UVA standout Malcolm Brogdon has dreams beyond the NBA: fighting world poverty and hunger

By Laken Litman, USA Today (USAToday.com) October 15, 2015

There might not be a more perfect nickname for Malcolm Brogdon than the one his two older brothers gave him years ago.

They call the Virginia guard Humble Moses. It makes sense because Brogdon is modest and his middle name is Moses. He's also a leader.

The redshirt senior, who was a first-team All-Atlantic Coast Conference pick last season while averaging 14 points a game and played for Team USA in the Pan American Games this summer, is entering his fifth and final year at Virginia, which is ranked sixth in the Preseason Coaches Poll. In this time, he's helped coach Tony Bennett restore a program that regularly competes among the ACC's elite and for national titles.

And while putting in work on the court, Brogdon also has been pursuing his master's degree in public policy from the renowned Frank Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy.

Somehow, he finds the time.

"People don't realize how motivated he is," Bennett says. "I think his nickname is awesome because Moses was one of the humblest men. He was the prince of Egypt and had great courage going to Pharaoh. That's like Malcolm. He's very driven, very purposeful in what he does, but he has a humility and is unaffected by things that come his way. He has a plan, and he's going to stay true to who he is.

"He knows what his future is about, and he's going to make a difference."

That future consists of a career in the NBA — he's listed as a second-round pick in some mock drafts but could improve his stock this season — and using the money he earns to fulfill a deeper passion: creating a non-governmental organization (NGO) to help alleviate poverty and hunger in third-world countries.

When Brogdon was 10, he went to Ghana with his family for three weeks. Five years later, he went to Malawi with his grandparents on a mission trip where they delivered school supplies to children. The trips changed his life.

"It made me realize what I have, what we have as a country, what we take for granted, and what people in other countries really need," Brogdon says. "Before I went to Ghana I was really young, but I hadn't realized people were actually starving every day. That just never occurred to me. That experience was really shocking and compelling for me. It made me really want to make a change when I was able to and had the resources to."

In his graduate school classes, Brogdon is learning the processes he'd have to go through to establish a clean water system in Uganda, for example. He's taking a class called Congress 101 as well as Psychology of Leadership. Brogdon has thought about working for the Clinton Foundation or the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation to gain more experience in how NGOs with a lot of money work, so he perhaps could build one from the ground up some day.

"When I first tell them, they're surprised. But now they understand that I'm trying to go after my dreams," he says about what his teammates and coaches think of his plans. "I have dreams after basketball. There are issues I want to attack in the real world."

Bennett's support runs deep. It's one of the reasons Brogdon committed to Virginia. He knew the coach would allow him to take full advantage of the academic opportunities.

Bennett changes the team's practice schedule to accommodate Brogdon's classes. He has 2 1/2-hour seminars that are offered once a week and can't change, so Bennett is flexible.

"To me, it's worth it," Bennett says. "Malcolm has been such an important part of this program, and if we can help serve him, we can make some adjustments."

Brogdon's days are jam-packed, and there's not much downtime. He says he gets perhaps one or two hours to himself at night and watches movies to decompress.

Brogdon lives alone in prestigious on-campus housing units in a building originally designed and built by Thomas Jefferson. Hundreds of students apply for 40 spots in Jefferson's Academical Village — which is called The Range for graduate students — and are chosen by a selection committee. According to the UVa website, this area of housing is reserved for the university's most accomplished graduate students, some of whom are pursuing careers as physicists, lawyers or surgeons. Edgar Allan Poe lived on The Range in 1826.

Each Range room is humbly furnished with a twin bed, desk, chair, dresser and there's a rocking chair outside. There's a phone and Ethernet port with high-speed Internet, and a sink to brush your teeth. There's no air conditioning and a radiator that works sometimes. Bathrooms are walking distance.

Brogdon is the first scholarship athlete to live on The Range in Bennett's time at Virginia.

Last season didn't turn out as planned for the Cavaliers. They ran out to a 19-0 record and a No. 2 ranking and finished the regular season 28-2. But UVa lost its ACC tournament semifinal vs. North Carolina (tied for No. 1 in the Coaches Poll) and was booted from the NCAA tournament by seventh-seeded Michigan State (No. 13) in the Round of 32.

"I really think that was a mental lapse, and that comes from fatigue," Brogdon says. "We have to sustain what we do during the regular season. The postseason is when everything counts. The last two years we've relaxed after having great regular seasons. We need more of a drive."

The good news for the Cavaliers is that nearly everyone is coming back and the program is starting out in the Top 10. Brogdon thinks it's the best team Virginia has had in his time there.

"We're well-rounded from top to bottom," he says. "We have veterans, we have transfers that can play, not many freshmen, a strong senior class with good leadership, and we know what to expect. We have a defense that will carry us and a team that believes in ourselves."

And Humble Moses will be the leader.

"He has command. A powerful voice," Bennett says. "He's a strong man in so many ways. He's well-respected by his peers. I see it.

"He's taking guys with him like, 'We're going to work out in the morning. I'm going to show you how to work out, how to drive.'

"To me, that's next-level leadership."

Elder statesman Gill leads with a smile

By Jeff White, VirginiaSports.com October 29, 2015

CHARLOTTE, N.C. -- He's 23 years old and has been in college for how many years? Four? Five? Six?

"Forever," Anthony Gill said. Then he flashed his trademark smile Wednesday morning in a Ritz-Carlton conference room.

"Not as long as Malcolm," Gill said, glancing to his left, where University of Virginia teammate Malcolm Brogdon sat in front of a group of reporters.

"I feel like Malcolm's been playing since Ralph Sampson was, back in the day. But, yeah, it does feel like I've been here for a long time. It's been a fun experience. I've been through a lot of battles, a lot of wars, and I'm looking forward to this last year."

In college football, fifth-year seniors are common. Not so in college basketball, but the Cavaliers have two, Brogdon and Gill, who rank among the nation's best players.

At ACC Operation Basketball, Brogdon was named the conference's preseason co-player of the year (along with North Carolina senior Marcus Paige) on Wednesday. Gill was voted onto the preseason All-ACC second team.

Each sat out the 2012-13 season at UVA: Brogdon while recovering from foot surgery, and Gill after transferring in from South Carolina.

"That year for me was big," Gill, a native of High Point, told reporters Wednesday at the ACC's annual media day for men's hoops.

"It really helped me develop my offensive game. I didn't really grow that much defensively that year, but offensively I was able to really understand who I was as a player and what I needed to do to score the ball and help my team.

"Off the court, I really grew in my faith, and in that way Coach [Ritchie] McKay and Coach [Brad] Soucie were big mentors for me. I'm sad to see that they're both gone now" -- McKay is head coach at Liberty, where his assistants include Soucie -- "but I'm really happy for them. They were a big part of my life and helped me grow as a person into who I am to this day."

The 6-8, 230-pound Gill is a person to whom others naturally gravitate, in part because he's perpetually upbeat and refuses to take himself too seriously.

"It's always nice to have a leader on the team that is not always serious, that can be personable, can laugh, can have fun," said Brogdon, a 6-5 guard who was a second-team All-American in 2014-15. "And that's A.G. He's the goofiest."

Gill said: "A lot of times people forget that this is a game. We take it so seriously a lot of the time ... There's certain times you have to be stern with [teammates] and let them know this is serious and we have to do this, but it's also a game.

"That's my goal, to lead this team and to make sure they're having fun while they're doing it."

And that's fine with head coach Tony Bennett.

"I think it's a good message," Bennett said. "You have to be able to enjoy it. What's the line from The Shining? All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Bennett recently read an interview with Gregg Popovich in which the San Antonio Spurs' coach was asked what qualities he looks for in players.

"No. 1, he said, 'I look for players with a sense of humor, that don't take themselves too seriously, can make fun of themselves, enjoy it and have fun,' " Bennett told reporters. "I thought of Anthony right away, but I think that's a good way to be, because even as coaches we have fun."

Do not, however, mistake Gill's playfulness for a lack of commitment. Like Brogdon, Gill is relentless on the court, whether he's pursuing rebounds or driving to the basket or playing his part in the Cavaliers' rugged Pack-Line defense.

"When we step in between the lines, it's time to work," said Brogdon, who, incidentally, is about three months younger than Gill.

"A.G.'s personality is aggressive and fierce, basketball-wise ... And a lot of the time it's me and him going at it in practice. We're always on the opposite team, and we go at each other."

Gill's story is a familiar one to many UVA fans. At Charlotte Christian School, he was a class behind Akil Mitchell, who went on to have an outstanding career at Virginia. Gill signed with South Carolina as a Charlotte Christian senior and started 26 games for the Gamecocks in 2011-12, averaging 7.6 points and 4.7 rebounds.

South Carolina changed coaches after his freshman season, though, and Gill decided to transfer. He also considered Ohio State and North Carolina before choosing Virginia.

His transition from one Division I program to another was not seamless.

"Every school tells you that they play defense," Gill said Wednesday, smiling, "but once you get here to UVA, you actually have to play defense."

And that was not his forte early in his Virginia career. As a redshirt sophomore in 2013-14, Gill averaged 8.6 points and 4.0 rebounds and shot a team-high 58.7 percent from the floor. He averaged 19.8 minutes per game, but he would have played more had his defense consistently met Bennett's standards.

In 2014-15, on a team that led the nation in scoring defense, Gill showed marked improvement at that end of the floor. In voting by ACC coaches, Gill was named to the league's all-defensive team.

"To a lot of people, it came as a shock," Gill said of his honor. "But I really worked hard for that. I wanted to be a great defender. Coach Bennett's system, the first year I played in it, he would never have imagined that I would have been on that list.

"But I really worked hard on it. I want to be someone Coach Bennett can look at and say, `I know he's going to play defense. I know he's going to lock him up. He's not going to struggle guarding this person.' "

His teammates deserve credit, too, Gill said. Players such as Mitchell, Joe Harris and Darion Atkins "pushed me every day to be a great defender and not let me be just mediocre," Gill said.

Bennett said Gill has "definitely made strides, and he's become more explosive and athletic, and he understands that's going to help us win, and it's going to help him. So he has definitely improved, and he still has some [room for improvement]."

An anthropology major, Gill is engaged to his high school sweetheart, Jenna Jamil, and their wedding is set for early next April, less than a week after the NCAA championship game.

Virginia entered the NCAA tournament as a No. 1 seed in 2013-14 and a No. 2 seed in 2014-15. Each season, though, Michigan State ended UVA's postseason run. The Spartans ousted the Cavaliers in the Sweet Sixteen in 2014 and in the round of 32 last season.

Those games still motivate him, Gill said, but it's not "so much the fact that Michigan State beat us, it's the fact that we lost. I want to go as far as I can in the tournament. That's what we all want to do: me and Malcolm, Mike Tobey, Evan Nolte, Caid Kirven. This is our last year, and we want to go far in the tournament."

In the ACC preseason poll released Wednesday, Virginia was picked to finish second in the conference, behind UNC. The Cavaliers have won back-to-back ACC regular-season titles, finishing 30-7 overall in 2013-14 and 30-4 in 2015-16.

Virginia, ranked No. 6 in the preseason USA Today coaches' poll, wants to take another step forward in 2015-16.

"Not to overshadow anything we did last year with the 30 wins, or anything like that, but we want to go further in the [NCAA] tournament," Gill said. "It's just one of the goals we have as a team."

Their NCAA tourney disappointments have taught the `Hoos that there's "no second chance," Gill said. "We played Michigan State two years in a row, and both times they got an early lead on us, and that's not what we want to have. We want to be able to have a team that's jumping out on people, and not having a team that has to fight back from the deficit."

Malcolm Brogdon knows his impact can extend well beyond the hardwood

By David Gardner, Sports Illustrated (SI.com) October 30, 2015

About six months ago, Malcolm Brogdon mulled leaving Virginia for the NBA. At ACC Media Day prior to the season he had promised that he would return for a fifth season no matter what—that it was "set in stone." But still, he wanted to consider all his options this spring. Had he accomplished all he could at Virginia? He had bounced back from a broken foot suffered his freshman year to start 71 consecutive games in two seasons, earning All-ACC honors twice and becoming a second-team All-America a year ago. He was weeks away from graduating with a history degree, too. But when he called his mother to seek advice, she reminded him that he had unfinished business.

His thoughts first turned to an elusive national championship. For all the Cavaliers' regular-season success, the NCAA tournament had been cruel the past two seasons. As a No. 1 seed in 2014 and a No. 2 seed last year, they were bounced by Michigan State in the Sweet 16 and second round, respectively. They lost both games by a combined seven points. But Jann Adams, Brogdon's mom, wasn't thinking of trophies when she asked her son to stay. She was thinking about his education, which she deemed far from finished. She wanted him to stay to get his graduate degree.

"In my family, graduating and getting your bachelor's is just the beginning," Brogdon says. "It's only expected. You're underachieving if you don't strive for more than that."

Brogdon's great-grandparents were college educated. His grandfather on his mother's side has a master's in divinity, and his grandmother a doctorate in education. His father, Mitchell, is a lawyer and mediator in Atlanta; his mother has a Ph.D. in clinical psychology and is the associate provost for faculty at Morehouse College. His oldest brother, Gino, is a practicing attorney in Atlanta. His other brother, John, is also in law school at Howard. And every one of them believes that Malcolm is the most dedicated and driven member of the family.

It's a sentiment that his teammates and coaches echo as well. No one was surprised when Brogdon decided to stay for a graduate senior season, but everyone—especially coach Tony Bennett—was grateful. In his house, Brogdon is sometimes called Humble Moses, a riff on his most notable attribute and his middle name. But around the locker room, he's picked up another nickname: president. It's partly a joke about how carefully he speaks and how intensely he approaches everything from practice to academics. But it's also a serious reflection by those around him that his most significant accomplishments will likely come off the court.

When he was about 10 years old, Brogdon went with his family to Ghana. Although his family holds a strong Christian faith—that grandfather with a divinity degree is a pastor—this trip was designed to be more educational and service-oriented than spiritual. Most nights, they'd listen to lectures on the country's history; during the day, they either toured the capital, Accra, or worked at a daycare facility.

It didn't take Brogdon long to see the differences between what he'd grown up with and the situation for the children here. When he played them in soccer—his favorite sport at the time—he noticed that few of his opponents wore shoes. And they had to stop playing every day when the region's trash was dumped not 20 feet from the school.

But the most powerful experience came near the end of the trip, as they were boarding a bus to leave a university tour. It was near lunchtime, and everyone was hungry. The tour guide had prepared sack lunches of rice and chicken and distributed them to the group. Outside the bus, children were banging on the windows, begging for something to eat. The adults decided that they would give their lunches away, but they didn't make the children follow suit—instead, they let them decide for themselves. Brogdon and his brothers reached out the windows and offered their lunches.

"As a young kid, you don't want to give up your food," he says. "But then you realize that they're really hungry, and they really don't have anything. No one should be living like that. It's not fair."

The entire family was transformed by that trip. Brogdon is the baby of the family, and it took some time for his feelings to manifest into action. But it wasn't more than four years before he returned to Africa, this time to Malawi on a missions trip. He had a sense even then that he wanted to devote his life to helping others, but he wasn't sure how that would work yet. In the interim, he focused on school and sports.

He quit soccer in eighth grade so he could focus solely on basketball. Around that time, his parents divorced, and Adams assumed most of the responsibility for Malcolm's extracurricular activities. She had a rule for her sons—as long as they maintained a B average in school, she would let them invest however much time they wanted in any other activity. Gino chose wrestling and football while John and Malcolm focused on basketball. Malcolm, as usual, was the most serious. He would wake up 5:30 a.m. to have breakfast and then work out with a personal trainer. After school, he'd have practice, then take practice shots for hours before coming in to do his homework and watch basketball on TV. "When he decided this was the path for him," Gino says, "he committed to it completely. He ate, slept and breathed basketball."

