July 21-26, 2024, Vancouver Convention Centre, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada

PHASE-FIELD MODELS OF FRACTURE

Blaise Bourdin^{*1} and Oscar Lopez-Pamies² and Keita Yoshioka³

¹McMaster University ²University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign ³Montanuniversität Leoben

MINISYMPOSIUM

Over the last 25 years or so, variational phase-field models of fracture have established themselves as robust, efficient, and versatile tools.

This mini-symposium serves as a platform for discussing recent advances and applications of phase-field models of fracture. We welcome contributions on topics including but not limited to extensions of the current models to a broad range of materials and loading, multiphysics and coupled problems. We aim at striking a balance between analysis, numerical issues, and case studies.