UNCOMPROMISED EXCELLENCE

A Year in Review: 2007–2008

Mission Statement

The Department of Athletics is an integral part of the University of Virginia’s commitment to educational excellence. Its mission is to enhance and support the intellectual purpose of the University and its exemplary academic standards and traditions.

Critical to the Department’s mission are high academic achievement; nationally competitive and successful teams; comprehensive integration of student-athletes within the University and local communities; a strict adherence to NCAA, ACC, and University rules and regulations; fiscal integrity, which is embodied through the generation and efficient use of resources; and the attraction and retention of the highest quality student-athletes and staff, which includes equitable opportunities for women and minorities.

The Department of Athletics pursues its mission by uniting the varied constituencies of the University community through its intercollegiate and intramural programs. These programs are designed to build support for and add value to the academic purposes of the institution, while developing students with strong values of leadership, sportsmanship, equity, citizenship, physical fitness, teamwork, and a commitment to excellence.

The operating principles of the Athletics Department require that, in pursuing its mission, the Department will consistently provide exemplary service to all of its internal and external constituencies.

FRONT COVER: CHRIS LONG, SEAN SINGLETARY, SOMDEV DEVVARMAN, AND BECKY SAUERBRUNN.

FACING PAGE: SHARNEÉ ZOLL WRAPPED UP HER ILLUSTRIOUS CAREER BY BECOMING THE ACC’S ALL-TIME ASSISTS LEADER (785), ECLIPSING THE 16-YEAR-OLD RECORD HELD BY FORMER VIRGINIA GREAT DAWN STALEY (729). ZOLL WAS A THREE-TIME ALL-ACC SELECTION AND LED THE CAVALIERS TO FOUR POSTSEASON APPEARANCES.

FOR THE SECOND CONSECUTIVE SEASON, SOMDEV DEVVARMAN WON THE NCAA MEN'S SINGLES TITLE AND WAS NAMED THE ITA NATIONAL PLAYER OF THE YEAR. HE ENDED THE SEASON WITH A 44-1 SINGLES RECORD, TYING THE SCHOOL RECORD FOR WINS IN A SEASON HE SET IN 2007.

Dear Friends of Virginia Athletics,

Reflecting on the year that has passed, I am struck by the talent of our Class of 2008—Somdev Devvarman, two-time NCAA singles tennis champion and ITA National Player of the Year; Billie-Jo Grant, three-time All-American in the discus; Emily Harrison, two-time cross country All-American; Sarah Kirkwood, Rhodes Scholar finalist; Chris Long, football All-American and the number two pick in the NFL draft; Ben Rubeor, two-time Academic All-American and lacrosse All-American; Sean Singletary, three-time first-team All-ACC and second round NBA draft selection; and Sharneé Zoll, all-time ACC assists leader in women’s basketball. The success of these student-athletes represents just a fraction of our accomplishments this year, as you’ll see in the pages that follow.

Our Cavaliers won six ACC championships this year, more than any other school in the conference. We continue to outpace ACC schools in conference championships won, beginning with the 2002-03 academic year.

The Virginia coaches brought home their share of honors as well. ACC Coach of the Year honors were presented to seven Virginia coaches: Al Groh, football; Jason Dunn, men’s cross country; Mark Bernardino for both men’s and women’s swimming and diving; Kim Lewellen, women’s golf; Brian Boland, men’s tennis; Julie Myers, women’s lacrosse; and Kevin Sauer, rowing. Additionally, head coach Debbie Ryan was inducted into the Women’s Basketball Hall of Fame in June and head coach Dom Starsia will be inducted into the Lacrosse Hall of Fame this fall. We all benefit from their talent, experience and commitment.

The 2007-08 academic year was an exceptional year in so many ways. In addition to being pleased with the accomplishments of our teams, athletes, and coaches, I am equally impressed with the generosity of our donors and the support of our fans. We continue to grow, to exceed expectations, to achieve, and to move from good to great. We all look forward to another exciting year and the chance to show that our commitment to uncompromised excellence remains strong. Thank you for your part in our success.

The Best of 2007-08

Virginia won over 61% (262-160-8) of its intercollegiate athletic contests to win the 30th Virginia Sports Information Director’s Association Division I All-Sport championship.

- Somdev Devvarman won his second consecutive NCAA men’s tennis singles title and was named the ITA National Player of the Year. The men’s tennis team was ranked number one throughout the regular season and won the ITA National Team Indoor title. Devvarman won the ITA National Indoor singles title and teamed with Treat Huey to win the doubles title.

- Individuals or teams from 21 of our 25 sports participated in postseason competition.
- 55 student-athletes earned athletic All-America honors; 87 earned All-ACC honors.
- Six teams won ACC Championships, the most conference titles since 2003-04: men’s cross country, men’s swimming and diving, women’s swimming and diving, rowing, men’s tennis, and women’s lacrosse. Three teams finished second in ACC title races: wrestling, men’s lacrosse, and women’s golf.