In the summer of 2010, he met Bennett, who had just become Virginia's coach in 2009, at Peach Jam. Bennett thought it might be too late to get Brogdon, a 6'5" guard who held offers mainly from mid-major programs at the time but hadn't yet committed. He called Brogdon anyway. "You could round it up to 10, but it couldn't have taken more than eight minutes into our first conversation for the both of us to know that this was right," Bennett says now. "I came to Virginia to be able to recruit players like Malcolm."

His grandmother Dolly had wanted him to go to Harvard, to which he had an offer, but he felt that Virginia would give him the best combination of education and elite basketball competition. He also made the decision for practical purposes: Ivy League schools don't offer scholarships, but ACC schools do. Although his parents would have gladly paid for him to go to Harvard, he wouldn't allow it. "He was always like that," Gino says. "Even when he was in high school, he would evaluate the cost and benefit of working out with trainers. If they weren't helping him enough, he would stop working with them because he didn't want to waste our mom's money."

After becoming Georgia's Mr. Basketball as a senior, Brogdon enrolled at Virginia. He played 28 games his freshman year before breaking a bone in his foot in March and missing the final two games of the year and the postseason. The injury was so bad that he had to redshirt the following season as well. "My surgeon told me that most people don't come back from this injury—it's in a part of your foot where you get very little blood circulation and it's very hard to heal perfectly. The chances were low I could come back."

As he pondered a life without basketball, he and Bennett discussed the Bible's book of Job. In the story, Job loses everything from his family to his wealth to his health, but maintains his faith. Brogdon realized in that year how much basketball meant to him—that he would pursue it as long as possible but that it wouldn't define his entire life. He decided then that he would use his extra year of eligibility to earn a graduate degree. "That injury really opened up doors and opportunities for me that I couldn't have seen without it," Brogdon says. "I'm very thankful for it now."

After the 2014 season, during which Brogdon averaged a team-leading 12.7 points, 5.4 rebounds, 2.7 assists and 1.2 steals in 31.4 minutes a game, he and his brothers joined their mother on a trip to Brazil. Adams had been working on an international science training program there and decided to bring the boys along for a family trip where they could all experience another country together as adults.

There's a joke among the Brogdon boys that Malcolm has no personality. Mostly, it's a result of John's and Gino's strong personalities swelling over Malcolm's, but it's also a result of Malcolm's intense focus on his goals.

"Sometimes I sound like Allen Iverson when I'm trying to get him to go out with us at nights," Gino says. "I'm like, you're talking about not going out because of practice. Not a game, but practice. But we did manage to get him to go out with us a couple times in Brazil."

When Brogdon saw the poverty in the favelas of Rio de Janeiro right next to hotels that he knew would make hundreds of thousands of dollars a night at the Olympics and World Cup in the following years, it solidified in his mind what he wanted to do after basketball—start a non-profit or NGO (non-governmental organization). "After basketball is over, I want all my energy to go to that," Brogdon says. "That's my true passion. I want to transform people's lives in third-world countries—give them clean water and food."

This season, Brogdon is enrolled in Virginia's prestigious Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy. He also lives on the Range, an exclusive graduate housing community designed by Thomas Jefferson to be a place where professors and deans and students would interact daily. And he's also the unquestioned leader of Virginia's basketball team, which SI.com projects to compete with Duke and North Carolina for the ACC title. It also projects Brogdon to lead the Cavs in scoring for the second season in a row.

The balance of basketball and school keeps him plenty busy. He wakes up at 7:30 and is usually the first player at the gym. He works out till 10:30 then goes to class from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. or 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. His 2.5-hour blocks of class forced Bennett to alter the team's practice schedule, but he was happy to accommodate. After class, Brodgon eats and goes to practice from 3 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Then it's another meal before heading back to class from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. If he has an hour or two to watch something on Netflix at the end of the day, he's lucky.

But despite how busy he is, he's always looking for more opportunities to take advantage of while he's at school. A couple weeks ago, he called his mother to ask if she could think of a creative solution to help him go on a trip to D.C. with a class he wasn't even taking. "I was about to tell him, "I don't think you can take this trip, Malcolm," Adams says. "He had two assignments due and he'd barely be back in time for practice. But he didn't want to hear that. He hung up with me and called his advisor, and when he called me back, he had already figured everything out and was on his way."

In D.C., he met with Virginia's senators and came back inspired about changing people's lives through policy. Maybe, he thought, he could work in government instead of at the Clinton Foundation or the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, which had been his two targets. Maybe, he thought, he could see himself in D.C. Maybe that nickname, president, is more meaningful than he might have ever imagined.

The humility of Tony Bennett, Mr. Charlottesville

By Whitey Reid, Daily Progress November 7, 2015

The line started in the middle of the University of Virginia practice gym, weaved out of the gym, through a set of double doors, down a hallway, through another set of double doors, past an exit sign, into the main gym at the John Paul Jones Arena and, finally, ended at the table of the day's main attraction.

There was such demand that entry to the line was cut off after 45 minutes, a good 45 minutes before the event was scheduled to conclude. It was for Virginia's Meet the Team Day last month, but the man at the table, instead, wanted to meet each fan.

"Where did you find that?" he said excitedly when a fan handed him a picture from his days as an NBA player. He doesn't just sign items and send fans on their way. He greets each one, making the fan feel he or she is the most important person at that very moment.

Meet Tony Bennett, the man these fans would have waited in a line miles long for just to say hello.

Meet Tony Bennett, the UVa men's basketball coach.

Meet Tony Bennett, Mr. Charlottesville.

He has led the Cavaliers to back-to-back ACC regular-season championships, success that has garnered the highest expectations around here in more than 30 years. The Cavaliers start the season No. 6 in the Associated Press poll, the highest preseason rating since 1982-83.

And he has had that success with an aw-shucks Midwestern demeanor and humbleness that endears him to almost anyone he comes across and built a popularity that likely could get him elected to any local office he wanted.

"Whenever anybody asks me about him, I say what you see and what you hear in the media is really how he is, and it's not a front," said Virginia senior Evan Nolte. "I think, especially in his position, that's extremely impressive — when you have that many things going on and can really be that genuine and humble.

"It's the reason I came here."

At every home Virginia basketball game, the loudest cheers during pre-game introductions are for the 46-year-old Bennett.

He's appreciated. He's respected. He's beloved.

'Exactly what you would want'

Before Bennett arrived from Washington State seven years ago, UVa was a blip on the college basketball map. Two consecutive ACC regular-season championships later and a 30-4 record last year, and that's no longer the case.

Last season, ESPN's "College GameDay" television show came to Charlottesville for the first time. Bennett has been referred to by some pundits as "a young Coach K" (a reference to Duke Hall-of-Famer Mike Krzyzewski).

That remains to be seen, but the Wisconsin native certainly seems on his way to joining the likes of Terry Holland, Barry Parkhill and Ralph Sampson on Virginia's Mount Rushmore.

After his first road game as Virginia coach in 2009 — an ugly loss at South Florida — Bennett's remarks upon entering the post-game news conference weren't about the game, but about the fact that one of the sportswriters in the room had just gotten a haircut.

On another road trip, Bennett noticed that the team's bus driver was eating by himself at a table, so he pulled up a chair and dined with him.

Bennett has a gift for connecting with people from all walks of life.

A few weeks ago, he attended the funeral of longtime UVa basketball supporter Frank Birckhead. Bennett's wife, Laurel, opened the proceedings by reading scripture.

A speaker at the funeral decided the best way to sum up Birckhead was to read something Bennett had said about him.

The Bennetts stayed around for over an hour afterward, talking freely with the guests — whether they knew them or not — and were some of the last people to leave.

Holland, who was one of the pallbearers, said Virginia is lucky to have someone with Bennett's values.

"He's just exactly what you would want out of a college coach," he said.

At a recent event, Virginia President Teresa A. Sullivan said she came away extremely impressed with Bennett's players. Sullivan said that every time she went to sit down, a player would pull her chair out for her.

Sullivan said the Virginia players are most certainly a reflection of their coach.

Sullivan called Bennett a good representative of not just the university, but basketball as a whole. She said it all starts with the way he conducts himself on the sidelines.

"I don't ever have to worry about ESPN having to cut away from Tony because he's saying some [bad] word — and people can read lips," Sullivan said.

"Usually when some player has made some boneheaded move, he's not over there yelling at them. He squats down to their level and talks with them — like a teacher. He really coaches. He doesn't yell. I think that just sets such a great model for what coaching is. Coaching is a form of teaching, and I particularly appreciate that.

"He is not ashamed to say he has a set of values, and the university is not ashamed to say it has a set of values. And Tony's values and the university's values align very well."

'He just gets things done'

Bennett's popularity extends to his peers.

Last spring, Virginia men's tennis coach Brian Boland asked Bennett to give a pep talk to his team just before its run to an NCAA championship.

"One of the things people don't understand about Tony is how funny he is," Boland said. "I've always enjoyed the humor that he brings to some extremely stressful situations. I thought it would be good to bring in somebody who had a different voice, but also someone who has a great perspective. Someone who has been there and done that at the highest levels, both as a player and as a coach. He has a great perspective about what's really important. I just thought it would be a refreshing opportunity.

"It's something I think the players will remember forever."

Bennett appreciates the support from fans, the love from the community, but the popularity is something he really shies away from.

When last year's ESPN "GameDay" festivities were finished, Bennett was happy. Pomp and circumstance? Not for Bennett.

"Tony's about getting things done," said Bennett's older sister, Kathi. "He's a grinder. He just gets things done. He has the ability to put blinders on.

"I think he knows how temporary fame can be and how fleeting it is and has put his stock in what matters. I think that's what makes him humble and all those things."

Kathi Bennett said her brother learned what his priorities should be early in life.

"I think we witnessed it in our family from our mom and dad and that kind of grew into us," she said. "We were blessed with great roots. Our mom and dad did a great job of bringing Christ into our lives at an early age and we tried to bottle that. A lot of writers don't want to write it, but I just think his faith is so strong.

"I think Laurel grounds him like there's no tomorrow. And I think he realizes how temporary the fame and all the glory really is. I think he's just been instilled with who he is and what matters."

Popularity and humility

Bennett's "problem" right now is that the more his team wins, the more he has to talk about it. A Virginia media relations employee said demand for Bennett has skyrocketed since Virginia won the 2014 ACC Tournament and earned a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

This season, the team has "humility" — along with the program's other four pillars (passion, unity, servanthood and thankfulness) — embroidered on the inside of their game jerseys.

"The pillar of humility is really important for a basketball player — or really anybody," Bennett said during a recent interview. "For us, it's, 'Don't think too highly of yourself.' You don't want to turn people off. You don't want to turn this community off. You don't want to turn your fellow students off — like walking around and beating your chest or, like we say, 'With swag.' But also don't think too lowly of yourself. That's false humility.

"It's knowing who you are and having a true identity — knowing what you do well and knowing what you don't do well. For a team, we have to know what our identity is and who we are and how we're going to be successful. I think each individual player needs to stay true to who they are."

Bennett said finding that perfect balance isn't easy.

"Sports has elevated [us] to such a level," he said. "I know how fleeting that is. I always love this quote of, 'Don't be so humble, you're not good.' I always laugh when I think about that quote. There are so many gifted professors, doctors, teachers, moms, dads — people who have unbelievable positions, but it's just the way it is.

"When you're in sports, if things have gone well, you probably get too much credit. And when things aren't going well, you may be getting too much blame. But that's the position I'm in. But I know, having played professionally and having been around the game, how fleeting it is. It's not my motivation; it's not what drives me. I'm fortunate to be in this spot, and I know where the favor has come from or the good things have happened in my life, and I understand that. I think that always helps you when you're realistic about things."

Before Virginia's recent Blue and White Scrimmage, there was — and it was probably by design — no introduction for the reigning two-time ACC Coach of the Year.

But that didn't stop fans from breaking into a "To-ny Ben-nett!" chant.

Bennett has, in his own low-key style, become one of Charlottesville's biggest celebrities, joining the likes of Howie Long, John Grisham and Dave Matthews.

Just don't tell him that.

"You'd never think Coach Bennett was a big-time coach if you saw him walking down the street," said Malcolm Brogdon, the ACC's preseason co-player of the year.

"I think that's the great thing about him. His humbleness is really what explains him the most — on and off the court."

Virginia basketball still avoids flash, but aims to make splash in March

By Gene Wang, Washington Post November 11, 2015

Virginia's Malcolm Brogdon and Anthony Gill sat patiently at their respective tables during ACC men's basketball media day several weeks ago, waiting to see whether more reporters were going to arrive.

They had just finished fielding the first round of questions, and as important contributors to the Cavaliers' consecutive ACC regular season titles and two straight 30-win seasons, the redshirt seniors figured they would be in high demand. So they braced for another lengthy session in front of cameras and microphones.

They got off pretty easy. Media instead swarmed around Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski and his players as well as North Carolina's Roy Williams and players representing the Tar Heels. There was even elevated attention paid to a pair of Louisville players, both transfers, in light of the absence of their embattled coach, Rick Pitino, who avoided the proceedings under advice from legal counsel.

All of which was just fine with Brogdon and Gill. Let everyone else swoon over the blue bloods. The Cavaliers need no validation from anyone other than Coach Tony Bennett and his staff as they seek much more than another ACC championship. This season, which will begin Friday at home against Morgan State, is about getting the Final Four in Houston after bowing out in the NCAA tournament's round of 32 as a No. 2 seed.

"We've always been underdogs, and that's the mentality we like to have," said Brogdon, Virginia's scoring leader the past two seasons. "That's just fuel for the fire for us. It's motivation. I think motivation is great, and I think regardless of expectations, regardless of people ignoring us, we're a program that prides itself sticking with what we do best."

Which is play defense longer and with more purpose than any other program in the country. At least that's the message from Bennett, the reigning two-time ACC coach of the year who has directed the Cavaliers to 16 conference victories in each of the past two seasons. Virginia is the only program in the storied history of the ACC to accomplish the feat.

Last season Virginia led the nation in scoring defense (51.5 points allowed per game) and became the first school in 18 years to hold three opponents to fewer than 30 points. The Cavaliers' only regular season losses in the ACC came to five-time NCAA champion Duke, 69-63, in Charlottesville, and at Louisville, 59-57. They also fell in the ACC semifinals to North Carolina, which is ranked No. 1 in this year's Associated Press preseason poll.

The Cavaliers are highly regarded by poll voters as well, even if their lack of flash or off-court drama reduces their curb appeal. They enter this season ranked No. 6. That's their highest preseason position since 1982-83, when Virginia opened as the top-ranked team in the country behind center Ralph Sampson, the three-time player of the year and No. 1 overall selection in the 1983 NBA draft.

"You're going into games where [opponents] are trying to play their best, even the so-called big boys, and that means you've got to be ready for that," Bennett said.

"You've got to embrace that. You've got to understand that, but how we're going to be our best is we're not going to change much of how we've been. We have an identity. We're going to stick to it."

No players better represent Bennett's rugged philosophy than Brogdon and Gill, both of whom were selected to the ACC all-defensive team last season. Gill, a 6-foot-8 forward, also established career highs in points (11.6 per game) and rebounds (6.5), leading Virginia in that category as well as in field goal percentage (.582) and steals (29).

