but I decided I wanted to come back a little closer to home and study here with my brother as well."

After appearing in 48 games over two years with Air Force, Wilson had a strong fall practice season in 2014 and positioned himself to be a member of the UK bullpen as a junior.

Armed with a low,  $\frac{3}{4}$  arm slot, Wilson was a weapon at the AFA in attacking right-handed hitters. After appearing in his first career SEC game vs. No. 20 Mississippi State, UK head coach Gary Henderson had an idea.

"He brought it up in the spring and we talked about moving to submarine arm slot," Wilson said. "I wasn't very interested at first. When we were at LSU, on Thursday night practice, he called me down to the bullpen and said let's try this. I threw a few pitches and we started focusing on that in the bullpen for a few weeks. I got more and more comfortable with it."

It took Wilson a little over a month to get comfortable with his new delivery, before becoming a major weapon for Henderson and the UK bullpen in late April and into May.

A 5-foot-11, 180-pound right-hander, Wilson appeared in seven games over the remainder of the year, not allowing a run and getting key outs vs. Florida, Vanderbilt, Missouri and Auburn.

Overall, Wilson – who earned consistent praise for his fearlessness and toughness on the bump – had a 0.82 ERA with a save in 11 games in 2015.

"I have always tried to be tough," Wilson said. "My dad and I would talk about that. I've always been undersized, whether its baseball, basketball or football. So you have to be more hard-nosed than the guy across from you. Toughness doesn't get enough credit in pitching. Out at Air Force, I got a good taste of that. I didn't have the best stuff, but if you attack every pitch and every hitter then things usually go your way."

Now as a season veteran of a pair of baseball programs, Wilson will help anchor a UK bullpen in 2016 that features returnees Zach Logue, Dylan Dwyer, Zach Strecker and Logan Salow.

"We return so much experience in the bullpen, and obviously with our whole starting rotation back, that too," Wilson said. "But with so many weapons in the bullpen, we can turn to any guy, on any day, even if a couple of guys are having an off day, our depth is almost endless. It takes a lot of pressure off the rest of the guys. Just go out and perform and do you job."

After experiencing the Southeastern Conference for the first time as a junior, Wilson is more prepared for the grind of the nation's best conference.

"I have a lot better understanding of what to expect," Wilson said. "Coming from the Mountain West to the SEC was a big jump. I thought I had an understanding of it but you can't really wrap your head around it until you are in the middle of it. Now that I know what it is like, that changes my whole approach quite a bit."

Wilson's time at the Air Force Academy helped him grow into a well-rounded, thoughtful and hard-working man who has the utmost respect of his teammates.

"Those years were very integral," Wilson said. "I feel like I was there for a reason, grew as a man. It is a different mindset, being in the military and having a lot more responsibilities. It definitely gives you a different perspective. You get a better idea of the whole world and the part you can play in it."

An interesting dynamic for Wilson arrived in 2016 as well, as his former recruiting coordinator at AFA, Toby Bicknell, replaced Brad Bohannon on the UK coaching staff over the preseason. In addition, another former AFA left-handed hitter Zach Reks has fought his way into the UK outfield rotation with a strong performance in the fall.

"If you would have told me that I would be playing at Kentucky four years ago I would have laughed in your face," Wilson said. "Then much less to say that you, your classmate and teammate, Zach, and then Coach Bicknell are also going to be at Kentucky. I would have said you are crazy. It is a cool dynamic that was unforeseen but very fortunate for us."

STORM DEVELOPING MONSTER MINDSET

Kentucky redshirt junior outfielder Storm Wilson is a worker, a student of the game and a one who is used to constantly tinkering in the batting cage.

Coming off a breakout, all-star summer in the grueling Northwoods League, Wilson is no longer tinkering with the physical aspects of his swing. He is trusting in the process of his work with decorated UK offensive coordinator Rick Eckstein and it has paid off.

During the fall practice season, Wilson led the team in average (.406), on-base percentage (.486), OPS (1.049) and most importantly, line-drive percentage (32%).

"There were very few talks about the physical aspect of my swing this fall," Wilson said. "I want to get to my best swing every time and that is what I focused on. Having that monster mindset, being able to trust the process and not focus on the result. If I strike out, flare a ball or roll over, I can't get upset about that. I have to move on to the next pitch or the next at-bat, be able to take it one pitch at a time, trust in myself and my ability. That is what Eckstein really preaches and it has started to sink in."