- The men’s lacrosse team reached the NCAA Tournament semifinal game.
- The rowing team won its ninth consecutive ACC title—the most consecutive titles in U.Va. history.
- The football team played in the Konica Minolta Gator Bowl—its first New Year’s Day bowl game since 1994.

Graduate

100% of our student-athletes who complete their eligibility at the University of Virginia.

ABOVE: LINDSEY PREUSS RECEIVED THE JETTIE HILL MEMORIAL AWARD AS THE SENIOR FEMALE STUDENT-ATHLETE WITH THE HIGHEST SCHOLASTIC AVERAGE THROUGH HER FOUR YEARS AT U.VA.

BELOW: IN ADDITION TO ALL-ACC AND ALL-AMERICA HONORS, SARAH KIRKWOOD EARNED ALL-ACC ACADEMIC TEAM HONORS IN EACH OF THE LAST THREE SEASONS. SHE WAS CHOSEN TO LIVE ON THE LAWN, ONE OF THE UNIVERSITY'S MOST PRESTIGIOUS HONORS, AND WAS A RHODES SCHOLAR FINALIST.

FOOTBALL STUDENT-ATHLETES CEDRIC PEERMAN (LEFT), BYRON GLASPY (MIDDLE) AND SCOTT DEKE (RIGHT) WILL COMPETE IN 2008 AS GRADUATE STUDENTS.

Eighty-six percent of the student-athletes in the Class of 2008 who completed their eligibility graduated. Twenty-seven student-athletes will compete as graduate students next year.

Forty-seven Cavaliers earned ACC All-Academic honors and eight earned academic All-America Honors. Two, Sarah Kirkwood (volleyball) and Michael Miller (swimming & diving) were named Rhodes Scholar finalists.

Over one hundred student-athletes were recognized at the annual Academic Awards Dinner sponsored by Virginia's Student-Athlete Advisory Committee.

The women's golf team was recognized as the team with the highest grade point average for the 2006-07 academic year.

Five graduating student-athletes were honored for the highest cumulative grade point average among student-athletes in their respective schools: Michael Miller (swimming, Arts and Sciences), Lindsey Preuss (softball, Commerce), Kelsie Chaudoin (rowing, Architecture), Jennifer Dolson (cross country/track & field, Engineering) and

WILL HALL

Megan Haughs (rowing, Nursing).

The ACC awarded three Cavalier student-athletes Weaver-James-Corrigan scholarships of $5,000 each for postgraduate study: Mary Eddy (rowing), Sarah Kirkwood (volleyball), and Becky Sauerbrunn (women's soccer). Recipients of the scholarships have performed with distinction in both the classroom and in their respective sports, while demonstrating exemplary conduct in the community.

Tom Santi (football) was among six student-athletes to receive the ACC's Weaver-James-Corrigan Honorary Award recognizing student-athletes who intend to compete at the Olympic or professional level, for their outstanding performance in both athletic competition and the classroom throughout their collegiate careers.

Major League Soccer offered Will Hall a professional contract straight out of high school. U.Va offered him so much more.

"My parents said 'use your gift to go to the best academic school possible,' and when you combined U.Va.'s academics with its soccer tradition, there was only one place for me," Hall said.

Soccer gave Hall—a Parade All-American midfielder from Shirley, NY—so much. But only when it was stripped away from him for a year, did he discover all that U.Va. could provide.

"We won two ACC titles and went to the NCAA Sweet 16 and Elite Eight in my first two years," Hall recalls. "Then in the middle of my third year, my knee started bothering me and the doctors found a tear. I tried to push through it, but when I went in for surgery that spring, it was worse than I thought. Then I tore my knee again during rehab, and that took me out for my senior year."

It would have been natural for Hall to pout, to ask "why me." Instead, he did just the opposite. Not long after his injury, he focused his time in adaptive physical education at two Charlottesville public schools, working directly with physically handicapped kids, kindergarten through second grade.

"To see these kids with big smiles making the best of every chance is so fulfilling. Any strides they take give them such happiness. It's given me such a different perspective," Hall said.

Now, five years after the decision that changed his life, Hall has no regrets.

"I've had opportunities that I never thought possible," Hall said. "I've been able to do amazing things through soccer."

Win 12 national championships and 70 conference championships.

RYAN FOSTER FINISHED THIRD AT THE ACC CROSS COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIPS TO HELP U.VA. CAPTURE THE CONFERENCE TITLE.

TREAT HUEY (LEFT) AND SOMDEV DEVVARMAN (RIGHT) LED THE CAVALIERS TO THEIR SECOND STRAIGHT UNDEFEATED RUN THROUGH THE ACC REGULAR SEASON, CAPPING THE SEASON WITH THE CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIP. HUEY WAS NAMED THE TOURNAMENT'S MVP.