Brogdon, a second-team all-American, averaged 14 points last season, helping to stabilize the Cavaliers during the absence of Justin Anderson, Virginia's second-leading scorer. Anderson missed eight games with a broken finger and mononucleosis, but the Cavaliers went 7-1 over that stretch. At the end of the season, the junior guard declared for the NBA draft, going No. 21 overall to the Dallas Mavericks.

Thus even more of the scoring burden this season may fall to Brogdon, who set a career high with 25 points in the 71-67 loss to the Tar Heels. It was the second-most points of any Virginia player in a game last season. Brogdon followed that performance with 22 points in a 79-67 win against Belmont in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"Just to go further than we did last year," Gill said when asked what motivates the Cavaliers. "Not to discredit anything we did throughout the whole year.

"We won 30 games last year, but I think everybody knows that we want to do more. I feel like we have the talent to do more. It's just up to us to go out there and have the mentality to really want it, and that's what we're going to do this year."

Virginia season story lines

Clock management: Among the many rule changes taking effect this season isreducing the shot clock to 30 seconds, which stands to benefit the Cavaliers defensively. Because of its relentless pressure, Virginia frequently forces opponents to get down to the final seconds of the shot clock before releasing the ball. Teams are going to have even less time to run their offense this season with five fewer seconds on the clock.

The other side of the equation, though, is if the Cavaliers are going to be able to get good shots on a regular basis. Virginia ranked 32nd nationally last season in offensive efficiency, but that was with Anderson.

Center stage: Senior Mike Tobey (7 feet, 260 pounds) is set to become the starter at center following the departure of Darion Atkins, who was the ACC defensive player of the year. Tobey, the ACC's sixth man of the year, started 11 games last season and played in all 34, averaging 6.9 points and 5.1 rebounds, both career highs. He also had 22 blocks, which were second on the Cavaliers behind Atkins.

Next man up: Replacing Anderson is going to be no easy task, but the most likely candidates for complementary scoring are 6-5 sophomore guard Marial Shayok, 6-8 senior forward Evan Nolte or 6-7 sophomore forward Isaiah Wilkins. Shayok averaged 3.8 points last season and was the only freshman to appear in all 34 games.

Anthony Gill is Virginia's prankster, pack-line protector and preacher

By Katherine Clemmons, USA Today November 30, 2015

Devon Hall should have learned. The second-year Virginia player knew his teammate Anthony Gill was a prankster. But several times last year, Hall walked into his room to go to sleep and forgot Gill might pull one of his pranks.

On those occasions, Hall pulled back the covers and his lotion bottle fell to the ground. As soon as it hit the floor, lotion squirted everywhere. Gill had strategically placed the bottle between the bed and covers in the precise spot for it to fall, upside-down, and erupt. "That worked until Devon started aiming for me with his pellet gun," Gill said, laughing. "Then I stopped."

While he may be known for his jokester persona off the court, Gill is all business on it. His physical, strong interior play will be a major factor in determining the success of last year's ACC regular-season champions, and whether they'll earn a return to the NCAA Tournament as a top seed this year. More immediately, he will be vital to No. 10 Virginia's ACC-Big Ten Challenge matchup at Ohio State on Tuesday.

"He's a great personality to have off the floor as well as on it," teammate Evan Nolte says. "He really brightens the mood wherever you are. There are times that get tough and you don't want to be a certain place but when you have guys like that, it's really awesome."

Gill began his college career at South Carolina, starting 26 of 31 games in a 10-win season that saw thencoach Darrin Horn fired at season's end.

Gill didn't want to go through the rebuilding hurdles of a new coach, so he decided to transfer and chose Virginia partly because he is a strong Christian and wanted a program that emphasized character alongside basketball. "It's more about building a great person here than a great basketball dynasty — that comes second," Gill says. "If we win 20 games or if we win 30, as long as we're building good people and I'm invested in their lives and able to help them grow, I'm fine with that."

Virginia coach Tony Bennett welcomed him party based on something he saw at a camp a few years earlier. "We were so focused on the class a year ahead of him," Bennett says. "But I remember someone said of Anthony, 'This is a Virginia-type guy — strong character, loves the game.'"

Later, while recruiting Gill's high school teammate Akil Mitchell, Bennett visited and saw Gill play. "I was like, 'Oh this guy is really good, too,' " Bennett says. "I thought, 'Shoot, too late.' "

But regrets became rewards before long.

During Gill's first year at Virginia, he led the team in scoring in seven games and scored in double figures in 16 games. He struggled defensively, however, which was unusual for a player who got a greater thrill from hustle plays and drawing charges as a high school player at Charlotte Christian, alma mater of Steph and Seth Curry. But Virginia assistant coaches kept him after practice, walking him through the nuances of the Cavaliers' pack-line defense.

That persistence paid off. Last year, Gill was named to the All-ACC Defensive Team by ACC coaches while leading Virginia in overall offensive efficiency, rebounding, field goal percentage, steals and double-doubles. He shot 58.4% from the field, delivering consistent offense after Virginia lost offensive firepower when Justin Anderson was injured.

"He's just so aggressive, I love that about him," Bennett says. "He trains hard, he attacks the weight room and he puts in the extra hours."

Gill spent his offseason hours working on his offensive game. "Guys would play off of me knowing I like the physicality," Gill says. "So adding that other dimension of being able to shoot, so they have to play up on me and I can pass them, that's what I worked on. Developing my jump shot so they have to respect me out there, too."

Gill typically arrives early to practice, shooting 100 or so baskets beforehand. He stays afterward as well, prepping his body for working through fatigue.

"Anthony is even better this year," says fourth-year starter Malcolm Brogdon. "He's shooting a lot better and has really worked on his mid-range jump shot. His feel for the game has gotten even better. He knows when to pass it out, when to go to work and when his team needs him to be aggressive. His ball-screen defense, his on-ball defense is really good."

Gill's is opportunistic in his play, opportunistic in his pranks, and opportunistic when it comes to helping others. He leads a team Bible study and in May traveled to the Dominican Republic, where he saw some of the area's poorest residents walking without shoes. Inspired by that, Gill plans to run a shoe drive in December, asking friends, fans and fellow students to donate shoes to be sent to the Dominican Republic.

"He's really compassionate," Bennett says. "He's a very good player and a very good person: kind, fun, a hard worker accompanied with his desire to care for his teammates. That's a really good mix."

Gill also took the opportunity on the Dominican Republic trip to propose to his fiancée, Jenna. The two will be married in Charlotte on April 8, 2015 — four days after the national championship game.

"Win the national championship, get married and then graduate," Gill says with a smile. "That's the plan."

And perhaps pulling a few more pranks along the way.

Hall sees perseverance rewarded

By Jeff White, VirigniaSports.com December 16, 2015

CHARLOTTESVILLE -- For the final five games of the University of Virginia's 2014-15 basketball season, Devon Hall sat and watched from the bench. Hall was healthy and in uniform, but head coach Tony Bennett chose to use other backcourt reserves, first in Virginia's regular-season finale and then in the ACC and NCAA tournaments.

This was not the role Hall envisioned when he enrolled at UVA in June 2013, but he didn't pout. Instead, he responded exactly as the Cavaliers' coaching staff hoped he would: by redoubling his efforts in the gym and weight room during the offseason.

"He just worked hard," Bennett said.

Hall has seen his perseverance rewarded this season. The 6-5 redshirt sophomore from Virginia Beach has carved out a meaningful role for No. 8 UVA (8-1), which hosts No. 12 Villanova (8-1) at noon Saturday at John Paul Jones Arena. ESPN2 will televise the game, which is sold out.

"It feels good just to be able to get back in the swing of playing games," Hall said after a recent practice at JPJ. He's averaging 19.7 minutes per game and already has totaled 48 points, 16 assists and seven steals, with only four turnovers. As a redshirt freshman, Hall averaged 10.6 minutes and recorded 42 points, 18 assists and nine steals in his 23 appearances, and he turned the ball over 12 times.

"You wait your turn, you work, you develop, and maybe it doesn't happen in the first year or two," Bennett said. "But he's a hard worker ... and he's given us big lifts. He's just showed up and punched the clock, and I'll take guys like that who are blue-collar guys all day. He's got a great attitude, and his character is strong."

Against Morgan State in the season-opener, Hall scored a career-high 13 points. In another one-sided victory three games later, against Long Beach State in the Charleston (S.C.) Classic, he hit 4 of 5 shots from beyond the 3-point arc. For the season he's averaging 5.3 points and 2.6 rebounds per game.

"It's exciting, I know that much," Hall said. "Last year was a little bit up and down, and the year before that, obviously, I redshirted. But it's fun, getting back in the swing of playing basketball and being able to get minutes in and help wherever I can, whether that's me out there for eight minutes or me out there for 25."

A graduate of Cape Henry Collegiate in Virginia Beach, Hall arrived at UVA at the same time as another guard, London Perrantes, and they bonded immediately. Their college basketball careers, though, have followed different arcs.

Perrantes started 33 games at point guard as a freshman in 2013-14. Hall redshirted that season, in part because he was not as careful with the ball as his roommate Perrantes.

As the point guard at Cape Henry, Hall could get away with high-risk, high-reward passes. At UVA, those passes often became turnovers. If he wanted playing time at Virginia, Hall was told, he had to be more sound with the ball.

"Coach Bennett preached that, because when I first got here, I was turning the ball over a lot," Hall said.

He pointed to the court, where a few feet away freshman Justice Bartley was working with a student-manager on ball-handling drills.

"I used to do that stuff every single day," Hall said, "[working on] being able to take care of the ball in pressure situations like that."

That work is paying dividends, as Bennett has not hesitated to play Hall in crucial situations this season. Hall's assist-to-turnover ratio leads the team. In the Cavaliers' most recent game -- a 70-54 win over then-No. 14 West Virginia at Madison Square Garden -- they turned the ball over a season-high 19 times. The Mountaineers pressed for most of the game.

"If you were shaky with the ball, they were going to poke it away or put you in a tough spots," Bennett said.

Hall wasn't shaky on a night when the `Hoos usually had three guards on the floor. He had only one turnover in his 22 minutes.

"It's good to be able to be out there with him," Perrantes said. "We came in together, and to play together and be able to shine together, it's huge just being able to see him next to me."

Hall said he grew discouraged at times during the season he redshirted, "but that comes with the territory. It was frustrating, but it was about me getting over it and persevering through it, because I knew I could do it."

Perrantes said: "It was definitely tough for him, but he was a trouper. He's a team guy. We have a bunch of team guys. He knew his time was going to come. I told him, 'It's not always going to be this tough. You're not going to always be sitting the bench, riding the bench. Your time is going to come, and you've just got to be ready for it.' "

To ensure he'd be ready when his opportunity came, Hall put in untold hours with Mike Curtis, UVA's strength and conditioning coach for basketball.

Hall could dunk in high school, but his explosiveness has improved dramatically during his time at UVA. He credits the time he's spent under Curtis' tutelage.

"I was nothing like this [at Cape Henry]," Hall said. "It's Coach Curtis. Hands down, Coach Curtis. He's amazing, and I've got so much trust in him."

Curtis returns the praise. Hall "works his butt off. He's one of our best workers in the weight room," Curtis said. "He's engaged in the training process as much as anybody I've ever had come through here in the last six-and-a-half, seven years."

Hall is a chiseled 208 pounds. That hasn't always been the case. When Hall arrived at UVA, Curtis said, "we could probably say his body composition wasn't ideal for what our standards are, and I think he's transformed his body. In addition to that, he's added some physical tools and qualities that I think have allowed him to be more successful on the court.

"If you looked back when he first got here and just watched him play the game and saw how explosive he was, the way he moved, I think all those things have changed now.

"He's more explosive, he's a more efficient mover. He's come night and day."

As others have during Bennett's tenure at UVA, including Malcolm Brogdon, Anthony Gill and Jack Salt, Hall improved during his year away from competition. The 'Hoos are hoping to see similar progress from big men Austin Nichols and Mamadi Diakite, neither of whom is playing this season.

"That's one of the things that we try to preach and educate to [redshirting players]," Curtis said, "that this is their opportunity to kind of bridge the gap from a physical standpoint and from a skill standpoint. Obviously my role is the physical development part of it, but what they have to understand is that you can't get these days back. So every day that they come in to train and work with a purpose, they put themselves in a better position to play and achieve their dreams and their goals on the court."

Hall's older brother, Mark, is a linebacker on the UVA football team. Mark was a redshirt junior this season, and he'll earn his bachelor's degree in May. (He'll compete as a graduate student next season.)

So will his kid brother. Devon, a Media Studies major, has supplemented his fall and spring coursework with summer school and on-line classes, and he's on track to complete his bachelor's in May. That will allow him to take two years of graduate school while completing his athletic eligibility.

To earn a degree from UVA in three years is no small feat, but once Hall realized it would be realistic for him to do so, he recalled, "my mom and my dad were like, `Why not?' Coach Bennett was all right with it, so I was like, `I'm all right with it, too.' "

His brother's reaction?

"I don't know if he likes that," Devon said, smiling, "but it's easier for my parents to come to one graduation."

Sweet dreams for UVa's Perrantes on flight home to California

By Doug Doughty, Roanoke Times December 23, 2015

CHARLOTTESVILLE — As he launched the 3-point shot that would lift fifth-ranked Virginia past California, London Perrantes could be heard calling out "and one."

Fortunately for Perrantes, who thought he had been fouled, three points were all the Cavaliers needed.

Having trailed by 11 points in the second half and by five points with less than one minute remaining in overtime, UVa rallied to defeat California 63-62 on Tuesday night in the first meeting between the teams.

The Golden Bears, ranked for three weeks earlier in the season, led 62-57 before Virginia senior Malcolm Brogdon hit a 3-pointer with 55 seconds left.

Brogdon got the assist on Perrantes' 3-pointer with 12 seconds remaining.

Perrantes couldn't remember the last time he had made a game-winner.

"In high school?" Perrantes said. "I don't even know. It's definitely No. 1 on my list."

The Cavaliers shot 58.3 percent on 3-point attempts (7 of 12) and 33.3 percent inside the line (14 of 42) against a Cal lineup that included 7-foot-1 Kingsley Okoroh, 7-foot Kameron Rooks and 6-11 Ivan Rabb.

Virginia (10-1) trailed 8-0 to begin the game and shot 18.2 percent (4 of 22) from the field in the first half. The Cavaliers led for a total of 32 seconds all night.

"You just keep playing," said UVa coach Tony Bennett, whose team extended its winning streak to nine games despite trailing in the second half for the third game in a row.

The Golden Bears, whose second 11-point lead came on a Jordan Mathews 3-pointer that made it 46-35, went 1 for 11 over the final 7:08 of regulation.

A dunk by Darius Thompson with 1:02 remaining in regulation gave Virginia its first lead of the night, but Cal's Jaylen Brown hit two free throws to make it 52-52 with 42 seconds left.

The Bears got the ball back and had a chance to win the game in regulation but Brogdon stole the ball from Brown with one second remaining.

"When you lose after you have competed, you have a tendency to sleep a little better," said Cal coach Cuonzo Martin, whose Golden Bears dropped to 9-3. "I thought our guys did enough to win the game.

"Tony is one of the best coaches in the game. They are experienced guys who are battle-tested. It was a tremendous environment."

Not long after the Golden Bears boarded a flight for home, Perrantes was slated to leave Charlottesville on a 5:20 a.m. flight and a connection that eventually would take him to his home in Los Angeles.

He said he needed to pack and didn't know if he would sleep.