Over the summer, Wilson was a monster, both mentally and physically. He hit .304 in 50 games, with 37 runs, 12 doubles, a triple, five homers and 22 RBI, stealing 22 bases and owning more walks than strikeouts. All in the grind of the Northwoods League which is regarded as one of the nation's elite summer leagues and features a jam-packed schedule.

"We had a great group of guys and it was a good experience," Wilson said. "The games, playing that many in that short amount of time, it was tough. It wore down my body quite a bit. They say the Northwoods is about as close to the minor leagues as you are going to get, and I believe it. Traveling every single day gives you a good feel for how it is going to be in professional baseball."

A product of Somerset High School, Wilson emerged as a fixture in the UK lineup as a redshirt freshman in 2014, hitting .289 (37-for-128) in 34 starts, with six doubles, four homers and 20 RBI. This came a year after arriving on campus as a switch hitter and struggling through the challenges of a redshirt season and the switch to a solely left-handed approach.

His summer and fall productivity came after what Wilson would describe as a disappointing sophomore season.

He played in 46 of UK's 55 games, making 39 starts. Wilson hit .242 (32-for-132) with 21 runs, six doubles, two triples, one homer and 16 RBI, owning a 21-24 walk-strikeout ratio and a .379 on-base percentage. Always aggressive on the bases, Wilson stole eight bases in 12 attempts.

"I've grown a lot, not only physically as a baseball player but mentally as well," Wilson said. "Last preseason, I put a lot of pressure on myself. I thought I needed to be the guy to step up and be a big leader and I didn't handle it well. Now, Coach Eckstein and I just talk a lot about being mentally tough and having that monster mindset instead of looking at every single thing you do wrong, micromanaging and over analyzing you self."

"Now, just seeing the big picture and understanding that it is a process and not looking at the results. This preseason has helped me grow a lot in the mental aspect."

His work with Eckstein and former UK hitting coach Brian Green – now the head coach at New Mexico State – has been instrumental in his development.

"Coach Eck and I are very close," Wilson said. "It isn't so much about physically in my swing, it was more about the mental aspect, getting out of my own way and being able to just do it every single day, getting to my potential. Last year, it didn't go my way and Eckstein and I would have countless talks about how to fix it. This year it has been simple, I've grown to where I don't need that constant reminder from him. I am able to do that on a daily basis. He has been unbelievable for me and my growth as a baseball player."

A speedy left-handed hitting outfielder, with an on-base mentality and an ability to slash line drives is a role the Wildcats are in need of after replacing Kyle Barrett and Ka'ai Tom, who have graduated their all-conference pedigrees to professional baseball.

"I finally understand what my identity and role is and I know not to get outside of that," Wilson said. "I am not going to be the guy that hits a bunch of home runs. I am the guy who gets singles, doubles, steals some bases and get on base. If I stick to my role, know what I can do, then my success level is going to increase."

A fourth-year junior, Wilson joins a close-knit group of upperclassmen that includes seniors Zach Arnold, Dustin Beggs, Kyle Cody, Dylan Dwyer, Dorian Hairston, Zach Strecker and Bo Wilson.

"It is a good feeling being able to count on those guys, not just for baseball," Wilson said about his bond with the seniors. "It correlates to baseball as well, to take that mindset of being able to go to war with your guys. It is a unique thing to have a large group of seniors in college baseball and we are going to take advantage of that."

* denotes a walk-off RBI.

* A game-winning RBI is defined as the RBI that forced in the winning run. I.E., Kentucky wins a game 7-6 in nine innings, with the seventh UK run of the game serving as the game-winning RBI, regardless of the inning it occurred.

Shortstop Connor Heady drove in the winning run in UK's series finale vs. No. 20 Mississippi State.