VIRGINIA'S VARSITY EIGHT, RANKED NO. 3 NATIONALLY, WAS NAMED THE ACC'S CREW OF THE YEAR AFTER CLAIMING THE CONFERENCE TITLE IN AN ACC ROWING CHAMPIONSHIPS RECORD TIME OF 6:22.0.

VIRGINIA GOALKEEPER KENDALL MCBREARTY, WHO WAS VOTED THE ACC TOURNAMENT MVP FOR THE SECOND CONSECUTIVE YEAR, MADE A TOTAL OF 16 SAVES AS THE CAVALIERS RALLIED FOR TWO AMAZING COME-FROM-BEHIND VICTORIES TO CLINCH THEIR THIRD STRAIGHT ACC TITLE.

MEGAN EVO WAS A MEMBER OF THE 400 AND 800 FREE RELAY TEAMS THAT CAPTURED CONFERENCE TITLES AT THE ACC MEET. THE 400 FREE RELAY TEAM SET A CONFERENCE MEET RECORD WITH A TIME OF 3:18.39.

Somdev Dewarman successfully defended the NCAA men’s tennis singles title and became the fourth player in the last 50 years to win consecutive NCAA titles. He set a collegiate record with his 18 career NCAA tournament wins. He closed out his Cavalier career with a school record 158 career singles wins and a single season record of 44 match wins. In addition, he led the Cavaliers to the ITA National Indoor Team title, collected the ITA singles title and teamed with Treat Huey to capture the doubles title.

Virginia won six ACC championships in 2007-08—more than any other conference school: men’s cross country, women’s lacrosse, men’s swimming & diving, women’s swimming & diving, men’s tennis, and rowing. The Cavaliers also finished a close second in women’s golf (one stroke), wrestling (two points) and men’s lacrosse (two goals).

Since the inception of the department’s 10-year goals in 2002-03, Virginia has tallied 29 ACC championships and three NCAA team titles, one national team title, and 10 individual national titles. For a complete listing of these titles, please see page 21.

Seven coaches won ACC Coach of the Year honors:

Mark Bernardino men’s and women’s swimming

Brian Boland men’s tennis

Jason Dunn men’s cross country

Al Groh football

Kim Lewellen women’s golf

Julie Myers women’s lacrosse

Kevin Sauer rowing

Matt McLean made one of the biggest splashes in ACC swimming history, helping the Cavaliers reclaim the men’s ACC crown and cruise to a 15th-place finish at the NCAA meet.

“The attitude in [coach Mark Bernardino’s] program prepares you for success,” said McLean. “When you get to Virginia, you know you have a job to do, and that’s what you do.”

That mindset proved worthwhile as McLean shattered four league records en route to claiming the ACC’s Most Valuable Swimmer and Rookie of the Year awards.

“To be honest with you, I was mostly thinking about the team title,” McLean said. “That’s what this team is: a family. We wanted and knew we needed to get the title back.”

Virginia did just that—the Cavaliers took the team title by almost 300 points, easily winning their ninth crown in 10 years.

“It was an awesome experience with so many guys on the team that were so close,” McLean said. “What we did, we did together.”

McLean turned heads again in late March as he became an All-American with his fourth-place finish in the 500m freestyle at the NCAA championships.

“I don’t want to say I expected it because that will sound cocky and arrogant, and I can’t stand that,” he said. “I was prepared, and I was confident I had done the work.”

TOP TO BOTTOM:
JANNE'A BRIDGEFORD,
TALIA WISE,
KRISTINA CHAPMAN,
RASHAWNDA JONES

Teammates Janne'a Bridgeford and Talia Wise remember the disappointment three years ago at the Penn Relays, when Wise was called for stepping into the adjacent lane during the team's 4x200 meter relay, disqualifying the squad.

This year, the two were determined to win a Penn Relays title. And for Wise, it was a chance at redemption.

The team not only won the ECAC race in 1:36—less than a second shy of the record set by Pittsburgh in 1999—but their performance would have placed the team sixth in the Championship of America, an event reserved for the nation's best collegiate teams.

Two other top sprinters on the relay team were replaced at the Penn Relays because of injuries, giving two freshmen, Kristina Chapman and Rashawnda Jones, a chance to compete at the prestigious event. But that also added a level of inexperience and uncertainty. "I don't think we expected to run as fast as that," Wise said.

"We went in thinking we would do our best because we were missing two strong legs," Bridgeford said. "But [the two freshmen] ran really well, stepped it up and came together as a team under pressure. It was a highlight of the season."

Before every race the sprinters huddle, grab a portion of the baton with one hand and ask for good health, seamless exchanges, finishing without injuries, and support for each other. Anxiety is more prominent on relays because a sprinter has three people depending on her in a race, and Wise acknowledges the simple ritual helps ease anxious nerves.

"We all care about each other," said Wise, who was part of the team that finished second last year. "More than winning and glorification."