One of the few Californians to have played for Virginia, Perrantes said he had played against Cal's Mathews in high school and that he knows several Cal football players with whom he had corresponded prior to Tuesday's game.

"Going home for the holidays [after a loss] probably wouldn't have been the best thing," Perrantes said.

He finished with 10 points, six assists and zero turnovers.

"I just think he is crafty," Brogdon said. "He is not the biggest, he is not the most athletic but he is very skilled and he is smart."

Bennett was fine with Perrantes taking the overtime 3-pointer but "I wouldn't probably put a lot of money on that in that spot," UVa's coach said.

Perrantes, shooting 56.7 percent on 3-pointers before Tuesday, did not lack for confidence.

"I just felt like, if I had a little bit of daylight, I was going to just let it go," he said. "I did not shoot a '3' the whole second half. I have been shooting the ball a little bit too well not to.

"I got hit, but you know, it still goes in so I can't complain."

UVa's two leading scorers for the season, fifth-year seniors Brogdon and Anthony Gill, were a combined 0 for 8 from the field for the first half and 8 for 26 for the game.

Brogdon didn't have a two-point field goal all night, going 3 for 5 on 3-pointers and 0 for 7 from inside the arc.

The Cavaliers were 14 of 17 from the free-throw line, including a 7-for-7 effort by Gill and a 5-for-6 performance by Jarred Reuter, a 6-7, 243-pound freshman who had played a total of eight minutes in UVa's four previous games.

Reuter had a team-high seven points in the first half, when no other Virginia player had more than four, and finished with 11 points.

"Jarred, hats off to him, played great tonight," Gill said. "Without him, I don't think we would have won that game."

Virginia basketball assistant has a 'servant's heart'

By Whitey Reid, Daily Progress December 26, 2015

Minutes before every game, you can find Virginia associate head coach Ron Sanchez somewhere on the court — but it's not easy.

Unlike the majority of coaches, he isn't dressed to the nines, schmoozing the premises.

Instead, the svelte-looking Sanchez opts for a pair of UVa basketball shorts or sweatpants, a T-shirt, and sneakers as he oversees the team's warm-up.

It's almost as if Sanchez is trying not to be noticed.

Much like his boss, Sanchez (who throws on a suit and tie just before tip-off) shies away from the spotlight. He takes pride in not straying from the task at hand — "just staying in my lane" is the way he likes to put it.

"He really has what we call a 'servant's heart," said Virginia coach Tony Bennett. "He'll do anything for anybody. He's one of those guys who will give you the shirt off his back. His parents did such a good job. He's one of the most kindhearted guys I've been around. He's done a heck of a job recruiting and building those relationships.

"And he's a student of the game."

No doubt about that.

Sanchez moved to New York from the baseball-crazed Dominican Republic when he was 7.

However, he never got into the sport, instead turning to hoops.

As a kid, Sanchez was exposed to some of the biggest names in city lore, such as Kenny Anderson, Rod Strickland and Felipe Lopez.

At first, basketball was just a hobby to stay out of trouble. Sanchez played regularly at a community center a few blocks from his family's home in the Bronx.

"When you're that age, you just do kind of whatever it is to fit in," Sanchez said. "Basketball — if you didn't play, you didn't fit in."

Sanchez attended camps of legendary high school coach Jack Curran at Fordham University, meeting people who would help guide him throughout his life. Around his junior year, Sanchez began receiving interest from college coaches.

"One thing just led to another," Sanchez said.

Sanchez wound up at the State University of New York College at Oneonta, where, knowing he wanted to eventually teach in some capacity, he majored in education. His goal was to provide kids the kind of guidance he had been lucky enough to receive.

When his playing days were over, Sanchez took an assistant coaching job at his alma mater and knew right away that he had found his calling.

"Instead of using the classroom, I was using the basketball court," he said. "It was the same passion."

It was while working at a basketball camp in Indianapolis that Sanchez met his future wife, Tara, a player for Indiana University.

Sanchez joined Tara in Bloomington while he pursued his master's degree.

In his spare time, Sanchez worked as a volunteer coach for former Indiana coach Mike Davis.

That's when Bennett's sister, Kathi, who was the Indiana women's coach, got wind of Sanchez.

"He was running around, working like crazy," Kathi Bennett recalled. "I was like, 'This guy is doing a ton of stuff and not getting paid a dime and going to school?' "I'd never seen someone who didn't sleep. I was like, 'When do you sleep?' He must have been getting away with two, three hours of sleep. It was crazy."

It wasn't long before Bennett sought Sanchez out for his opinions about her team.

"Good coaches, you have to have the X's and O's and all that," Bennett said, "but you need the work ethic and to be able to have the players' trust.

"He was just special."

Sanchez, who, today, has a son and a daughter with Tara, smiled as he recalled his days in Bloomington.

"Grad school was challenging," he said. "I had a full load since I wanted to finish in a year, but at the same time I didn't want to shortchange the basketball office...

"It was hard. The girl at the Wendy's [restaurant] knew me by my first name because that was the only place that would be open at 1 o'clock in the morning."

While at Indiana, Sanchez met Dick Bennett (Kathi and Tony's father), who, at the time, was retired from coaching. "He was unbelievably approachable," Sanchez said. "I would just grab him and ask him a few questions."

When Bennett came out of retirement to take the Washington State job, he offered Sanchez an operations position on his staff.

Sanchez jumped at the opportunity.

"I didn't know where Pullman was, I didn't know how much I was going to get paid, but those questions were completely irrelevant," Sanchez said. "I just knew I was going to work for Dick. That was enough for me."

Sanchez worked for six years at Washington State before following Tony Bennett to Charlottesville in the spring of 2009.

While he would never want to take any bows, Sanchez has been a huge key to the rebirth of Virginia basketball.

"[He] really allows you to understand who you are as a player," said Virginia senior Anthony Gill. "He finds that one thing that you're really good at and he works on it with you every day."

For Gill, that's been crashing the offensive glass.

"He gave me different tips on how to do it, how the ball is coming off, different techniques and stuff like that," he said.

Virginia senior Malcolm Brogdon said Sanchez has always been a valuable resource.

"He's always a guy who has given me little pieces of advice — just like leaving little tokens of wisdom," Brogdon said. "He gives me things I can improve on going into the season or things I can improve on throughout the season that Coach Bennett hasn't told me that he's seen that can really help me."

On the recruiting trail, Sanchez has helped reel in Brogdon, Joe Harris and Austin Nichols, among others.

Last spring, when former Virginia associate head coach Ritchie McKay left to take over at Liberty, Bennett promoted Sanchez to the position.

"Ron has been with me and has helped me build the program, and helped my father and I build the program at Washington State," said Bennett, explaining his decision. "I just thought, 'Boy, the time was right.'

"I've got such three capable assistants that all of them could be the associate head coach. I could name all three of them. But they celebrated the fact that Ron was put in that spot and really wanted it for him."

Virginia assistant coach Jason Williford said it was Sanchez who helped him get hired by Bennett seven years ago. Williford said Sanchez is "like a brother" to him. He said that Sanchez knows his X's and O's and has "an eye for recruiting," but, more than anything, has a winning personality.

"All the players like him, all the recruits like him," Williford said. "He's so likable.

"Guys go to him for stuff outside of basketball - real life stuff."

Bennett expects both Sanchez and Williford, at some point, to be head coaches.

"It's just a matter of time, when the opportunity is right," said Bennett, whose other assistant, Brad Soderberg, used to be his former boss at Wisconsin. "But in saying that, one of my goals is to make this [job] as attractive to them, so that it's got to be a great situation for them to go because they know they're in a heck of a situation here. That's a priority for me and this program."

An assistant coach for the Dominican Republic National Team during his summers — NBA Rookie of the Year candidate Karl-Anthony Towns is one of his pupils — Sanchez said he doesn't spend much time thinking about the next step in his career.

"If the opportunity's going to present itself, I can't control it," he said.

Decked out in his UVa gear before games, it's obvious Sanchez likes the "lane" he's traveled.

"I'm happy about the people I've been able to cross paths with more than anything else," he said. "It's been a true joy, a true joy."

Virginia's Isaiah Wilkins, stepson of NBA legend Dominique Wilkins, forges his own path

By Paul Schwedelson, Daily Orange January 23, 2016

Again and again Isaiah Wilkins launched himself toward the basket on the driveway outside his grandfather's house. At first he couldn't jump high enough. Then he could only graze the rim. He tried hoisting the ball up with two hands to compensate. All he wanted to do was dunk, but years passed and he never could.

His continued frustration once boiled over, kicking the ball and smashing the garage window.

"It was things like that that I knew he was adamant about, dunking the basketball," Isaiah's grandfather, James Taylor said.

The skill that helped make Isaiah's stepfather, Dominique Wilkins, famous was one he initially struggled to master until he was 15. It's just one example of how his career differs from the NBA Hall of Famer's. Being known solely as the stepson of Dominique Wilkins is an identity Isaiah wants to shed. The forward for No. 13 Virginia (14-4, 3-3 Atlantic Coast) credits his grandfather, not his stepfather, as being the most influential person in his basketball career. And he'll continue shaping his own name when UVA hosts Syracuse on Sunday at 7 p.m.

Isaiah Wilkins' relationship with the nine-time NBA All-Star is fickle. Taylor described Dominique more as a provider than a father-figure. He'd take Isaiah to Atlanta Hawks games, All-Star games and even got his stepson to be a ball boy at the 2010 Olympics in Beijing. But he isn't always there for Isaiah the way Taylor is.

"I feel like I'm doing my own things, trying to pave my own way," Isaiah said. "I feel like it's important that my granddad gets the credit because he's really helped me pretty much since I was born."

After every Virginia game, Taylor texts Isaiah and shares his thoughts on the game. Taylor knows his grandson wants to make it to the NBA and, though he tries to be positive, lets Isaiah know how he assesses his progress.

When Isaiah's biological father pulled him out of a private high school to avoid paying tuition, Taylor offered to pay it and got him back in. He wants to make sure his grandson has the most opportunities to succeed.

"One of the things I think he appreciates, just somebody being on his back, having him go through that process and just being that for him," Taylor said. "He can call me at anytime, it doesn't matter, day or night."

Dominique started dating Isaiah's mom when he was about 7 years old. At first, he didn't know his eventual stepdad was such a popular celebrity. Being around him at Hawks games, though, he quickly learned of his significance.

Isaiah met Kobe Bryant, Shaquille O'Neal and other basketball legends because of his stepdad. He'd come back and tell Taylor about his memorable experiences.

"I think that also helped Isaiah develop his passion for basketball," Taylor said.

Regardless, Isaiah said he doesn't talk much about his own game with Dominique. They're in touch occasionally and it's usually just to check in.

With each passing day, he's doing more and more to shake the legacy he can't control and write the one he can. While at an AAU tournament that Wilkins was playing in, Virginia head coach Tony Bennett was scouting Washington's Noah Dickerson. But Wilkins stood out with his play on the court, not by the name on the roster.

"I had noticed this young man's a good player that was playing with a lot of energy and passion," Bennett said, "... and I think someone pointed out, 'that's Dominique Wilkins'stepson.' That's about the extent of it."

Wilkins sees himself as his own person, and he appreciates when others, like Bennett, see the same. Over the years, Wilkins' dunking ability has come around.

He still can't dunk like Dominique Wilkins — at least not yet — but he also doesn't have to. Isaiah may hold Wilkins' name and expectations from some that come with it, but he's just trying to be Isaiah.

"I really, really value Coach Bennett as a coach and as a person, because he never really paid attention to the last name," Wilkins said. "That was the least important thing for him. I just thought that was really cool because for me, it's just a name."

Cavaliers savor epic comeback

By Jeff White, VirginiaSports.com January 27, 2016

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. -- Darius Thompson never saw his shot glance off the backboard and drop through the net. No matter. His teammates' reaction told the redshirt sophomore all he needed to know after the final horn sounded at Wake Forest's Lawrence Joel Coliseum.

"I fell on the ground, and I happened to look over and see all my teammates running at me, jumping up and down," Thompson said.

Virginia collected its first ACC road victory Tuesday night, and even those who witnessed the dramatic ending had trouble believing it really occurred.

"Deep down inside, if I'm going to be honest, you're like, `This isn't happening,' " Virginia head coach Tony Bennett said.

"That was a special thing we just did there," fifth-year senior Anthony Gill said.

With 1:23 to play, the 11th-ranked Cavaliers trailed 64-54, and their fate appeared sealed. But in a stunning rally, they scored 18 points in the final 1:16 to win 72-71. The final three came on an off-balance 21-footer by the 6-4 Thompson, whose last-second shot somehow cleared the outstretched left arm of 6-9 Devin Thomas.

"That was surreal," said UVA guard Malcolm Brogdon, who matched his career high with 28 points. "I didn't know what to think at the end."

The Demon Deacons (10-10, 1-7) dominated most of the game and had every opportunity to put away the 'Hoos (16-4, 5-3). But Wake missed seven free throws in the final 65 seconds, lapses on which Virginia happily capitalized.

"Our guys, credit to them, they showed fight in that setting," Bennett said, "and they were saying stuff in the huddle: `Let's keep trying. You never know. You never know.'"

UVA led only three times in this game, for a total of 46 seconds: at 4-2, 18-17 and 72-71. Still, even when their prospects appeared bleak, the Cavaliers continued to battle -- and to believe.

With about 30 seconds left, "Malcolm looked at me and he said, `This game's not over,' " said Gill, who scored 17 points before fouling out with 39 seconds remaining. "And I looked right back at him and I said, `You're right, we have a lot of game left.' "

Virginia made its final three shots from the floor, all 3-pointers. The first, by sophomore swingman Marial Shayok, pulled the Cavaliers to 70-66 with 14.5 seconds left.

The second, by Brogdon, made it 70-69 with 4.7 seconds left. The third, by Thompson, came on his only shot of the game. The trey was his first since Virginia's Dec. 22 win over California.

"I was trying to get a foul call [on Thomas] at first," Thompson said, "but didn't get the foul call. I threw it up, and it happened to go off the backboard and went in."

After Brogdon's last 3-pointer, the Cavaliers fouled Wake point guard Bryant Crawford on the inbounds pass, and the clock stopped with 3.1 seconds to play. After checking the video monitor, however, the officials added nine-tenths of a second to the clock.

"We needed all that time," Bennett said.

Brogdon said: "It was huge, because for every second as a basketball player, you're processing how many dribbles you can get within that time. And that's three dribbles and then a shot.

"If they had put three seconds on there, it would have been two dribbles and a shot, and we wouldn't have been able to get basically to the 3-point line where Darius was."

Crawford, who had missed a pair of foul shots at the 1:05 mark, misfired again on his first attempt. He made his second, after which Virginia point guard London Perrantes looked for his first option, Brogdon, on the inbounds pass.

But the Deacons blanketed Brogdon, and so Perrantes passed instead to redshirt sophomore guard Devon Hall near midcourt. Hall turned and dribbled along the left sideline before passing ahead to Thompson on the left wing.

"Devon made a great pass, and Darius made an amazing shot," Brogdon said.

Thompson's buzzer-beater silenced Wake's fans and momentarily stunned Hall.

"I was like, 'Did that really just go in, and did that count?' " Hall said, smiling. "That was an outrageous shot."

Bennett has been on the other end of such comebacks, he reminded media members at his postgame press conference, and he expressed sympathy for his counterpart, Danny Manning, and Wake's players.

"We were very fortunate," Bennett said. "Wake Forest really outplayed us."