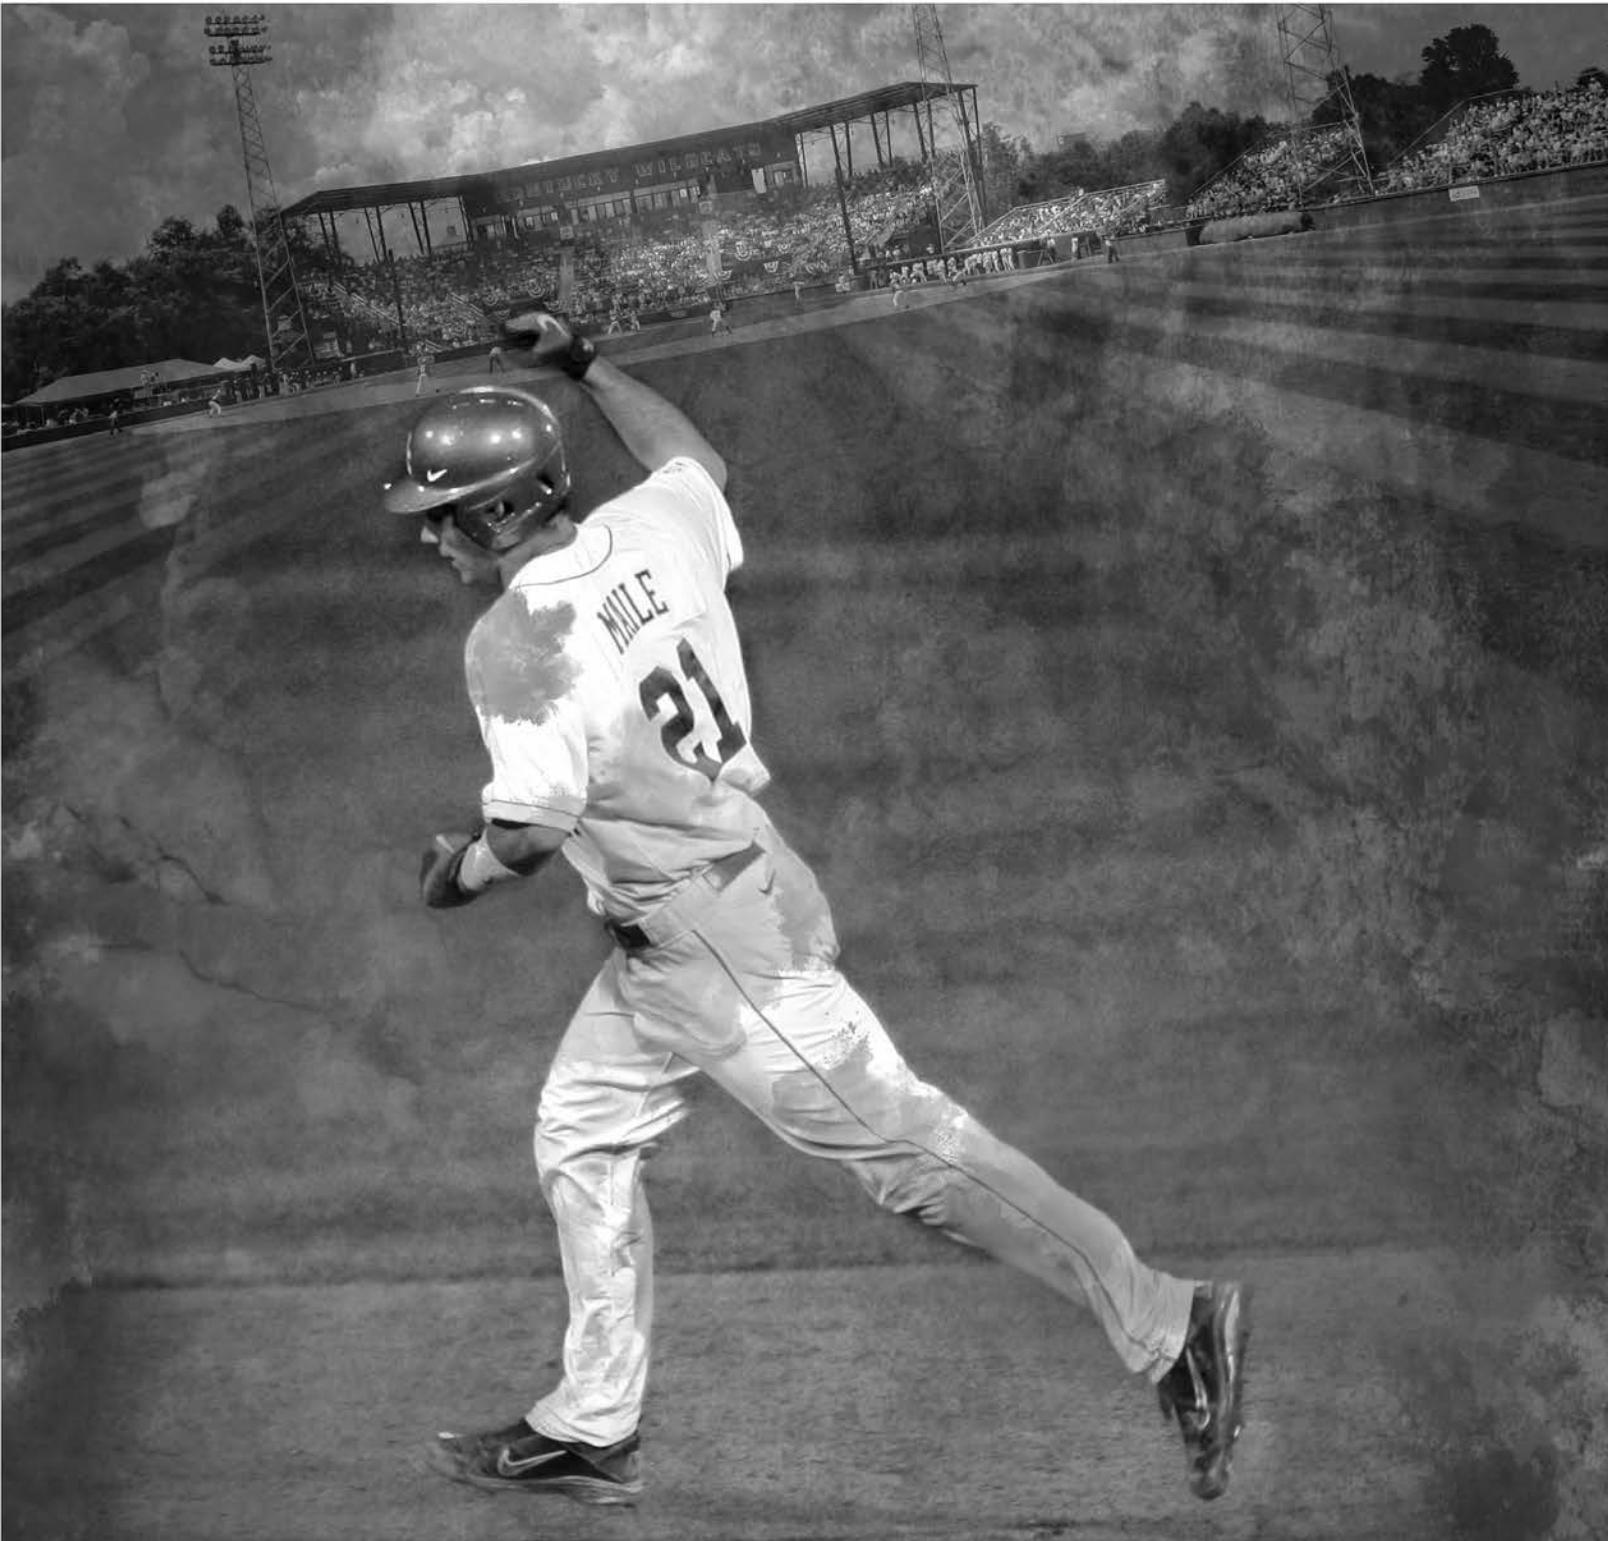

Catch Greg Fettes ripped a seventh inning double that drove home the winning run in a win over Northern Kentucky.

Dorian Hairston's three-run, third-inning home run lifted UK to a series-opening win over Georgia.

Thomas Bernal celebrates his game-winning double at No. 5 Florida in the seventh inning.

TEAM USA MEMBERS

Three University of Kentucky baseball stars have had the opportunity to represent the United States on the US National Team. In 1996, Chad Green represented the US in the Olympic Games, and, in 1999, John Wilson traveled throughout the US and Japan as a national team member. Former UK stars Collin Cowgill and John Shelby also participated in training with Team USA. In 2012, Austin Cousino led USA in hitting while pacing the club to the bronze medal during Honkbal Week in the Netherlands. Kentucky head coach Gary Henderson served as the pitching coach for the 2015 team, coached by St. John's Ed Blankenmeyer.

KEITH MADISON

Keith Madison, the winningest coach in the history of Kentucky baseball, walked away from Kentucky in 2003 after 25 seasons and 735 career victories. He had coached 85 players who were drafted or signed professional baseball contract, including fifty-one of his players were selected in the top 25 rounds and 14 who eventually reached the major league level. He also spearheaded the grand opening of a new 3,000-seat $4.2 million Cliff Hagan Stadium.

