41 PASSION MEET RESTRAINT

BEST PRACTICES

The most effective worship leaders and musicians are very passionate about how they do what they do. However, knowing when to restrain your own passionate expressions in the service of others is the greater good. There are times we can be indulgent in the music, and begin to lose the congregation.

The vibrant worship of the gathered congregation is our goal, and both passion and restraint should be held in tension, as both are necessary to effective worship leadership.