The Deacons picked apart UVA's defense. They shot 57.1 percent from the floor in the second half, when they were 6 for 9 on 3-pointers, and 53.5 percent for the game. So frustrated was Bennett by his team's second-half defensive breakdowns that during one stretch he scrapped his trademark man-to-man in favor of a 1-2-2 zone.

"That shows you how desperate we were and how poor our defense was," Bennett said. "But actually it helped us."

Gill said: "We've been working on [the zone] every now and then in practice. But it was shocking. When [Bennett] said that, we all kind of looked at each other, and then we were just like, `All right, let's go out here and do it.' Whatever he calls, we trust it 100 percent and we're going to be full force with it."

On a night when Perrantes made only 2 of 8 shots and Hall went scoreless, Shayok and senior forward Evan Nolte made important contributions off the bench for UVA.

Shayok was 2 for 2 from long range and finished with 10 points, his most since a Nov. 25 win over Lehigh. Nolte, who had not made a field goal since Virginia's Dec. 5 win over William & Mary, was 2 for 4 from the floor.

"Marial hadn't been playing and Evan hadn't been playing much," Bennett said, "and we put them in, and they got some opportunities, and they did some good things."

Thompson, a transfer from Tennessee, started 10 of Virginia's first 14 games this season, but he's been struggling recently, too.

"Maybe this'll be a boost," Bennett said.

The Cavaliers hope the long-awaited ACC road win has that effect on them, too.

"We've got to improve," Bennett said. "We'll take the win. The quality wasn't there the way we need it to be, but it did I guess get the monkey off our back as far as a road win in the conference."

Had the comeback fallen short, Gill said, "it would have been really upsetting, because we made a lot of mistakes. We kind of let ourselves down in that game. But we overcame them and moved on, and we kept fighting throughout the whole game."

Perrantes said: "Better late than never. It was tough, but it shows the fight in the guys we have, and the character of our guys. We never quit."

Furious road rally has Virginia believing again

By C.L. Brown, ESPN.com January 27, 2016

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. -- Sure, Virginia had the shiny No. 11 ranking and had won three of its last four, all at home, but in that locker room, they knew something didn't feel right.

It hadn't been right all season, actually, starting with the Cavaliers' 73-68 loss in their road opener at George Washington on Nov. 16.

"Energy," Virginia guard Malcolm Brogdon said. "We don't come out with enough energy. Not necessarily playing hard, but we don't lock in enough so we have lapses, we have defensive mistakes that we shouldn't have." And it was happening again during their improbable rally for a 72-71 win at Wake Forest on Tuesday. The Demon Deacons, who rank 14th in offensive efficiency out of 15 ACC schools according to Ken Pomeroy, were making everything.

So much so that Virginia coach Tony Bennett, a staunch proponent of man-to-man, went to zone out of desperation. So much so that the Deacs shot 50 percent or better in both halves and finished at 53.5 percent, which was a season-high allowed against the Cavaliers' vaunted packline defense.

Doubt was officially starting to creep into their minds.

Darius Thompson's banked 3-pointer at the buzzer to lift Virginia to a comeback win for the ages won't solve automatically absolve all their woes. But it did give the Cavaliers a reason to believe again. And for a team that has struggled on the road, that's a good start.

"We really needed to go out here and prove that we could get another road win," said Virginia senior forward Anthony Gill. "It was big for us, not only for the outside world, but for our own confidence." Virginia had dropped all of its ACC road games, at Virginia Tech, Georgia Tech and Florida State.

The Cavs' February schedule is loaded with tough road games against Louisville, Miami, Pitt and Duke. Another road defeat with another deflating effort would have virtually crushed their aspirations as a two-time defender of the league's regular season title.

Just like that, in the four seconds that took Virginia from inbounding the ball trailing by one, to the most celebrated bank of the season, everything seems possible again.

"It lightens us up a lot," said Thompson, who made his only shot of the game. "Everybody was talking in the locker room, like man the road trip back would have been long if we would have lost. Hopefully that road game carries us over and hopefully we can get more (road) wins."

A confidence boost like this one could have staying power. They were down 64-54 with 1:23 left to a Wake Forest team that had its own struggles to deal with during a four-game losing streak.

Bennett, who said he's still toying with the lineup trying to find the right spark, admitted he was thinking about what got the Cavs down double digits more than he was about mounting a comeback.

"Deep down inside, if I'm going to be honest, you're like, this isn't happening," Bennett said. "And I already was frustrated with a few things about the way we played."

Fans had already started the trickle out of Lawrence Joel Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

Players on Wake Forest's bench, standing after Devin Thomas' thunderous dunk and three-point play, were feeling that victory was at hand.

Then came Virginia's frenetic 18 points to close out the game. They had been 1-for-13 from the 3-point line, but made each of their last four attempts including three in final 14 seconds. The Cavs' probability of winning dipped to 0.2 percent, according to Pomeroy, trailing 70-63 with 22 seconds left, but they prevailed.

Bennett said it remains to be seen if the win will be a springboard for future road games.

"We didn't play very well; we have to improve," Bennett said. "We'll take the win, the quality wasn't there the way we need to, but it got the monkey off our back as far as a road win in the conference."

It could end up being much more than just that.

Teams that do what Virginia just did tend to start throwing words like destiny around. It's hard to argue otherwise after the Cavs overcame a game's worth of sluggishness in less time than it takes to warm up leftovers in a microwave.

"This is a growing experience for all of us; it's something we can sort of bond over and come together on," Brogdon said. "It shows how we worked together to come back. We are good enough to get these wins on the road, but we have to come together at the beginning of the game, not the end."

Cavaliers find their winning formula

By Jerry Ratcliffe, Daily Progress January 30, 2016

LOUISVILLE, Ky. – Tony Bennett studied more game film of Louisville than any other opponent his Virginia team has faced this season and it showed as the Cavaliers handed the Cardinals their worst home loss in the six-year history of the KFC Yum! Center on Saturday.

The Cardinals were undefeated at home, one of the most intimidating atmospheres in the ACC, if not the country, with 22,000 rabid fans. Bennett had to come up with a two-pronged strategy to take down Coach Rick Pitino's team, which was second in the nation in field goal percentage defense and also averaged 81 points per game offensively.

Quite a challenge for Virginia, which as good as it has been over the season, had only managed to win on the road in ACC play for the first time four nights earlier. Snapping that streak required a miraculous comeback and a 3-pointer at the buzzer to accomplish at Wake Forest.

As anyone who follows Bennett's program might suspect, Saturday's rout of Louisville started with defense, but didn't end there.

Pitino's 2-3 matchup zone is one of the most effective in the game and extremely hard to crack. Conversely, UVa's defense hasn't exactly been up to snuff this season, so stopping an opposing offensive juggernaut on its home floor would be a task.

Perhaps no one was more surprised than Bennett when he glanced at the scoreboard at halftime and found his Cavaliers leading the 16th-ranked Cardinals, 29-14, en route to a 63-47 win. The 16-point margin of victory was the most since Kentucky beat Louisville by 15 on the same floor in 2010.

If Bennett was looking for a way to break out of his team's three-game losing streak on the road, how about this for one week's worth of work: nine points in the final 14 seconds to beat Wake in Winston, then dominating Louisville on its home court.

Virginia's 16-point win was its largest on the road against a ranked opponent since 1995 (83-60 at No. 24 Georgia Tech).

"This is a blueprint of how we have to be defensively," Bennett said after the win, which puts him up 2-1 over the Hall of Famer Pitino.

Louisville entered the game 15th nationally in field goal percentage (.491), and 84 points per game at the Yum. It wasn't so yummy after Virginia cut the Cardinals to ribbons.

Pitino's team had only 14 points at the half and shot 32.7 percent for the game. The Cavaliers held Louisville's two top scorers to well below their averages. Virginia's guards put the handcuffs on Damion Lee and Trey Lewis as soon as they entered the arena.

Lee, who averages 17 points per game, was held to six points (2 for 7 overall, 0 for 4 from behind the arc), while Lewis, who averages 12.7, finished with four (1 for 6). Neither had a bucket until the second half.

"Our mentality is to score and their mentality is to execute and stop," Pitino said. "We got our brains beat in because we have that wrong mentality."

For Virginia, it was the most complete game on both ends of the floor it had put together this season.

Bennett's defensive game plan wasn't overly complicated and with the game officials allowing both teams to play, that worked in UVa's favor. Pitino complained his team didn't take advantage of the opportunity to play more physically.

"We really challenged them on the front end and the back end [defensively], to be as close to great as you can be," Bennett explained after watching the Cavaliers improve to 17-4 overall and 6-3 in the ACC. "You've got to be as good as you've been on the front end, because Louisville is so potent when they get out and go, and then we said on the back end, we talk about being a one-and-done team (limiting Louisville's second chances)."

The Cavaliers led by as many as 23 points on several occasions in the second half before pulling the starters late in the game, or otherwise, the score would have likely been even more lopsided.

UVa guard Malcolm Brogdon, who shared scoring honors with teammate Anthony Gill with 13 points each, was surprised every time he looked at the scoreboard.

"You do look up at the score and say, 'Wow, we're up, but we have to keep our foot on the gas," Brogdon said. "I think our experience, our maturity showed today. All around, we were locked in."

Holding Louisville to almost half its scoring average on its home court was rare, something that didn't escape Brogdon's attention.

"We work so hard on [defense] every day," Brogdon said. "This is really what we do. We have to expect to do this every night. We haven't come out in games and focused on defense like we did today. This is how we have to play."

Brogdon has been outspoken during the team's road woes about the lack of defensive focus, but that wasn't a problem on Saturday.

Nor was offense.

Virginia shot 58 percent for the game against a team that emphasizes defense, although Pitino has been very critical of that phase of Louisville's game even though the Cardinals rank high nationally in field goal defense.

Brogdon believed the Cavaliers would be effective against the matchup zone before setting foot in the Bluegrass State.

"I thought we'd be able to pick it apart a little bit and make them pick up in man a little more than they're used to," Brogdon said. "We worked hard against the zone. We have guys with really high IQs."

UVa point guard London Perrantes said one of the keys in attacking the zone was getting players open in the middle and feeding them the ball, particularly Gill (6 for 9).

Pitino told his players the same thing this year as he did last when the teams split their two meetings. The game plan was to stick closely defensively with UVa's players. If not, then the Cardinals had no chance of winning and that's exactly what happened.

The Louisville coach was impressed with what he saw from the Cavaliers.

"At the end of the game, two things really impressed me about [Virginia]," Pitino said. "They were up 20 and Brogdon was yelling in front of our bench to his teammates, 'Just get one stop guys, just get one stop.' Then, on a sideline out of bounds play, up 20, their hands immediately went up. Those are the little things that we are missing."

Those are the staples of Bennett's philosophy and parts of the blueprint he mentioned in winning. Pitino's words were music to Bennett's ears.

London Perrantes is Virginia's fiery, laid-back leader

By Ava Wallace, Washington Post February 8, 2016

London Perrantes is still a laid-back guy on Virginia's team, the one who lets things roll right off his back, the one with the three-point shot as effortless and breezy as his disposition.

But Virginia hosts Virginia Tech in Charlottesville on Tuesday, and the Cavaliers' mellow point guard might have a bad taste in his mouth after what happened the last time U-Va. played the Hokies, when Virginia lost by two points in Blacksburg on Jan. 4. Perrantes made a career-high seven three-pointers but couldn't tie the game, and he was maybe denied a trip to the foul line after a drive for a layup in the contest's last seconds.

He might have a bad taste in his mouth, but that's really not his style.

"I'm not even thinking about that. I think we play Virginia Tech next?" Perrantes said Saturday when asked whether he ever dwelled on the Virginia Tech game's final seconds. "I thought it was N.C. State, to be completely honest. But no, no bad taste in my mouth."

"I'm from California, I'm not so much about that. I just go out and play the game."

The point guard's easygoing vibe is often attributed to his Southern California upbringing — last season's starting forward Darion Atkins called it Perrantes' "Cali swag." But this season, his third as Virginia's starting point guard, the junior's Cali swag has turned into Cali fire.

Perrantes, who is still the ACC's most dangerous three-point shooter (he is successful on a league-best 52.9 percent of his tries from beyond the arc), has evolved into a vocal leader for the Cavaliers since that Virginia Tech game. During the loss in Blacksburg, he was the lone player with palpable energy among the otherwise flat Cavaliers and since then has repeatedly called for more intensity from his teammates.

He's become the guy who will get in a teammate's face during a game — as he did Saturday at Pittsburgh, after center Mike Tobey missed a defensive rebound. All season, seniors Malcolm Brogdon and Anthony Gill have been cast as the players whose job it is to set an aggressive tone for the team from the start of the game. But Perrantes has now cast himself as the player who picks the team up if it's dragging.

"You hope for that when you see one of your lead players, especially your lead guard, mature into an upperclassman," Virginia Coach Tony Bennett said. "He can control the game with how he plays. He's always had that ability with his feel. [Leadership] kind of comes with the territory. You sometimes have to earn that with experience and with play. I think he's been doing a good job . . . just where he's challenging guys and looking to be more assertive at times, but still understanding the flow of the game.

"I think that's been an important part of him maturing and helping our team, without a doubt."

Perrantes's stats have largely stayed the same — he still leads Virginia in assists, averaging 4.3 per game, and is still the third-best scorer, averaging 11.4 points per game — but his assertiveness and intensity, in concert with Bennett and the assistant coaches' efforts to ramp up energy, have trickled down through the entire team in the past few games. The seventh-ranked Cavaliers (19-4, 8-3 ACC) are partly reinvigorated because of their six-game winning streak heading into Tuesday's rematch against Virginia Tech (13-11, 5-6). But both Bennett and Perrantes made note of the "positive vibe" emanating throughout the team as a result of individual efforts.

As for being the one who calls teammates out during games, Perrantes has a matter-of-fact perspective on his shifting role: He's still a laid-back California kid doing what needs to be done.

"We have to be [energized]. We've had so many flat starts on the road," Perrantes said. "We've learned from it. It goes with the coaches as well. They've been really energetic.

"We don't want to have any regrets. You have to do what you have to do.... We all want the best for each other, the best for the team. There's nothing personal around here. We all love each other like a family. We just want to go out and get a win."

Wilkins shows he can be a key weapon for Cavaliers

By Jerry Ratcliffe, Daily Progress February 9, 2016

The more Virginia wins, the better the Cavaliers play, the more opposing defenses focus on limiting the team's "Big Three" of Malcolm Brogdon, Anthony Gill and London Perrantes.

Those three upperclassmen might as well wear bullseyes on their chests, because opposing game plans center around shutting down the trio of lethal Cavaliers scorers.

When an unheralded guy like Isaiah Wilkins comes along and drops a career-high 14 points on someone, like, say Virginia Tech, it catches the eye of ACC coaches. The Cavaliers have been searching for someone to take the heat off their leading scorers and if Wilkins can become a consistent contributor, that's a bonus.

"Malcolm has been scoring so well, and Anthony, and London, too, so when another guy gives us that output offensively, it really balances our team and makes us more potent on offense as well as harder to guard," UVa coach Tony Bennett said after watching his team win 20 or more games for the fifth consecutive season.

Brogdon, the ACC Player of the Week, has been on a six-game scoring frenzy, but was a bit off his game in a 67-49 beatdown of the Hokies on Tuesday night at John Paul Jones Arena. Same for Perrantes, who was 1-for-4. Brogdon was 4-for-12. Gill, who had one of those kinds of games at Pitt, bounced back with 16 points to lead the Cavaliers in scoring against Tech. But he welcomed Wilkins' help.