OUTFIELDER DAN GROVATT EARNED FRESHMAN ALL-AMERICA HONORS AFTER HITTING .324 WITH THREE HOME RUNS AND 46 RUNS BATTED IN DURING HIS ROOKIE CAMPAIGN.

The memory of Bob Olderman ('84) will live on at U.Va. thanks in part to a $2 million donation to the Virginia Athletics Foundation by his uncle, Mike Walters. Olderman, an All-ACC offensive guard in 1984, went on to play a season of professional football for the Kansas City Chiefs before succumbing in 1993 to Castleman's disease, an extremely rare form of lymphoma, at age 31.

At U.Va., Bob played for coach George Welsh who said he will always remember Olderman for his leadership, particularly in 1984 when No. 79 helped the Cavaliers reach their first bowl game. Family and friends will also remember Bob for the life he led off the field.

"He was everything you ever wanted in a student-athlete and a human being," said Dick Bestwick, the Cavalier coach who recruited Bob from Marist High in Atlanta, GA.

"He took his academics seriously, he was a good athlete, and had a great relationship with my sister and brother-in-law," says Walters. A retired vice president of The Coca-Cola Company, Walters wanted to make a major gift to the University for years but rather than give to a general fund, he was looking to make his gift more personal.

The Bob Olderman Student-Athlete Fund will provide scholarships for sports other than football and basketball. Walters, who attended the University from 1964 to 1968, hopes that this will enable those, who might not otherwise be able, to consider U.Va.

In 2007-08, 436 student-athletes received full or partial scholarship, equating to the maximum number as allowed by the NCAA of 316.6 full scholarships.

The athletics department receives no funding from the Commonwealth of Virginia or the University. Student fees account for approximately 17% of its budget and allow students free admission to all athletics events.

Ticket sales in basketball and football provided increased revenue, and, baseball ticket sales have surpassed $150,000 in total revenue.

The operating budgets of individual sports still rely heavily on private support from the VAF "Friends Of" fund-raising program, which has passed the $1 million mark. Also, over $2.4 million has been contributed to establish operational endowments in eight sports.

Donor commitments for suite leases continue to be sold out with a waiting list in all three venues: baseball, basketball and football. All revenue generated from the suites is currently committed to debt service for facility construction.

The VAF endowment is currently valued at $63 million and provides 25.4% of Build and maintain the finest facilities in the country with the purpose of attracting the best student-athletes in the country.

Fans of the Cavaliers can easily find all sorts of facts about U.Va. football online—from the head coach’s name to the date of their inaugural season. What they won’t find anywhere is who prepares the stadium for football season.

For the past 10 years, that job has gone in part to Anne Martin, U.Va. facilities housekeeping manager.

To maintain the stadium, Martin and her housekeeping staff of 10 work an average 10 hours a day for five to six weeks before the season even begins. That’s when the staff cleans and sanitizes 65 restrooms, 56 suites, locker rooms, recruiting rooms, the President’s Box, Press Box, and of course the 61,500 stadium seats.

To maintain the cleanliness of Scott Stadium on game day, Martin adopts a very systematic approach—one that combines using her staff along with 10 outside contractors assigned in teams to specific areas of the stadium.

“I really have a very experienced staff who know what to do and how to do it. They know what the University wants and what we are trying to represent, which makes my job easier,” says Martin.

That job, as she puts it, “is to make a good impression on the fans.”

Most collegiate athletics departments would consider themselves lucky to include a single coach among their ranks in a Hall of Fame...ever. The University of Virginia boasts two just this year.

On June 14 in Knoxville, Tenn., 31-year U.Va. women's basketball coach Debbie Ryan had her name called as the highlight of a six-member class enshrined in the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame. Similarly, men's lacrosse coach Dom Starsia enters the Lacrosse Hall of Fame on November 10 in a ceremony in Hunt Valley, Md.

Neither could believe the honor because, frankly, their quest for greatness never left spare time to think about the Hall of Fame.

"I was surprised," Starsia said. "I am a voting member of the Hall-of-Fame committee, and while it occurred to me once in a while during the season that I had not seen a ballot, it never occurred to me that they were withholding it because I was on it!"

"Honestly, I never really put any thought into it," Ryan said. "I'm not into individual honors. I think more in terms of my team and my players receiving the honors that they deserve. I think in terms of my staff getting to where they need to go. I'm very humbled by it and honored by it."

Unlike professional halls of fame, where coaches and players alike are inducted years after walking away from the sport, both Ryan and Starsia are still going strong, steering national-level programs and chasing championships. And the end is nowhere in sight for either.

"How many people get to find their passion and then live their passion," said Ryan, whose team advanced to the NCAA Tournament's second round in 2007-08. "I was one of the fortunate ones who got that chance, and I couldn't be happier."