A native of Brownsville, Ky., Madison became UK's 22nd head baseball coach on June 7, 1978, at the young age of 26. When he left, he was the third-winningest coach in SEC history behind only legends Ron Polk and Skip Bertman.

In 25 seasons Madison certainly left his mark, not only on the Kentucky baseball program, but also on the national college baseball scene. In Lexington, he oversaw and helped raise money for several of the baseball program facilities, including Kentucky baseball's home site, Cliff Hagan Stadium at Shively Field.

On the national scene, Madison was recognized in 1995 for his knowledge, integrity and concern for college baseball at the American Baseball Coaches Association convention when his peers elected him the organization's fourth vice-president. He eventually served as the president in 2000. That year, he ran the national convention in Atlanta, drawing the largest turnout in history with over 3,500 in attendance. He continues to serve on the ABCA board and is the director of the South Region which is comprised of 36 institutions.

Madison has also worked with USA Baseball, serving as the national team's pitching coach during the summer of 1999.

Furthermore, two Wildcats under Madison's tenure, Chad Green and John Wilson, competed internationally for the United States. Green was a member of the '96 U.S. Olympic Team, while Wilson traveled throughout the country and to Japan as a national team member.

A philosophy of team unity, character building, sportsmanship and integrity was the cornerstone for Madison's long-standing success in the Bluegrass.

He brought his blueprint for building a successful collegiate baseball program to Kentucky's campus and unveiled a philosophy to run a class program by emphasizing academic success and personal responsibility both on and off the field. The desired results were immediate.

Taking over a program that had just finished last in the SEC Eastern Division and had set the school record for most losses in a season, Madison guided his first team to a 29-18 mark in 1979 and set a school record for most wins in a season.

Over his 25 seasons, UK averaged 29 wins a season and advanced to the NCAA Tournament in 1988 and 1993, with the 1988 berth representing the school's first national tournament appearance in 38 years. After setting the school record for wins in his first season, Madison improved that mark from 39 wins in 1981 to 41 in 1991.

Through all the success, Madison guided nine All-Americans (10 selections), six Honorable Mention All-Americans, 20 first-team All-SEC players and an impressive 89 SEC academic honors selections. He placed 16 players on SEC All-Tournament teams, including the 1981 MVP, Jeff Keener. Keener also led the nation in lowest earned run average that season, posting a 0.51 ERA. Not just a prominent pitching coach, Madison also coached three .400 hitters and his 1994 team led the nation with 110 home runs.

SHIVELY FIELD AT CLIFF HAGAN STADIUM

The Kentucky baseball team calls Shively Field at Cliff Hagan Stadium home since 1979, with renovations done in 2002 and again following the 2006 South-eastern Conference Championship season that saw the first ever NCAA Lexington Regional played at the facility.

A new era began in Kentucky baseball history in 2002 as then head coach Keith Madison and the Wildcats moved into their new lair, the $4.2 million Shively Field at Cliff Hagan Stadium.

The state-of-the-art baseball complex replaced the twice-renovated facility that UK baseball had called home since 1969, when it was built as part of the Bernie A Shively Sports Center. In 1990, the facility underwent a $520,000 renovation to refurbish the stadium.

After the 2006 SEC Championship season, the Kentucky athletic administration decided to invest in exterior improvements of Cliff Hagan. Among the improvements which debuted during the 2007 season, was a new state-of-the-art video board, which enhances the viewing experience for fans.

Also added during the 2007 offseason was a 150 capacity deck in the parking lot behind right field. The outfield fence was also lowered and padded to give fans a clear view of the diamond from anywhere in the outfield parking lot.

While Cliff Hagan Stadium is a beautiful place to call home, the Wildcats plan on moving into a new facility in the future which will increase the viewing experience for fans and create an intimidating road SEC atmosphere.

UK BASEBALL: 2006 SEC CHAMPS

After a last-place Southeastern Conference finish in 2005 and a preseason expectation to remain in the cellar before the 2006 season, the Kentucky baseball team exploded out of the gates and posted the most successful campaign in the over 100-year history of the Wildcat baseball program.

The 2006 Wildcats ran up a school-record 44 wins, claimed the first SEC Championship in school annals, and hosted UK's first NCAA Regional. UK's potent offense set a bevy of school records in the process, including shattering the record for runs scored in a season with 500. UK first baseman Ryan Striby claimed SEC Player of the Year honors, in addition to earning consensus All-America accolades.