Certainly the Hokies wanted to prevent "the Big Three" from beating them, and the fact that Wilkins and 10 points from Mike Tobey was important.

Wilkins was 5-for-7 shooting and hit all four of his free throw attempts, more than tripling his season average of 4.2 points per game. His linescore didn't stop there. He added four boards, an assist, a block and a steal in his fourth consecutive start.

The 6-foot-8 sophomore forward from Lilburn, Georgia, sparked Virginia to begin the second half, scoring six consecutive points, including a dunk on a pass from "big brother" Brogdon, and a pure baseline jumper for a 38-25 lead.

"I feel like my role is still to bring energy," Wilkins said after the rout of the Hokies. "I have to produce in different areas now. Last year, it was to come in and be a spark plug. This year I have to be better on defense and things like that."

The stepson of NBA Hall of Famer Dominique Wilkins, Isaiah has been contributing in different ways for the Cavaliers all season long. He may be the best high-post passer in the ACC, something that attracted Bennett to the kid from the Atlanta suburbs a couple of years ago.

With Wilkins' mid-range jump shot, he could become a difference-maker for Virginia down the homestretch. If the shot is there, he'll take it (a high-percentage shot for him), and if it's not, then the defense has to beware because of his keen eye for spotting open teammates on the wings or underneath.

Tobey said that Wilkins is one of the most unselfish players he's ever seen.

"[Wilkins] gets yelled at sometimes in practice for helping too much," Tobey pointed out.

"Yes, I'm known for that," Wilkins chuckled.

There have been occasions when an opponent drives the lane and Wilkins will drift over to help cut off the driver's path to the hoop, only to have that player kick the ball back outside to Wilkins' man, who promptly makes a 3-pointer. That's over-helping if he can't get back to cover his man.

He experienced a few breakdowns similar to that in UVa's win over now-No. 1 Villanova earlier in the season. Bennett sat down with Wilkins and reviewed film of those mistakes and ever since then, the aggressive sophomore has been more comfortable at preventing such breakdowns.

Instead, he's making opponents pay for their mistakes. Leave him open on that mid-range jumper and he's going to cash in.

"As long as I'm in the 15- to 17-foot range, I'm comfortable," Wilkins said. "As long as I have room and rhythm, I feel like that's my shot. It has been my shot since high school, so I try to take it when I can. My teammates know I love the shot, but I'm willing to pass it up if someone else is open."

Gill, for one, is most appreciative.

"He makes it a lot easier on me, especially on the defensive end, because I know he's going to be there for me," Gill said. "He makes it easier for the guards as well because they know he's going to be there for the help. When we're blowing up ball screens, he's always going to be there. He's never going to be late."

Wilkins, who said earlier this season that he considers Brogdon his "big brother," a relationship the two formed in Atlanta, wants to do what he can to help the Cavaliers win down the home stretch.

"Everybody is preaching for me to be aggressive because it can't just be AG [Gill], London and Malc [Brogdon] scoring all the points," Wilkins said. "I try to come in and take open shots. These guys are drawing a lot of attention late in the year, so I've got to find my spots."

With Virginia attempting to three-peat as ACC regular season champions, those contributions could prove invaluable.

Cavaliers have chins up, but losing to Duke still stings

By Paul Woody, Richmond Times-Dispatch February 13, 2016

The voices of the Virginia players and coach Tony Bennett were clear, cool and calm.

It was a loss, they all said. It was just another game. Not much to see here folks. Move along.

Nothing that happened on the last play — whether Duke's Grayson Allen walked or was fouled — is going to be changed.

Allen's shot banked off the backboard and went through the basket.

The score forever will be Duke 63, Virginia 62.

But let's pause a moment and drill down a little deeper.

This wasn't just another ACC game, certainly not for Virginia, and given the way Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski left the court, fists pumping at the fanatic Duke students, it wasn't just another game for the Blue Devils.

For Virginia, this was Duke. This was a team the Cavaliers hadn't beaten in Cameron Indoor Stadium since 1995. The losing streak now is 17 games.

Virginia's seniors, Malcolm Brogdon, Anthony Gill and Mike Tobey, who have accomplished so much on and off the court, will leave Virginia never knowing how it felt to silence the Cameron Crazies, to humble the coach who has won more games than any men's major college coach in history.

"We definitely wanted it," Brogdon said. "I don't know if it stings more. A loss is a loss. This is a team we wanted to beat."

Chin up, stiff upper lip and all that considered and cast aside.

This loss does sting.

The Cavaliers wanted to take measure of themselves, and you can do that only against the best teams. Duke is not a great team this year, but the Blue Devils are the defending national champions. And like him or loathe him, Krzyzewski has built a program by which almost every other college basketball program in the country is judged.

At times, Bennett appeared to wish he were in uniform so he could enter the game. He was kind of into it. He wants to win every game. This time, it was almost as if he had to have a victory.

The players can channel Gertrude Stein all they want — a rose is a rose is a rose — and say a loss is a loss, but this was a potential landmark game for the Cavaliers. Winning at Duke is difficult, rare and a signature accomplishment.

However, it is far from a back-breaking, season-churning game.

It's a bitter disappointment for Virginia and an exhilarating victory for Duke.

It neither makes nor breaks the season for either team.

Next up, please.

But before Virginia plays at home against N.C. State on Monday night, the Cavaliers have to process what happened Saturday.

"I wanted them to get that," Bennett said of his seniors. "I said, 'Boy, you can taste it.' And then a play is made."

The play that was made no doubt will be a topic of conversation for a while.

It all began this way:

Brogdon received a surprise pass from Marial Shayok under the basket with just more than 10 seconds to play and Duke leading 61-60. His reverse layup gave Virginia a 1-point lead with 9.9 seconds left.

"It's a good feeling, but you know there are 6 seconds left and you're playing against one of the best coaches in the country," Brogdon said.

Duke rushed into the frontcourt and called a timeout with 6 seconds left in the game.

"I knew we could get the ball to Grayson or Brandon (Ingram)," Krzyzewski said.

Allen got the ball. He drove to the basket. He stopped short. He went up. He released the ball either after his foot hit the ground, which would have been walking, or a split second before his foot hit the ground.

On Allen's way up, it certainly appeared Shayok put a good body block on the Duke sophomore.

Considering the way the game had been called in the second half — touch fouls were rampant, especially on the Cavaliers, who had seven team fouls at 9:28 and 10 at 7:29 — Shayok easily could have been called for a foul on that last play.

The officials were not going to blow their whistles either way. The players were going to determine the outcome.

"It was one play," Krzyzewski said. "They could have won, but we did. I thought we earned it. If they would've won, they would've have earned it."

Oh, how the Cavaliers wanted to earn this one.

No matter how well he has played, Virginia center Mike Tobey's performances seem to come with caveats. Praise of Tobey's skill are often cut with mentions of the center's faltering confidence or of past issues with consistency or assertiveness. Anthony Gill offered an example after Tobey's 15 points against Notre Dame on Jan. 2: "When his mind is right," Gill said, "he can be a really effective player for the team and help us get to the next level."

Such has been the story of Tobey's career at Virginia. The 7-footer has always run up against high expectations because of his physicality, but his almost four years in Coach Tony Bennett's system have been dotted with little issues that seem to keep him from reaching his full potential, even though he was named the ACC's sixth man of the year for 2014-2015. In years past, he would get gassed and have to come out of games after logging long minutes, and Bennett has called him a "foul magnet."

It has never been in Tobey's nature to embrace the attitude that would match his size — Gill, who's four inches shorter, slams his dunks, winding up beforehand and hanging on after. Tobey simply dunks, barely having to leave the ground to reach the rim, and moves on.

But Tobey's finally comfortable — and more confident — playing within his style. He still draws more fouls than anyone else on the team relative to his minutes played, and his complaisant nature has landed him on the receiving end of a few withering glares from London Perrantes or Gill. But the center is having a career season.

As No. 7 Virginia (21-5, 10-4 ACC) prepares to battle Miami (21-5, 10-4) on Monday night in Coral Gables, Fla., for sole ownership of second place in the ACC, Tobey's 7.1 points and 3.9 rebounds per game are indispensable for Virginia.

"He's showing some more consistency," Bennett said after Virginia's first game against Miami this season, a 66-58 win Jan. 12 in which Tobey scored 12 points in 18 minutes. "This is a big-boy league. I guess you want to say, this isn't a tip-toe league. At this level, the play on the glass is important. The size is needed."

Tobey flourished just as ACC play got underway, turning in a season-best 16 points in Virginia's last nonconference game against Oakland on Dec. 30 and following that up with 15 points and six rebounds off the bench in just 15 minutes against Notre Dame in Virginia's ACC opener.

He has been providing big boosts in small minutes ever since — in the Cavaliers' win against N.C. State on Monday, he had five points in less than a minute as part of a seven-point performance. On Feb. 9 against Virginia Tech, he scored 10 points in 11 minutes. He played a crucial part in Virginia's first game against Miami, in which he scored eight points in a 10-4 run and gave the Cavaliers a 27-21 lead.

"Spending four years in a system, you can't help but get more comfortable," Tobey said.

Tobey is the Cavaliers' fourth-highest scorer behind Malcolm Brogdon, Gill and Perrantes, although six players on Virginia's roster average more minutes per game.

That Tobey is playing his best now makes sense to assistant coach Ron Sanchez, who has known the wide-eyed center since Virginia first started recruiting him at Blair Academy in New Jersey. Tobey has grown three inches since then, but he still exudes the same youth.

"We got Mike committed really early," Sanchez said. ".□.□. And he's young. He just turned 21 in October, so most guys his age are [juniors].

"There was always a maturation that we knew was coming because of his youth, both physically and mentally," Sanchez said. "And he has matched expectations, at the end of the day, if you look at what Mike has assisted us in doing collectively with his other teammates." Tobey, for his part, has always been aware of those expectations. He found success on the court this season when he let them go.

He knew his role at the beginning of the year was to be a stout defensive player — to be a consistent presence on the glass, provide size when the Cavaliers needed it — but he also made it a goal to be more assertive on offense in his final college season.

"Realizing that it's my last year has really allowed me to free my mind and enjoy it, really go for it," Tobey said. "In the past, I was so worried about all those little things, and now I understand that it's been a really fun road, a fun trip we've had.

"I feel like it won't hit me until after I graduate, but I'm just trying to soak everything in while I can."

ESPN's 'GameDay' returns to JPJ, where UVa has become dominant under Bennett

By Mike Barber, Richmond Times-Dispatch February 24, 2016

Shortly after being hired as Virginia's basketball coach in 2009, Tony Bennett peeked out of his office at a Dave Matthews Band concert at John Paul Jones Arena, the Cavaliers' home court.

"I had a vision of what it was like when it was packed," Bennett said during a teleconference with reporters Wednesday.

These days, it's Bennett's third-ranked U.Va. team that is the big draw, playing regularly to packed houses at JPJ and, the last 18 games, sending its fans home happy after a win.

"I love what John Paul Jones Arena has become," Bennett said. "I envisioned that when I first got here."

Virginia (21-6, 10-5 ACC) has gone 33-1 at home in conference games the past four seasons, matching the league's all-time best mark. (Duke went 33-1 during 1962-64 and 32-1 during 1997-2000.)

The Cavaliers haven't lost a home game since falling 69-63 to Duke on Jan. 31, 2015. That was also the last time ESPN's "College GameDay" was broadcast from Charlottesville. That show will be on site again Saturday when U.Va. hosts No. 7 North Carolina (22-5, 11-3), the ACC's first-place team.

Having been through the hoopla of "GameDay" last season, Virginia's players should be more prepared for what to expect this time going into Saturday's showdown with the Tar Heels.

"You have to have a balance about it," Bennett said. "It's great they're here. Notice it, but you can't just block it out, and say it doesn't matter or just become intoxicated with it."

ESPN will broadcast its show, hosted by Rece Davis, live from JPJ from 11 a.m. to noon on Saturday. The crew also includes former Virginia Tech coach Seth Greenberg, Jay Williams and Jay Bilas.

That group also will anchor a pregame show before the game's 6:30 p.m. tipoff.

Senior guard Malcolm Brogdon said he thought the team took the right approach last year against Duke, but could have handled the whole weekend better.

"I think our mindset was OK. I think that's exactly what it was," Brogdon said. "I don't think it was good enough. This year we're even more experienced. We've experienced 'GameDay' now once, and we'll come out with that in the back of our minds and not let it distract us."

Junior point guard London Perrantes said having ESPN back on campus for the second straight season shows how far Virginia's program has come toward establishing itself as a national program. But he said it shouldn't have any impact on how Saturday's game against North Carolina plays out.

"That's for the fans. We're just going to go play," Perrantes said. "It's good for the fans, it's good for the school. I'm happy that they're coming, but we're just going to play the game."

It's unclear whether senior forward Evan Nolte (toe) or sophomore forward Isaiah Wilkins (head) will be able to play against the Tar Heels.

Nolte sat out Monday night's loss at Miami after his toe injury bothered him in practice over the weekend.

"It's just what he can tolerate," Bennett said. "Hopefully, he can do more. We have him in a protective boot when he's walking around. We'll see how he responds."

Wilkins got hit in the back of the head Monday when Miami tried to throw an ally-oop behind him. Bennett stopped short of saying Wilkins has a concussion, though he did indicate that Wilkins is going through concussion protocols this week.

"There of course are steps for someone who gets hit in the head and has a — I don't know if you call it a concussion, but they have to pass certain markers," Bennett said.

Brogdon's brilliance, team's overall toughness lift U.Va. over North Carolina

By David Teel, Daily Press February 27, 2016

Malcolm Brogdon dazzled again and should become Virginia's first ACC Player of the Year since Ralph Sampson bogarted the award from 1981-83. He made 3s, runners, mid-range jumpers and contested layups, all while defending fiercely, as the Cavaliers defeated North Carolina.

But Saturday night's 79-74 victory, which enhances Virginia's cause for a No. 1 NCAA tournament seed and third consecutive regular-season conference title, transcended Brogdon's brilliance.

"Down the stretch," Tar Heels coach Roy Williams said, "Virginia had a greater purpose tonight."

That purpose translated to toughness, a non-negotiable if you want to survive North Carolina's size and athleticism. And though it started with them, that toughness was not reserved for forwards Anthony Gill and Isaiah Wilkins, who combined for 23 points and 14 rebounds.

No, the strength and resilience had to include everyone, so as to limit turnovers and, in the process, slow the Tar Heels' preferred warp-speed offense. So consider the numbers from a March-caliber game befitting top-10 rivals:

Virginia committed eight turnovers, well below the 13.5 UNC opponents average. The Cavaliers outscored the Tar Heels 32-28 in the paint, 14-10 on second-chance points and limited them to two fast-break points.

In its previous four games, North Carolina had averaged 46.5 points in the paint.

"I think they were the actors and we were the reactors tonight," Williams said. "They scored more points in the paint without posting up anybody hardly all night long because they drove the ball to the basket much more aggressively. ... They were just so much more aggressive on both ends of the court."

If anyone was going to deny Brogdon ACC Player of the Year it was Brice Johnson, the Tar Heels' leading scorer at 17.0 points per game and the conference's top rebounder at 10.6. He had 12 and seven Saturday.

Most critical, Johnson, so quick off his feet and so accurate with his shot, committed five of his team's 13 turnovers and did not score for the final 17 minutes. As they often do against low-post scorers, the Cavaliers trapped Johnson repeatedly, once prompting him to airmail a cross-court pass about 10 rows up into the stands.

"He got very discouraged," Williams said.