"While I am not ready to 'throw in the towel' yet, I do recognize that I am closer to the end of my career than the beginning," Starsia noted after another Final Four finish. "At the same time, it is a little strange to be inducted into the Hall of Fame while still coaching. I hope that no one is 'showing me the door'... I believe the best may still be yet to come!"

The need for new or improved athletics facilities at U.Va. is a continuous cycle. New construction and renovations are contingent on the ability to raise the necessary funds to keep our facilities among the best in the nation.

Last year, significant improvements were made to the McCue Center to replace the outdated football locker room and upgrade the training and weight rooms. In addition, inviting displays in the entryways and stairwells of the McCue Center brought recognition to some of the best student-athletes and teams in the history of Cavalier athletics.

The Thomas Temple Allan Boathouse on the Rivanna Reservoir was also renovated. The nearly 4,000-square foot addition expanded the rowing team's work-out area to include an athletic training area and the team's first locker room. In addition, the repair bay and storage area for the boats and equipment was enlarged.

Other improvements to athletics facilities included:

- New dugouts, field lighting and scoreboard at the varsity softball field at The Park
- New seating areas at Davenport Field

- Renovated locker rooms for women's soccer and women's track and field in University Hall
- A new surface at the high jump pit and javelin runway at Lannigan Field
- A new field drainage system at Klöckner Stadium

Projects that received approval were a new expansive scoreboard for Scott Stadium and additional scoreboards for several practice fields.

Based on how coaches rate their top prospects, we will Attract our top prospective student-athletes to the University of Virginia.

TWINS SHAMEL (LEFT) AND RHAMEL BRATTON CAME TO U.VA. AS THE NUMBER ONE AND TWO LACROSSE RECRUITS IN THE NATION IN 2007.

First-years made a big impact in the ACC in 2007-08. ACC Freshman of the Year honors were handed out to four Cavaliers—Matt McLean, swimming & diving; Liz Shaw, swimming & diving; Emil Heineking, cross country; and Chris Henrich, wrestling.

The incoming class of 2012 is equally impressive. Men's lacrosse recruit Steele Stanwick was the overall #1 recruit in the nation and the women's lacrosse team signed four of the top 15 recruits in the nation.

Both of men's golf incoming first-years, Ben Kohles and Bruce Woodall were ranked in the top 60 by Golfweek.

Incoming Virginia first-years Danny Hultzen and Steven Proscia were named to Baseball America's 2008 High School All-America Team.

Men's Basketball #28 by Prep Stars Recruiter's Handbook

For Dave Leitao's men's basketball program, replacing three-time All-ACC point guard Sean Singletary doesn't happen in a day. And one player alone can't turn the trick.

It takes an entire team, and Leitao will likely call on every last member of the roster—most notably three heralded incoming first years—to infuse his Cavaliers with new energy and talent.

Shooting guard Sylven Landesberg joins a pair of centers—6'11" John Brandenburg and 7'0" Assane Sene—in U.Va.'s 2008 recruiting class. The trio boasts celebrated high school careers, diverse skills, and a shared desire to help the Cavalier program from the first minute they arrived on Grounds this past summer.

"We're extremely pleased and happy that we have three guys who represent not only part of the future of Virginia basketball, but most importantly represent what we know Virginia student-athletes to be about," Leitao said. "John and Assane enable us to fill a need in the front court and adding Sylven on the perimeter speaks to the versatility we've tried to recruit from day one."

FIRST-YEAR LIZ SHAW WAS THE ACC CHAMPION IN THE 200 FLY, 200 INDIVIDUAL MEDLEY AND 400 MEDLEY RELAY. SHE EARNED FIRST TEAM ALL-AMERICA HONORS IN THE 200 FLY AND PARTICIPATED IN THE U.S. OLYMPIC TRIALS.

FIRST-YEAR CHRIS HENRICH FINISHED THE SEASON 26-10 OVERALL AND 4-1 IN ACC DUAL-MEET COMPETITION AT 174 POUNDS. BY YEAR'S END HE WAS RANKED NO. 17 IN THE COUNTRY BY W.I.N. AND NO. 19 IN THE INTERMAT RANKINGS.

When Emil Heineking lost his third running watch just before his freshman year at U.Va., he didn't bother replacing it. He dropped his urge to worry about time, and started concentrating on simply running.

The watch "is just one more distraction," says Heineking. "Times are, to an extent, arbitrary. There are different terrains, and so many different things to worry about, that it doesn't really matter."

His former coach, Jason Dunn, says that Heineking's efforts to leave the watch behind have contributed to his ability to race intuitively at a level beyond his years, a talent that brought him notable success this year.

The 18-year-old Ohio native ran cross country in the fall, securing honors as the ACC Freshman of the Year and leading the men's program to a 12th-place finish at the NCAA Championships—where he was the only freshman to earn All-America status.

He redshirted indoor track. Then in February, Heineking (whose first name is pronounced EE-muhl) raced at the U.S. Junior National Cross Country Championships for top runners under 19. He placed third in the 8k.

