TEMPE, Ariz. – Sixteen of the top Division I men’s tennis teams will meet up in Charlottesville, Virginia, to compete for the 2017 Intercollegiate Tennis Association National Men’s Team Indoor Championship. Two-time defending NCAA National Champion, the University of Virginia, will serve as the event host, with all competition over the four-day event (Feb. 17-20) scheduled to take place at Boar’s Head Sports Club. The ITA Division I National Men’s Team Indoor Championship dates back to 1973. Stanford owns the most #ITAIndoors titles with 12, followed by UCLA with seven and the host Cavaliers with five championships. North Carolina claimed its first ITA National Indoors title in 2016, topping the host Cavaliers in 4-2 in the final.

For updated draws, complete results, live scoring and video links, daily recaps and photo galleries, head to the #ITAIndoors Championship Central page at www.itatennis.com. On social media, be sure to follow @ITA_Tennis on Twitter and use the hashtag #ITAIndoors when tweeting about the event. You can also check out @ITA_Tennis on Instagram and on Facebook.

Twelve of the 15 No. 1 seeds in the 2017 ITA Kick-Off Weekend advanced to the National Team Indoor Championship. By virtue of hosting the #ITAIndoors, Virginia garnered an automatic bid into the event and did not have to participate in the 2017 ITA Kick-Off Weekend.

ITA CEO TIMOTHY RUSSELL WELCOMES THE STUDENT-ATHLETES TO THE 2017 ITA DIVISION I NATIONAL MEN'S TEAM INDOOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Dear Student-Athletes:

Welcome to the 2017 ITA Division I National Men's Team Indoor Championship. Sixteen of Division I's finest men's teams have gathered in Charlottesville to take part in spirited competition over the ensuing four days.

Tennis is the 21st century's most effective life curriculum. Tennis is a metaphor for life and the most humane sport. As the sport of a lifetime, tennis builds fitness, character "under pressure," leadership, and citizenship. A sport of integrity and high levels of sportsmanship, tennis is a fast-paced sport that prepares student-athletes for a fast-paced world.

The ITA would like to thank the hard-working staffs at both Boar's Head Sports Club and the University of Virginia for all of their efforts in putting on a first-class national championship event.

College tennis continues to be the connective tissue for our sport, the aspirational goal for junior tennis players worldwide and one viable high performance pathway to a career as a top professional tennis player. College tennis is a forward-thinking leader in the world of intercollegiate athletics, a fast-paced sport that prepares student-athletes for a fast-paced world.

You represent the best of college tennis. Congratulations on everything that you have accomplished to this point in your life. We applaud your hard work, self-discipline, leadership, and sportsmanship. Your passion for our sport and for your schools are both admirable. You embody grit, which has recently been defined by leading psychologists as "passion and perseverance in pursuit of long-term goals," perhaps the primary driver of success. Good luck and best wishes . . . this weekend, throughout the remainder of the school year, and as your lives and careers unfold.

Enjoy your time in Charlottesville – the competition and the comradery. Thank you for participation in this magnificent team championship. Please share your words of gratitude with our host, the University of Virginia, and the staff at Boar's Head Sports Club, as you see them.

Yours sincerely,

Timothy Russell
ITA Chief Executive Office

BRIAN HAINLINE RECEIVES 2016 ITA DAVID A BENJAMIN ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

TEMPE, Ariz. – Brian Hainline, M.D., alumnus of the University of Notre Dame Class of 1978 and the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine, received the highest honor bestowed by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association when he was presented with the 2016 ITA David A Benjamin Achievement Award on Saturday, September 10, 2016, at the International Tennis Hall of Fame’s Board of Governors Meeting at the Grand Hyatt Hotel in New York. The ceremony was hosted by the ITHF and presented by Rolex Watch, U.S.A.

Stan Smith, President of the ITHF, presented the award along with David A Benjamin, retired ITA Chairman of the Board, Timothy Russell, ITA Chief Executive Officer, and Mounia Mechbal, Vice President of Communications, Rolex Watch U.S.A., who presented a distinctive, personally engraved, Rolex timepiece to Hainline. In addition to this special gift, Hainline and a guest were invited to watch a session of the 2016 US Open from the President’s Box, courtesy of the USTA, and were also recognized during the ITHF’s Legends Ball on Friday evening.

“The selection of Brian Hainline as the 2016 recipient of the ITA David A Benjamin Achievement Award laureate speaks not only to Brian’s extraordinary career in the field of medicine, but also to the larger vision that the ITA serves college tennis and returns the leaders of tomorrow,” said Russell. “We are honored to recognize Brian for all of his efforts, and hope that his story is one that will inspire current and future generations.”

Now in its 23rd year, the ITA David A Benjamin Achievement Award pays tribute each year to past participants in the world of varsity tennis who have achieved excellence in their chosen careers. The spirit of the award honors both professional success and contributions to society, made either as a direct result of a career, or through humanitarian efforts. In 2015, Margie and Stan Smith endowed the ITA Achievement Award in honor of Benjamin.