"We were as aware of him as we could be," Virginia coach Tony Bennett said.

"Maybe the reason we weren't getting the turnovers in previous games was we weren't being physical in our trap," Gill said. "We really focused this week in practice on being physical in the trap and really trying to get chest-to-chest with the guy that we're trapping because it creates a lot of havoc down there for him."

With 15 points and a game-high nine rebounds, the 6-foot-8 Gill finished a board shy of his third double-double this season. It was arguably his best effort since 16 and eight against Syracuse a month ago, if not his 20 and 12 versus West Virginia in early December.

After scoring in double-figures in the season's first 22 games, Gill had contributed six or less in three of the past five games as defenders' length bothered him at the rim. Not Saturday.

"When AG is aggressive and plays confidently and dominates the game inside like he did tonight, it opens the game up for everybody," Brogdon said. "They can't just key in one me. They can't just key in on London (Perrantes). ... They have to play AG real."

Gill, Brogdon (26 points), Perrantes (12) and Devon Hall (11) gave Virginia four double-figure scorers for the fourth time in 16 ACC games and was a stark contrast to Monday's loss at Miami, where Brogdon was the lone Cavalier to score more than nine.

"To beat a team the caliber of Carolina, you have to have that offensively," Bennett said.

Seventh-ranked UNC (23-6, 12-4) had similar balance, with Joel Berry II's career-high 21 points pacing four in double-figures, but as Williams noted, the Cavaliers were a half-step quicker to most loose balls and 50-50 rebounds, witness their five "team" offensive rebounds to the Tar Heels' one.

Williams said he doesn't play bridge, but he compared Gill to a bridge player and to one of Carolina's all-time greats.

"He bids on everything," Williams said. "He bids on every rebound. ... His motor's high, it stays high. We had a guy named Hansbrough that did the same kind of thing."

The ACC's career scoring leader, Tyler Hansbrough is royalty to Williams, and the compliment was not made lightly.

Entering the regular season's final week, third-ranked Virginia (22-6, 11-5) and Louisville (22-7, 11-5) trails ACC co-leaders North Carolina and Miami (23-5, 12-4) by a game, with Duke (21-7, 10-5) a half-game behind the Cavaliers and Cardinals.

The Cavaliers next play Tuesday in Greenville, S.C., Clemson's temporary home while Littlejohn Coliseum is renovated. And though inconvenient to play 30 miles from campus, the Tigers are 7-1 there this season in ACC games, beating Louisville, Duke and Miami and losing only to Notre Dame.

Add next Saturday's finale against Louisville, and Virginia's path remains difficult. Reprising their formula against North Carolina would serve the Cavaliers well.

"We just said defend and fight in that 94-foot rectangle," Bennett said, "and I liked what I saw."

Virginia seniors seek to burnish legacy in tournament play

By Ava Wallace, Washington Post March 9, 2016

CHARLOTTESVILLE — When Tony Bennett gathered his team at center court at John Paul Jones Arena after its last game before heading to Washington to start the postseason, he told his players to look around.

Take in the sold-out crowd, he said, which was standing and applauding the team's 20th win in Charlottesville. Take a glance at the scoreboard, which proclaimed Virginia's 68-46 win over Louisville on Saturday, the Cavaliers' biggest win over a ranked opponent since 1995. Bennett told the five seniors to remember the two ACC regular season titles they won, as well as the league championship they fought for in 2014.

It was a rare moment during which Bennett and his players allowed themselves time to reflect during the season.

"He told us that we were part of something special here," senior Anthony Gill said Saturday. "We helped put the building blocks down, to have all these fans at the games and everything like that, to have the championships that we've had.

"I think me, and all the seniors - we've had a great run here."

Second-seeded Virginia enters the ACC tournament, which gets underway Tuesday at Verizon Center with preliminary games, on one of the conference's best three-year runs. The Cavaliers' 45 regular season conference wins are the second-most in ACC history over a three-year span, after Duke's 46 wins from 1997-98 through 1999-2000, and better than North Carolina's 38 wins and Duke's 39 during the same current time period. This season, Virginia has more wins over ranked teams (six) than any other ACC squad.

This week, Virginia, which has a bye into Thursday's quarterfinals, has a chance to become the only team other than North Carolina and Duke to win more than one ACC tournament title since Wake Forest took back-to-back championships in 1995 and 1996.

The Cavaliers' recent success has fueled the notion of Virginia as a program on the rise in the ACC. Although North Carolina and Duke still rule the conference (even with Duke's subpar season by its standards), ESPN college basketball analyst Seth Greenberg said Virginia's success hints of more than just a stretch of good years.

"Of the teams that legitimately have the chance to compete at the national championship, after North Carolina, you can go through the league," Greenberg said before Virginia beat North Carolina on Feb. 27, "and I'm taking Louisville out of the equation. It's Miami, maybe, and to be honest the league might go through them this season . . . but Virginia is the only other team playing at an elite level."

Bennett's seniors have helped lay the foundation for one of the most successful stretches in program history. The graduating class that includes 2016 ACC player of the year and defensive player of the year Malcolm Brogdon, Gill and center Mike Tobey has 107 wins in its four years, the third-most in Virginia's history. With five more wins they'll equal the 112 wins of the Ralph Sampson era, from 1979 through 1983.

In recruiting them to Charlottesville, Bennett sold such an opportunity to revive the program to players such as Gill, a transfer from South Carolina who chose Virginia over North Carolina and Ohio State, and point guard London Perrantes, a Los Angeles native.

"That's kind of what he told me, how he got me out here," Perrantes said before practice Monday in Charlottesville. "Come build something. We're still building — North Carolina and Duke, they have decades and decades on us. We're at the beginning. We're building."

Bennett's mind isn't on Virginia's legacy as the grueling regular season ends and fast-paced postseason begins. The Cavaliers will open against either Clemson or Georgia Tech, and with a victory could face Miami or Virginia Tech in Friday's semifinals. The Cavaliers lost to each of those schools other than Clemson on the road this season.

So while Bennett was able to take a moment and let the seniors bask in what they've helped create in Charlottesville, the time for reflection has passed.

"You just look at the way the conference was, how close it was, how many teams have fought and how tight every game was, you're going to have to play well," Bennett said, shaking his head. "As far as a target on our back, you're in the postseason now. That stuff just kind of washes away."

U.Va.'s Brogdon enjoying 'experience of a lifetime'

By David Teel, Daily Press March 16, 2016

His college legacy and NBA prospects at stake this season, Malcolm Brogdon had every reason to obsess over Virginia's first day of practice. A six-month journey, a road to reversing past March disappointment, was finally about to start.

But before lacing 'em up that October afternoon, Brogdon had another priority: morning meetings on Capitol Hill with members of Virginia's congressional delegation.

The trip was arranged by Gerald Warburg, a former Senate staffer who teaches in U.Va.'s Frank Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy. Warburg's class is Congress 101: Leadership Strategies, and he efforts to introduce his graduate students to power.

Last semester's group included veterans of the Iraq war, Peace Corps and VISTA, and one celebrity basketball player.

"They're not shy and not without some sense of how the world works," Warburg says of his older students.

Yet it was Brogdon, the class pup, who most distinguished himself on the trip. While classmates asked procedural questions about filibusters and amendments, Brogdon honed in on policy, even as senators and representatives quizzed him about basketball and asked to pose for photographs.

"Malcolm has an extraordinary clarity for a young person on his mission in life," Warburg says.

Clear since his 2011 enrollment at Virginia, that mission has been accomplished. Brogdon has elevated himself and Virginia's program to heights unseen in Charlottesville for decades. As important, Brogdon, who lives in Spartan conditions on U.Va.'s prestigious Range, has positioned himself intellectually and socially to affect United States policy on poverty in Africa.

History degree in hand, master's in public policy to come in May, Brogdon is a first-team All-American and the ACC's overall and Defensive Player of the Year. He has led the Cavaliers to three consecutive NCAA tournaments, their first such run since the mid-1990s, and their highest tournament seeds since the early 1980s — Virginia is a No. 1 seed this season and faces Hampton in a first-round NCAA game Thursday in Raleigh, N.C.

"I'm just building connections for a lifetime," Brogdon says, "and I'm having the experience of a lifetime."

Or, as Cavaliers coach Tony Bennett told Brogdon about his final year: "You can have it all."

Brogdon's unwavering focus, his determination to have it all, are rooted in family.

His mother, Jann Adams, is the Associate Provost for Faculty Affairs and a professor of psychology at Morehouse College in Atlanta. His father, Mitchell, and oldest brother, Gino, are lawyers. His other brother, John, is enrolled in Howard University's law school.

Memorable trips

Malcolm is the baby but was never babied. Nor were his brothers. Academic excellence was expected and nurtured, and family trips were educational rather than frivolous.

The brothers traveled with their dad to Panama while Malcolm was in elementary school. More recently, Malcolm accompanied his maternal grandparents on a mission trip to Malawi and his mother on a junket to Brazil.

But the most indelible excursion was to Ghana when Malcolm, by his estimate, was 10 or 11. Adams worked in a maternity ward, while Mitchell and the boys volunteered at a preschool that was adjacent to a landfill.

"We knew," Adams says, "there was going to be extreme poverty."

Food and clothing were scarce, and the children had to be cleared from the play area — the barefooted hosts schooled Malcolm in soccer — to make way for garbage trucks rumbling to the landfill. But nothing prepared the Brogdons for what transpired one afternoon as they sat on a bus awaiting transport to their quarters.

Trip organizers brought the Brogdons and other volunteers styrofoam containers of chicken and rice to eat during the ride. But before the bus could depart, the preschool children smelled the food and began banging on the bus. Some saw grains of rice that had spilled onto the dirt and ate them without hesitation.

All on the bus agreed to give their food to the children.

"As a parent, you really can't tell the impact," Adams says. "You're hoping they pick up all the different pieces. I think Malcolm really got it."

At such a vulnerable age, Brogdon could have been scarred. Rather, he was forged.

Got it, indeed.

"Those (trips) really ignited the fire for me in terms of being passionate about changing the poverty situation in some of the third-world countries in Africa and South America," Brogdon says. "That has really stuck with me, and now as I'm going through graduate school, I'm figuring out different ways I can influence policy to change conditions over there."

Brogdon has envisioned starting a non-governmental organization (NGO) or, since the Washington trip, running for office. Usually reserved in public, using his warm smile sparingly, Brogdon's more wonk than showman, but he looks people in the eye, offers a firm handshake and speaks well.

A "psychology of leadership" class taught him how great leaders can influence masses. Public-speaking courses have made him comfortable addressing teammates and media.

"These are portable skills," Warburg says. "You can apply them to different disciplines. Yes, one can see it manifest itself in a team sport like basketball. But you can also see it manifest itself in a classroom or in interaction with an elected official. (And) they're more than skills — they're values, how to deal with people."

Adams doesn't believe her youngest is built for the crass world of politics.

"There's an element of being a politician, I hate to say it, where you can't be honest all the time, and I don't think that would be the right fit for him," she says. "I see him being more of an impassioned advocate for something....

"We all have paths, and God gives us opportunities to follow that path. He has been extremely faithful. Everybody's worried about measuring how smart you are and stuff like that, and they miss the most important pieces. You need to be smart enough, but what you really need to do is have tremendous work ethic and tremendous character. Those are the two things we really pushed for him."

"He's been raised well and he has the right mindset of trying to make a difference and make others better," Bennett says. "I know it's not lip service. It's genuine. He really cares about that. He's the future. He's what's next for our society. ... He really has a heart for that. When you see someone who's engaged and has a heart for something like that, they will make a difference."

Well-rounded game

As much as teammates, coaches, professors, family and friends are fascinated by Brogdon's public-service potential, all understand that basketball will be his first post-U.Va. pursuit. He is the first Cavalier since Ralph Sampson in 1983 to be the ACC Player of the Year, but Brogdon's game is far more nuanced than the 7-foot-4 Sampson's.

Much like the young man himself, Brogdon on the court is well-rounded, selfless and understated. Lacking warpspeed quickness, classic shooting form and highlight-reel levitation, he thrives on guile, strength and instincts. At 6-5, he's an effective and clutch 3-point shooter. He scores inside with an array of moves, most notably a one-footed runner. Defensively, he spreads out, crowds and pesters a variety of all-conference scorers.

He is, to use one of Bennett's favorite words, "complete."

All this with a buttoned-down veneer that includes a pregame yawn, a ritual that used to concern, but now amuses, teammates and coaches.

"He always keeps it consistent," senior forward Anthony Gill says. "There's never any waver in his character at all. ... He is Malcolm Brogdon."

"He's always even-keeled," assistant coach Jason Williford says, "to the point where at times I'm like, 'Malcolm, we need a spike in that. Just give me a little emotion.' But it's who he is, and you have to be true to who you are."

"The way he presents on the court is really how he is," Adams says. "He's not an emotional guy, he's not a sentimental guy. He's thoughtful and loving, but he's not a guy who's going to baby you. He wants everybody to step up. So I can see people seeing him as a little bit demanding, unsympathetic. He's not a guy who tolerates excuses. He thinks if it's hard, you work through it. If you're not doing everything you could be doing, he doesn't want to hear you complaining about things not working out. He thinks everybody should be working as hard as he is. So he can be — intolerant isn't the right word — impatient with people whom he thinks are not taking advantage of opportunities and working hard."

Also recruited by the likes of Harvard, Vanderbilt, Clemson and Minnesota, Brogdon didn't arrive a complete player out of Greater Atlanta Christian School. He developed from a 2011-12 freshman who started one game, had more turnovers than assists and averaged 6.7 points.

This season, his third making first-team All-ACC, he averages 18.7 points, has twice as many assists as turnovers and is shooting career-bests of 46.8 percent from the field and 40.9 percent from beyond the 3-point arc.

"Growing up, playing basketball for AAU and high school," Brogdon says, "I've always had coaches tell me (that) if you're going to get to the highest level, you have to specialize. I've always prided myself on being versatile, on working on everything and not limiting my game.

"I want to guard the best player every night, but while it sounds good when you tell people that, at the end of the day you actually have to get on the floor and you have to guard them. ... It's a lot, it's a handful, but that's my role on the team."

Sharing Christian faith, appreciation for defense and devotion to team, Brogdon and Bennett bonded immediately. Brogdon committed to Virginia the morning after his official visit, even as family urged him, to no avail, to keep scheduled appointments with Harvard and Vanderbilt.

Neither Bennett nor Brogdon craves the klieg lights, but both understand and embrace the responsibilities that accompany leadership. So comfortable are the two that when Bennett spoke to a Batten School group, he, in Warburg's words, "repeatedly, gently, lovingly needled Malcolm in front of 150 classmates."

But there were crises.

Learning from adversity

Brogdon missed the final four games of his freshman season with a broken left foot, and subsequent surgery shelved him throughout 2012-13. The injury strained not only his resolve but also his faith.

His mom and strength coach Mike Curtis were daily counselors, advising, encouraging, pushing. Then, as Brogdon emerged as an All-ACC player as a redshirt sophomore in 2013-14, and as Virginia won the league regular season and tournament and reached its first Sweet 16 since 1995, Brogdon began to envision the possibilities.

More championships, graduate school, greater NBA value.

"It's a life experience that prepares you for obstacles beyond basketball," Brogdon says of the injury. "I think it's one of, if not the best thing that happened for me college basketball-wise. I'm not sure I'd be the player or person I am today if I wasn't injured and redshirted."

Brogdon's second watershed moment occurred earlier this season. Virginia had just lost at Florida State, falling to 2-3 in the ACC, and Brogdon was playing poorly, outside of himself in an effort to single-handedly shake the team from its funk.