Six weeks later, he flew to Scotland for the World Cross Country Championships. He finished as the second American, with a time of 24:16 in the 8k race, and 26th overall.

"He has a fearlessness about him," said Dunn. "He was not afraid to go to the front of races and mix it up with established athletes, putting himself out there and not being afraid to fail."

Fully comply with Title IX.

VALERIE RICHARDSON

U.Va. has time and time again demonstrated its commitment to competing nationally among all of its Division I programs. That pledge extends to management through the team of administrators that athletics director Craig Littlepage assembles to assist the coaching staff and improve the student-athlete experience.

His latest move is hiring Valerie Richardson, whom he lured away from her role as associate athletics director for external affairs at St. John's University. Richardson graduated from Stanford University before ultimately arriving at St. John's after stints at UC Santa Barbara and Columbia University.

She was hired for the newly created position of assistant athletics director for sports programs in March 2008 and was quickly promoted to associate athletics director.

"It has been non-stop action, and I wouldn't have it any other way," Richardson said. "I have spent time talking with the head coaches who report to me to learn more about their needs—staffing, budget, facilities, etc.—and how I may be able to help them in moving forward."

At 30 years old, Kelli Frye Pugh has reached a level in her career to which peers around the country can only aspire. One of fewer than 10 female collegiate football trainers, Pugh was promoted to associate athletic trainer for U.Va. in 2006 and now oversees the day-to-day medical care of the Virginia football team.

As a U.Va. undergraduate and as part of her graduate studies, Pugh exerted her muscle in learning all she could about football student-athletes. In 2002, that training paid off when she was hired as an assistant trainer at U.Va.

“It was just a matter of graduating at the right time, knowing the right people. These jobs don’t come around very often. Getting a job in football was icing on the cake,” she says.

Pugh is responsible for evaluating injuries; taping ankles, wrists, and thumbs before practice; creating rehabilitation plans for players; and making sure there is plenty of water on the field for practice and game days.

Even though Pugh is in a male-dominated field, she believes she is treated equally with one exception.

“The away facilities are not female-friendly,” she explains—a problem stemming from the design of older sports facilities where the trainer’s area is part of the locker room. So for Pugh, finding a space to work with an injured student-athlete without compromising someone else’s privacy is her ‘biggest challenge.’

KELLI FRYE PUGH

THIRD-TEAM ALL-AMERICAN INGE KAARS SIJPESTEIN WAS A FORCE AT BOTH ENDS OF THE FIELD, LEADING THE CAVALIERS IN BOTH ATTACKING AND PERFORMANCE STATS.

Since 2003, women’s teams have captured 14 ACC titles and one national team title. Last season, three teams—women’s lacrosse, rowing and swimming & diving—captured ACC titles, and 10 of the 13 women’s programs participated in postseason competition.

The athletics department has demonstrated a strong commitment to creating well-supported opportunities for female student-athletes. Facility improvements were made to team locker rooms and to three venues for women’s sports.

- Just over $1.3 million worth of renovations were made to the softball venue to improve the playing field, build new dugouts, install a new scoreboard and lights, and renovate the team locker room
- A new scoreboard and sound system were installed at the Turf Field, home of the Cavalier field hockey team
- A new locker room, work-out area and equipment storage area were recent additions to the rowing boathouse
- Locker rooms for women’s soccer and women’s track & field were renovated

Community Service

In 2007-08 the Student-Athlete Mentors (SAMs) and their teammates engaged in significant community service throughout the year.

Examples of work in the community included:

- The annual Shoot Out for Cancer event raised $6,500 for the Patients and Friends Research Fund at the U.Va. Cancer Center. The event supported Dr. Michael Douvas, an Assistant Professor of Medicine who is working on finding a cure for specific forms of leukemia;
- Student-athletes from various sports worked throughout the year with athletes in the Special Olympics Program. The men’s and women’s lacrosse teams sponsored and worked the Pepsi Special Olympics 10K Race and sponsored a blood drive in the fall;
- The rowing, wrestling, and men’s swimming & diving teams participated in separate Habitat for Humanity building projects;
- The men’s soccer team served meals at the Salvation Army Soup Kitchen and sponsored a blood drive in the spring;
- The ACE Program, created by Football Academics Coordinator Natalie Fitzgerald, organized the efforts of football players along with other student-athletes to visit with and tutor elementary school students throughout the year;
- Under the leadership of Kelly Quinn (women’s soccer) and Pete Ferrara (wrestling), student-athletes from various teams made weekly visits to patients at the University of Virginia Children’s Hospital.

Virginia Cavalier Excitement

Basketball fans at the John Paul Jones Arena enjoyed performances by Dan Dunn’s Paintjam, Duo Design, the Bucket Boys, the Red Panda, a BMX stunt team, high-flying acrobatic dunkers and Steve Max’s Simon Sez Show.