“On behalf of the ITA, we are proud to partner with the International Tennis Hall of Fame and Rolex Watch U.S.A. to recognize Brian Hainline as the 2016 ITA David A Benjamin Achievement Award laureate,” said Benjamin. “And we would also like to thank once again Margie and Stan Smith, for their generous endowment donation for this most special award.”

Brian Hainline, M.D. is the NCAA's first Chief Medical Officer. He holds academic appointments as clinical professor of neurology at both New York University School of Medicine and Indiana University School of Medicine, and was formerly a practicing physician, and the Chief Medical Officer for the USTA and US Open.

Hainline earned his Bachelor's degree from the University of Notre Dame, where he was the No. 1 singles and doubles player his senior year. He majored in philosophy within a pre-professional program, taking all of the necessary pre-med courses, and graduated Phi Beta Kappa. He then went on to earn his medical degree at the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine.

During an interview for his dream job as neurology resident with Drs. Fred Plum and Jerome Posner of The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, Hainline was asked how he had managed to play college tennis while studying both philosophy and pre-med. His reply was that while he didn't have the extensive background in research that the other residency candidates had, tennis had taught him discipline, the drive for excellence, and character development that comes from the journey of successes and failures. That tennis response was the key serve in getting the job.

As the NCAA's first chief medical officer, Hainline oversees all student-athlete health and safety initiatives and coordinates with the NCAA's main sports medicine panel, the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, and is assigned the task of running the NCAA Sport Science Institute – a national center of excellence that functions as a resource to provide safety, health and medical expertise and research for physicians, athletic trainers, and all stakeholders in sport. Hainline sees his position as, "being devoted to doing everything possible to promote and develop the health, safety and well-being of all student-athletes."

According to NCAA President, Mark Emmert at Hainline's hiring, "The NCAA was founded on the commitment to protect and enhance the health and well-being of student-athletes and Dr. Hainline will elevate that commitment for the Association."

Dedicated to raising the standard of care for athletes, Hainline has given lectures around the world, authored or edited seven books and numerous academic papers and chapters, is a Fellow of the American College of Sports Medicine and the American Academy of Neurology and a member of The Society for Tennis Medicine and Science.

Hainline served as Chief Medical Officer for the U.S. Open Tennis Championships from 1992 to 2007 and was appointed the first Chief Medical Officer of the USTA in 2008. Prior to his appointment, Brian had been a long-time committed volunteer to the game of tennis, serving as a USTA board member, a founding member of the USTA Sport Science Committee, chair of the USTA Pro Council, and a member and chair of the ITF Sport Science and Medicine Commission, which provides guidance to 202 Olympic countries. As member of the ITF Wheelchair Tennis Medical Commission he wrote the rules of eligibility for international wheelchair competition.

Hainline is a founding member of the Tennis Anti-Doping Program Review Board for the ATP, ITF and WTA Tour. According to David Brewer, Chief Professional Tennis Officer & US Open Tournament Director, "Brian was central to the initial effort to establish the tennis anti-doping code. He did the heavy lifting – research and writing – that put tennis ahead of the curve in establishing a systematic approach to this issue."

In addition to volunteering in the world of tennis, Brian has been teaching religion to pre-teens for more than two decades. "Whether I'm practicing neuroscience, teaching religion or developing policies and procedures for sport, unifying theme is to help people become aware of how they can take steps to improve their level of self-care, sense of awareness and well-being, and then to give back to life."

In addition to those already mentioned, Hainline has served, and continues to serve, on numerous sports medicine appointments, some of which include, Pop Warner Football Medical Research Subcommittee, National Council on Youth Sports Safety, and the WTA Player Development Advisory Panel.

In 2001, The International Tennis Hall of Fame honored Hainline with the Tennis Educational Merit Award, presented to those who have made notable contributions in the tennis education field at the national level and have demonstrated leadership and creative skills in such areas as instruction, writing, organization and promotion of the game of tennis. In 2004 he received the Irving Glick Award of Excellence from the WTA Tour at the US Open Tennis Championships, recognizing sports medicine contributions by a tournament physician that are outstanding and exemplary. Hainline was inducted into the USTA Eastern Tennis Hall of Fame in 2011 and in 2013 was bestowed the ITF Award for Service to the Game.

Brian is married to Pascale and they have three children, Clotilde, Arthur and Juliette, and one grandchild, Sophie. In his free time, Brian loves to play tennis and also enjoys writing poetry and playing the piano. # THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA

In 1819 Thomas Jefferson fulfilled his lifelong ambition to create a new and better institution of higher learning. The University of Virginia would prepare America's future leaders to protect their young democracy. It would facilitate open exchange between students and professors, unlock the potential of the nation's best and brightest minds, and encourage students and faculty to advance knowledge and break traditional boundaries.

Discussion. Collaboration. Enlightenment. These are the ideals to which Thomas Jefferson aspired when conceiving the University of Virginia. In his quest to reinvent higher education in America, Jefferson sought to cultivate an environment in which students and faculty could live and learn from one another.

At the University of Virginia, scholars and professors could exercise their ingenuity, develop the tools of self-governance and push the boundaries of knowledge in service to the common good.