The best leaders know how and when to criticize. Now Brogdon had to learn another leadership lesson: how to accept pointed criticism.

One day after Brogdon's 4-of-17 shooting at Florida State, Bennett singled him out during a team meeting. He panned his shot selection and urged him to reconnect with the collective mindset.

"Coach Bennett definitely got on me hard," Brogdon says. "He called me out in front of the team, and really, I tried to be more within the offense from then on and get my shots out of the offense. ... It's part of being one of the best players on the team. Sometimes you're going to mess up. Sometimes you're going to need to be put back in check."

After Bennett's critique, Brogdon met individually with some teammates. He wanted to hear their unvarnished observations and advice.

"I feel like this year more than last year, he's bringing us all together as a leader," sophomore Marial Shayok says.

That evening, Brogdon called his mom.

"I think those are character-building opportunities," she says. "When you work really hard and you feel like you're doing your best, and someone says that to you, you have to have enough character and not so much ego, that you can, in self-reflection, examine what's going on, and he did that. ...

"He needed to stop forcing and figure out a way to make those around him better. Leading isn't shooting. He talked to me about it because he really processed it. ... I think he knew that he could do better. It's hard to be criticized, but I do think he responded to that in a healthy way."

The next night Brogdon went 7 for 11 and scored 20 points in a victory over Clemson, the first of seven consecutive wins that propelled the Cavaliers back into the top 10. Since the defeat at Florida State, Brogdon is averaging 20.4 points and shooting 51.3 percent from the field, 94.3 percent from the free-throw line.

During the same stretch, the best basketball of his career, he has reinforced his defensive chops against the likes of Duke's Grayson Allen and Brandon Ingram, North Carolina State's Cat Barber, Georgia Tech's Marcus Georges-Hunt, Clemson's Jaron Blossomgame and Louisville's Damion Lee.

Throughout, Brogdon has drawn raves and, in the case of Clemson's Brad Brownell, a warm embrace, from opposing coaches. Not to mention his own.

Future

The next step: helping Virginia advance beyond the Sweet 16 for the first time since 1995.

"What a legacy he'll leave behind," Bennett says. "That's worthy to be celebrated — at the right time. ... You don't usually see a guy improve in his last year as much as Malcolm did. He's gotten more efficient, I've seen him asserting his leadership. ... To be recognized like he was, in this kind of league with this kind of talent, it'll be something that will stand the test of time, I'm sure."

Brogdon has anywhere from one to six college games remaining, after which he'll prepare for the NBA draft and finish his master's.

Once the sole domain of college seniors, the NBA draft has become a futures market where teams gamble on college underclassmen and international prospects. The latest draft projections from Sports Illustrated, DraftExpress.com and NBADraft.net have nine freshmen and either one or two seniors — Oklahoma's Buddy Hield is the consensus senior — among the top 15 picks, with Brogdon slotted anywhere from late in the first round to late in the second.

Regardless of when he's selected, Brogdon's professional career arc figures to mirror his time at Virginia, with intangibles and hard work producing consistent improvement.

"I'm high on Malcolm Brogdon as an NBA player," says ESPN analyst and former Virginia Tech coach Seth Greenberg. "It's got to be the right team. Look, he doesn't have the burst you might want, but he gets by his man. He has long arms, which enable him to — I think he's going to be an elite defender. He has a toughness. He's hard to screen. His shot is awkward, but he makes it.

"The big question is, how far can he push his range out? But he can get the ball to good spots on the floor. Getting the ball to good spots on the floor — people should not take that for granted. He's physically strong. He's 23, right? So at 23 he's maxed out? We draft European guys and wait for them to get to 23 before we try to sign them. I think in the right system for the right coach, I don't see any reason why he can't play in the NBA."

With clear eyes and without delusions, Brogdon understands the hurdles ahead. Better players than he have failed to make the NBA. Equally well-intentioned activists have been unable to change policy toward, and overall conditions in, Africa.

But if Princeton-educated Bill Bradley can become a Hall of Fame basketball player and U.S. senator, if Georgetown-educated Dikembe Mutombo can become a NBA all-star and renowned humanitarian in his native Democratic Republic of the Congo, then why can't Malcolm Brogdon have it all, too?

The work will be taxing, replete with disappointment, sacrifice and satisfaction. Much like the past five years.

"A lot of the time it does feel like too much," Brogdon says. "But I think that's how life works. I think when you're pushing yourself, when you're outside of your comfort zone, it's going to feel like too much. But you have to keep getting up every morning and keep working at it. ... I feel like you have to challenge yourself if you want to accomplish great things. ...

"I'm going to use basketball as long as I can. I think basketball is a tool for me, is more of a platform ... for me to step into life, the real world and do something amazing."

NCAA tournament: For Virginia's senior class, bonds come due

By Ava Wallace, Washington Post March 16, 2016

RALEIGH, N.C. – For Anthony Gill, Malcolm Brogdon is always the hardest to crack. The other Virginia men's basketball players are easier targets – Devon Hall, a mere redshirt sophomore? Doesn't stand a chance.

Take the postgame scene earlier this month at Clemson. Hall made it about half of a sentence into an interview before he noticed Gill staring at him from a few feet away, Gill's curls bouncing up and down as he nodded along with feigned solemnity. Hall stopped. "I'm sorry," Hall said, shaking his head and smiling, "[Gill] just got me off track."

Not so for Brogdon, Gill's closest friend on the team and one of the Cavaliers' team leaders (along with Gill). After the 64-57 win at Clemson on March 1, the two seniors were the only Virginia players left talking to the media. Brogdon just wanted to see his mom and go to bed. He answered yet another question as Gill made faces at Brogdon behind reporters' backs. When Brogdon finished — without so much as a grin — he shouted, "Man, Anthony!" as Gill ran away.

"Sometimes I'm like, 'AG, enough,' "Brogdon said, looking down before he began to smile. "He never stops, but I'm so used to it by now. It's like background noise."

Brogdon and Gill, Virginia's longtime odd couple, are the anchors of one of the most accomplished senior classes in the program's history: the class that brought Coach Tony Bennett two top seeds in the NCAA tournament (including this year), two regular season ACC titles and an ACC tournament championship. The class, which also includes key pieces like Mike Tobey and Evan Nolte, is four wins away (it has 109 since the start of 2012-13) from finishing off the winningest four-season run in program history.

The only thing missing from its résumé is a deep NCAA tournament run. The seniors have made it only as far as the Sweet 16 (in 2014) and have lost to Michigan State each of the past two seasons. The sobering reality for these Cavaliers: If form holds, the second-seeded Spartans and Cavaliers will meet again in the Midwest Region final in Chicago.

"Of course, all of us feel that [pressure]," Tobey said. "With the seniors, there's just an extra sense of urgency because it's our last year here."

Now, as Brogdon and Gill prepare to lead the Cavaliers (26-7) to the NCAA tournament one last time — starting first with No. 16 seed Hampton (21-10) on Thursday in Raleigh — the pair's relationship is as fundamental to the Cavaliers' success as their statistics. For Brogdon, the ACC player of the year, that's a team-leading 18.7 points per game; for Gill, it's 13.3 points and a team-best 6.1 rebounds.

"Experience and maturity and chemistry will be a big role for us at this point," Brogdon said Monday. "That's really what it comes down to in the postseason — if your lead guys can play together and they can do it at a high level and lead the team at a high level, we can be successful."

Brogdon and Gill first became friends when they were both on Virginia's scout team during the 2012-13 season, when Brogdon was redshirting his second year because of a foot injury and Gill was sitting out a mandatory season after transferring from South Carolina. They forged a friendship in practice, frustrating Bennett and fellow teammates alike by routinely beating the first unit.

"Oh, yeah, that was the year the actual team couldn't beat us," Gill recalled.

That was when Gill learned how to dissolve Brogdon into giggles. It was also when Gill and Brogdon discovered they, like the three other seniors in their class (including seldom-used reserve Caid Kirven), had reasons apart from basketball for coming to Charlottesville — be it shared faith with Bennett, a devout Christian, or the university's academics.

"We wanted to be a part of something that would grow them as basketball players but as men as well," Gill said. "Everyone had the same idea in that way." Those shared values also helped bond a group of players with dramatically different personalities, which, to Bennett, translated to the long-term success of the program.

"It was essential. All of those guys, what they represented . . . you need the kind of guys that you can go through adversity with. We talked about that before," Bennett said. "That you can lose with first before you win.

"It sounds strange, but a lot of time when I watch players, I ask myself, 'Can I lose with Malcolm Brogdon?' I look up into the stands and see their parents and who's watching them and say, 'Are these the kind of people I can lose with, that I can go through hard times with and they'll stick with it?' ... I think that's significant in eventually building a program. All of those guys have had their shares of ups, but they've also had their downs. They just stayed true to that kind of commitment to what matters."

Sometimes, what matters is simply when one makes the other crack up during an interview.

"Malcolm and I, we've had four long years together ..." Gill started Wednesday, before Brogdon shot him a look across the locker room.

Gill didn't finish his sentence. He was laughing too hard.

Balanced scoring a postseason key for UVa heading to Sweet 16

By Mike Barber, Richmond Times-Dispatch March 20, 2016

RALEIGH, N.C. - Just before halftime, Marial Shayok showed he was unafraid.

Virginia trailed Butler 25-23 on Saturday night in the second round of the NCAA tournament. Cavaliers senior forward Anthony Gill grabbed a rebound with 8 seconds left before the break and pushed the ball ahead to Shayok, a sophomore guard.

Conventional wisdom dictated Shayok would get the ball to senior guard Malcolm Brogdon, the ACC's player of the year, a Naismith Trophy finalist and the unquestioned leader for U.Va.

Shayok didn't. He dribbled to his right, elevated and got off a jumper as the horn sounded.

Shayok's shot missed, but notice was served. Brogdon's supporting cast understood Saturday night and understands going forward, Virginia's Final Four dreams won't be realized without all of them.

"I just wanted to bring some energy," Shayok said. "We have so much depth on our team. I wanted to step up and provide what I can offensively and defensively."

Shayok scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half, when Virginia (28-7) used a four-guard lineup to create space for dribble penetration. Wildly inconsistent senior center Mike Tobey was a model of offensive efficiency, scoring 10 points in just nine minutes of playing time, grabbing a pair of big offensive rebounds.

Those two joined Brogdon and Gill to give U.Va. four players in double figures in the 77-69 win over the Bulldogs, one that has the Cavaliers headed to Chicago to face Iowa State (23-11) in the Sweet 16, the second time in three years they've advanced that far.

"It took everybody," coach Tony Bennett said.

Balanced scoring has always been a hallmark of Virginia's defense-first program under Bennett, and its significance ratchets up in the postseason.

In this three-year run of NCAA tournament appearances, U.Va. is 5-0 when four or more players reach double digits in scoring. It's 0-2 when fewer than that do.

Saturday night, it was Shayok giving the big, and maybe unexpected, offensive spark, helping to open up things for his teammates.

"When Marial gets in a game, he's always looking to be aggressive and attack the rim," Gill said. "That's something that we need from him because it does make it a lot easier on everybody else when we do have somebody coming off the bench who is really aggressive and looking to score."

It isn't just about scoring. Guards London Perrantes and Devon Hall combined for 12 points, but their perimeter defense on Butler's Kellen Dunham and Roosevelt Jones stopped the Bulldogs from getting into an offensive rhythm.

Of course, tightly contested NCAA tournament games often come down to which team has a player who can score a basket when the game - and the season - is on the line.

To this point, U.Va. really hasn't had a designated go-to guy in NCAA tournament games.

In 2014, three players led or tied for the team scoring lead in NCAA games (Joe Harris, Brogdon and Gill). In 2013, Brogdon led the Cavaliers with 22 points against Belmont, then Gill posted a team-high 11 in the loss to Michigan State.

This year, Gill put up a team-high 19 in the first-round win over Hampton, before Brogdon matched his NCAA high with 22 in the defeat of Butler on Saturday.

But the day before his team fell to the Brogdon-led Cavaliers, Butler coach Chris Holtmann said Brogdon has been and can continue to be that type of scorer for U.Va., in addition to everything else the ACC's player and defensive player of the year brings to the floor.

"He is their big shot-maker that they want to get shots for when they need baskets, and he's proven that he's capable of doing that over and over," Holtmann said.

But Virginia knows, to win, Brogdon can't do it alone.

Virginia knows how to grind out wins, a good thing in NCAA tournament

By Eric Brady, USA Today March 21, 2016

RALEIGH, N.C. — The Virginia Cavaliers struggled to beat Butler on their way to the Sweet 16. And they think that's a good thing.

They were knocked out of the men's NCAA tournament each of the last two seasons in grind-it-out games against Michigan State. They think the grinder they won 77-69 against Butler shows they've learned something about those kinds of tournament games. They expect that to stand them in good stead on the road ahead.

"I think this game really helped us, being able to fight and figure out a way to win," guard London Perrantes told USA TODAY Sports. "It wasn't easy, and that's good."

Top-seeded Virginia will get fourth-seeded Iowa State in the next round. Perrantes offered a brief scouting report.

"They run, shoot the ball, and Georges Niang is one of the most versatile players in the country," Perrantes said. "He carries a lot of different problems. But I think this game has helped us with those kinds of problems."

Should the Cavs beat Iowa State, they'd reach the Elite Eight, where many prognosticators had expected Virginia to meet Michigan State yet again, before the Spartans were shocked by Middle Tennessee State in the first round. You'd think Perrantes would feel good about that, but no.

"I was a little frustrated," he said. "Just wanted to have that revenge aspect to it and play them again. But I think we learned something from it, too: Don't take anything for granted. And I feel like that helped us" get ready for Butler.

Guard Malcolm Brogdon credited coach Tony Bennett for finding new ways to battle back in these kinds of tough-it-out games: "He's made adjustments going into this game, learning from last year. As a team we followed and we executed the adjustments on the floor. The four-guard lineup is the biggest adjustment, and it really helped us. ... It was a battle of wills and I think we imposed our will a little bit more."

Forward Anthony Gill thinks his team's mentality is the crucial adjustment.

"We came in a little tougher in this game," he said. "We wanted it a little bit more. Not saying we didn't want it last year around this time. This year we knew what we were getting into. We knew we had to go out there and attack from the beginning and fight throughout the whole game, and that's what we did."

Brogdon said the Cavs took Michigan State's loss in stride as they prepared for Butler.

"I don't think it was a distraction," he said. "It was something to take note of and to recognize, but at the same time we're not really a team that focuses on everything else. We focus on the task at hand."

Bennett thinks the most important thing is to play the game freely.

"You got to be free to play this game," he said. "In a way, you got nothing to lose. You watch the tournament and everybody says, 'Well, if you're a lower seed you can play with nothing to lose.' The higher seeds --- these guys, their legacy is intact. They just have to get after this and play. We tried to free their minds to get after it and play the right way."

Michigan State, the departed 2-seed, was a more popular choice for the Final Four than Virginia. Even the president picked the Spartans. The Cavaliers appeared to be the most disrespected top seed.

"We don't worry about that," Perrantes said. "We still got a 1-seed. Obviously somebody respects us enough to give us that. We're just glad to be here, glad to keep playing, and if we take care of business we'll be fine."

Virginia has not been to the Final Four since 1984. What would it be like to get back there again?

"We're in the Sweet 16," Perrantes said, waving a hand. "We're not even thinking about the Final Four yet."

Yet? He grinned.

"The Final Four would be huge," he said. "It would be huge for anybody."