Game day atmosphere at the John Paul Jones Arena included ’Hoo Vision fun from Cavman, the Harris Teeter VIC Card game, the Sabre Shuffle, dance contests, and the always popular Smile and Smooch Cam.

Licensing

The University’s licensing program generated a record $915,964 in royalty revenues, the seventh consecutive year of growth.

Athletics Video Services

A total of 43 animated Cavman episodes were created for ’Hoo Vision that fans anticipate at the start of football and basketball games.

Thirty-one episodes of “Cavalier Sports Weekly,” a television show highlighting Virginia student-athletes, were produced.

The Video Services staff posted 434 video features on VirginiaSportsTV.com, including video highlights, human interest stories, press conferences, and exclusive behind-the-scenes footage.

The Video Services staff produced 133 live events for ’Hoo Vision at Scott Stadium, John Paul Jones Arena, Klöckner Stadium, and Davenport Field.

The video team collaborated with Lincoln Financial Sports and Turner Broadcasting to produce 60 web-streamed pay-per-view games including sports that are not typically televised, giving Virginia fans the opportunity to follow their team closer than ever before.

Attendance and Ticket Sales

7,904 fans attended the men’s soccer game vs. Virginia Tech on Sept. 28, 2007, setting a new Klöckner Stadium soccer attendance record.

8,000 fans attended the men’s lacrosse game vs. Duke on April 12, 2008, setting a new Klöckner Stadium attendance record.

Men’s tennis led the nation in total and average attendance.

Single-game attendance records were set in volleyball (916 vs. Clemson), women’s soccer (2,011 vs. Virginia Tech), wrestling (710 vs. North Carolina), men’s tennis indoor (983 vs. Texas), and men’s tennis outdoor (859 vs. Wake Forest).

Change brings uncertainty in most circles. For Virginia women's rowing coach Kevin Sauer, it merely brings on the annual jigsaw-like experiment that has ultimately produced

ACC dominance and national prominence. Despite what Sauer would classify as a disappointing campaign—a recent 5th-place finish at the NCAA Championships—it remains clear that the Cavaliers reign supreme in the sport inside and out of the region.

And few were shocked when Sauer won yet another ACC Coach of the Year award just minutes after his rowers solidified their ninth-straight title, but he did with the bigger picture in mind.

"The Coach of the Year Award is a nice honor, but it truly reflects on the assistant coaches and the student-athletes that are rowing for you," Sauer said.

One student-athlete that shared the spotlight with Sauer never pulled an oar. Caitlin Mixer, a coxswain with the First Varsity Eight, secured her own trifecta in April, claiming an All-ACC distinction for the third time.

"As the coxswain, Caitlin is directing the boat, and that is not physically hard, but it is mentally hard," Sauer said. "You have to be really bright to pull it off. The team has to really trust you."

"I think [coxswains] have a few white lies that they tell the rowers as they go through the course of a race, but the girls really trusted Caitlin because she earned that trust over the years and did a great job with it," Sauer said.

Mixer was not the lone All-ACC performer in the first varsity eight—the team's top boat—but the five spots honored (out of the nine student-athletes) were justified. "As I explained to the other four rowers, it is up to me to name the top four rowers and the coxswain," Sauer explained. "I defer to seniority, so those are all the upperclassmen, the oldest in the boat."

That leaves time for the remaining Cavaliers to earn their marks as the calendar turns.

Listening to Andrew Carraway discuss his many pursuits and endeavors at U.Va., you might find yourself so engrossed that you forget he actually plays baseball. And by play, we mean at a very high level—as in a trusted starting pitcher that head coach Brian O’Connor hands the Rawlings to most weekends in ACC play.

“I never wanted to do just the baseball thing,” Carraway, a Marietta, Ga. native, said. “I wanted the whole college experience, especially at a place like U.Va. that offers so much.”

At Virginia, he’s found the total package. Carraway immerses himself in giving back to the University and local Charlottesville communities. He began his service as a member of Student Athlete Mentors—or SAM, and sat on its council this past academic year. He is a driving force behind SAM’s annual “Shoot Out for Cancer,” a spring festival and fundraiser for cancer research. Carraway also is heavily involved in Athletes in Action, a student-athlete religious group on Grounds.

Then there is Carraway in the classroom. Enrolled in the McIntire School of Commerce, the right-hander is a two-time ACC All-Academic selection who will serve as a fourth year trustee next fall.

So how does he keep it all straight? And how does he make time?

“It’s all about priorities,” Carraway said. “There are some things you have to cut back on and others that you focus toward. It’s definitely kept me busy always. It has also helped me to branch out and meet so many great people and take advantage of all that’s here at U.Va.”

As for baseball’s place in the pecking order, Carraway leaves little doubt.

“Baseball is absolutely a priority,” Carraway said. “I came to U.Va. fully committed to my team and my coaches, and that will never change.”

