

HANDS

He held her hand one final time, the hand that was his love, the hand was of his dying wife, his angel from above, he raised her hand up to his lips and gave a gentle kiss, this hand had meant so much to him, this hand he'd sorely miss.

This hand, that fit so well in his, was always by his side, had praised him for accomplishments, and soothed him when he cried, had worked to make their house a home, had toiled both day and night, had cooked the meals and raised the young to always do what's right, had mended clothes and scrubbed the floors and wiped away the tears, helped steady up the fallen ones for oh, so many years.

But now this hand, both old and frail, was coming near its end, this hand belongs to his true love, his lifelong loving friend, and as his lips bestowed the kiss...a tear fell from his eye, he held her hand so tenderly, and said his last goodbye.
