Templates of the Parisian Keyboard 3.0.1 by ali_karavaenko.rar.jpg Complementary Graphene Oxide and Titanium Dioxide Nanocomposites: Fabrication and Their Electrochemical, Gas-Sensing, and Flame Retardant Properties. Nanocomposites of titanium dioxide (TiO₂) and graphene oxide (GO) were fabricated using the sol-gel technique and characterized using Fourier transform infrared spectroscopy, X-ray diffraction, scanning electron microscopy, transmission electron microscopy, Raman spectroscopy, and thermogravimetric analysis techniques. The results showed that the GO is highly dispersible in TiO₂ matrix and GO contents in the composite have a significant effect on the morphology and phase of TiO₂. Flame retardant properties of the GO/TiO₂ nanocomposites were measured by static burning tests. For composites with a high GO concentration, the burning time is significantly reduced. The GO/TiO₂ composites show much higher gas-sensing activity in ethanol and better selectivity for ethanol than pure TiO₂. Gas-sensing studies were further confirmed by impedance spectroscopy. The analytical application of the composite sensors was also 3ef4e8ef8d