The result was a revolution: the Academical Village. Designed to foster cross-disciplinary exchange, Jefferson's design housed faculty from a range of specialties around a central Lawn. Students lived in single rooms between professors' homes. At the head of their shared Lawn stood the library (also known as the Rotunda). And at the Lawn's foot lay a panoramic view of the mountains, suggestive of the intellectual frontiers that lay open to discovery.

Indeed, Jefferson's Academical Village gave physical shape to his ideals—ideals that would alter the course of higher education in America and the world.

Nearly 200 years later the University continues this endless pursuit of better. As one of the top three U.S. public universities, we are committed to developing the full potential of talented students from all walks of life. Our enduring legacy of honor and student self-governance prepares tomorrow's leaders for the challenges they are sure to face. Our health system advances scientific discovery while providing first-rate patient care. And our rich academic resources—paired with our focus on cross-disciplinary collaboration—further what Jefferson described as “the illimitable freedom of the human mind.”

UVA is regarded as one of the most beautiful and prestigious universities in the world. In 1987, UNESCO named the University (in conjunction with Monticello) a World Heritage Site. This rare distinction has been bestowed upon only the world's most culturally significant landmarks. As a proud recipient of this honor, UVA sits alongside such renowned global sites as the Acropolis, the Galapagos Islands and the Pyramids of Giza. The University is one of only two such sites still being used for its original purpose. UVA was also recently rated the “most beautiful campus in America” by Best College Reviews.

While we're proud of our past, we're focused on our future.

As a leading research university, UVA is bringing a wealth of innovations to the world. Our students and faculty have discovered new connections between the nervous system and the immune system, revolutionizing the study of both. We're working with NASA to explore the edges of our solar system. And we're leading new efforts to make major cities around the world greener, healthier and happier.

Looking further ahead, our third century will be guided by the five pillars of our Cornerstone Plan:

- Extend and strengthen the University's distinctive residential culture
- Strengthen the University's capacity to advance knowledge through research, scholarship, creative arts and innovation
- Provide educational experiences that deliver new levels of student engagement
- Assemble and support a distinguishing faculty
- Steward resources to promote academic excellence and affordable access

Currently, UVA features 12 schools with close to 22,000 students.

Thai-son Kwiatkowski won both the singles and doubles titles at the ITA All-American last year and helped lead Virginia to a second consecutive team NCAA title.

VIRGINIA CAVALIER ATHLETICS

The University of Virginia athletics program is a shining example of how one of the nation's top academic institutions has combined high academic achievement and successful athletic teams on the national scene.

In 2016, Virginia won the NCAA men's tennis championship, the rowing team placed third nationally and the women's swimming program finished fifth. Men's basketball made its first NCAA Elite Eight appearance since 1995 and the men's track and field team placed seventh at the NCAA Outdoor Championships and tied for eighth at the indoor championships. Women's golf, women's tennis, women's soccer and field hockey also advanced to the quarterfinals at their respective NCAA championships.

UVA captured four Atlantic Coast Conference championships and its 73 conference titles since the spring of 2002 are the most of any ACC school during that time. In 2015-16, UVA won ACC championships in women's golf (second consecutive), rowing (seventh consecutive and 16th in 17 years), women's cross country (first since 1982) and women's swimming and diving (ninth consecutive).

Individually, Leah Smith (Pittsburgh, Pa.) defended her NCAA swimming titles in the 500 Free and 1,650 Free and won a gold and bronze medal at the Rio Olympics. Danielle Collins (St. Petersburg, Fla.) won her second NCAA women's tennis championship. Henry Wynne (Westport, Conn.) won the mile at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships and Filip Mihaljevic (Livno, Bosnia and Herzegovina) captured the NCAA title in the men's shot put at the outdoor championships. Brian Boland (men's tennis) was named ITA National Coach of the Year, while Augie Busch (women's swimming), Todd Morgan (women's cross country), Kim Lewellen (women's golf) and Steve Swanson (women's soccer) earned ACC Coach of the Year honors.

2016-17 Highlights

- 20 of UVA's 25 athletics programs advanced to NCAA postseason competition.
- Virginia finished eighth in the Learfield Sports Director's Cup Standings.
- UVA's 73 conference titles since the spring of 2002 are the most of any ACC school during that time.
- Men's basketball posted 29 or more wins for the third consecutive season en route to its third consecutive NCAA Tournament appearance and first NCAA Elite Eight berth since 1995.
- Malcolm Brogdon, who earned consensus All-America first-team honors, became the first player to earn ACC Player of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year honors in the same season.
- Baseball posted a 38-22 record and hosted an NCAA regional for the ninth time in the last 13 years.
- Head baseball coach Brian O'Connor set the Virginia all-time wins record and finished the year with 596 career wins.
- Men's soccer reached its 35th straight NCAA tournament (longest active streak in Division I soccer).
- Women's lacrosse earned its 21st consecutive NCAA Championship bid
- Men's golf finished 22nd at the NCAA Championships.
- Men's swimming and diving tied for 28th at the NCAA Championships.
- Virginia sent five wrestlers to the NCAA Championships, the eighth consecutive year to send at least five wrestlers.