Former University of Virginia All-American and current member of the NFL’s Seattle Seahawks, Patrick Kerney (’99) has a passion for pressuring NFL quarterbacks. But opposing signal-callers aren’t the only victims Kerney enjoys rushing. No, the 6’5”, 272-pound ex-Wahoo also likes to attack the net in tennis with a serve-and-volley game that leaves his foes no less terrified than any professional QB.

While Kerney excelled in football, hockey and lacrosse during his high school days, he spent the summer months as a tennis court attendant at the Cape May (N.J.) Tennis Club.

“I’d play against the men who were on vacation with their families,” Kerney said. “They were happy to play a punk, 12-year-old kid.”

With his passion for tennis and U.Va., it’s no wonder Kerney hardly missed a single point of the Cavaliers’ four-day competition at the 2007 National Men’s Team Indoor Championships in Seattle.

He especially enjoyed the prowess of Virginia’s highly regarded singles player, Somdev Devvarman. “He must be like playing against a backboard,” Kerney said. “When it came to crunch time, he was able to take over the match and pull away with his mental toughness.”

Kerney says he’s delighted when Virginia excels in any endeavor.

“I have really great memories from my time in Charlottesville and I don’t know where I’d be without that experience,” said Kerney, who made a generous donation to the McCue Center project that included a renovated weight room and training room in addition to a new football locker room.

“I just believe in the people at the school—the students, professors and coaches. And I want to do whatever I can to keep that experience alive for all those to come.”

Pressure follows every new coach. For most, that pressure is to rebuild, to stabilize a flagging program, to turn a loser into a winner. Kim Lewellen felt plenty of pressure upon taking the helm of the Virginia Women's Golf team in May 2007, but pressure of a very different kind.

"I didn't come into a failing program," Lewellen said. "I came into a great one. I hope I've done Jan Mann some justice. She did a fabulous job recruiting players and developing relationships within the community. I was very fortunate to inherit a program that I didn't have to rebuild at all."

In her rookie campaign, Lewellen—a former All-ACC golfer at the University of North Carolina who came to the Commonwealth after a two-year coaching stint at East Carolina—guided the Wahoos to a second place ACC standing and a 12th place finish at the NCAA Championships. In the process, she was named ACC Coach of the Year.

"I really didn't have any expectations coming in," Lewellen said. "I hadn't seen any of my players play previously, so if you'd told me in August that we'd finish number 12 in the country, I'd be ecstatic."

"U.Va. is by far the easiest place I've been to in terms of recruiting and selling the program to players," Lewellen said. "The academics and overall profile of the University cater to the type of student-athlete that I'm looking for—hard-working and committed. Then there are the facilities. The practice course, the academic facilities, and the training table—they make your job so much easier. When I wear my Virginia shirt out recruiting, I get instant smiles. I don't think I can say that about other places I've been."

Virginia Athletics Foundation

Donors to the Virginia Athletics Foundation have been providing financial support for Virginia Athletics since 1948. Today, gifts to the Foundation not only fund the equivalent of 316.6 scholarships awarded to our student-athletes, but also fund the Academic Affairs program for all student-athletes, operational budgets for the Olympic sports, and the renovation of existing athletic facilities along with new facility construction.

The Foundation provides a way for alumni and friends to assist talented student-athletes in receiving a quality education and competitive experience.

DIRK KATSTRA
Executive Director

9,525 donors, including 1,318 new donors, contributed $14,759,770 to the annual campaign in 2007.

- Gifts made by student-athlete alumni have increased 25% since 2004.
- 720 student-athlete alumni were welcomed back to Grounds during the three-day All-Sports Reunion in the fall. Weekend festivities included the U.Va.-UConn football game and 29 other events.

- Donors, alumni and fans attended 135 events throughout the year—including the football bowl game tailgate, Step Up to the Plate baseball fundraiser, and the spring socials.
- The football priority seating policy was restructured and implemented to maintain the integrity of the giving levels and priority point system taking into account each donor’s lifetime contributions to the Foundation.
- Just over $1.15 million in summer school funding for student-athletes was provided by the Foundation.

Endowment Recognition

The Virginia Athletics Foundation applauds the generous and loyal support of the 9,516 donors who made a gift in 2007. All donors to the annual campaign were recognized in the April issue of Cavalier Corner.

The donors on the following page are the founding contributors to the Virginia Athletics Foundation endowment or donors who made endowment gifts in 2007.

When a gift is made to the endowment, the Foundation invests it for long-term growth. The earnings generated by the investment are used to support the scholarship or operational needs in the area that the donor has chosen to endow.

The current endowment stands at $63 million and consists primarily of funds to support scholarships. In recent years, donors also have made gifts to fund operational endowments for specific sports.

There are now 37 endowed scholarships and eight operational endowments.

We apologize for any errors or omissions and hope you will bring them to our attention.
