

O Fairest Land of Adam-ondi-Ahman

O Fairest Land of Adam-ondi-Ahman,
This green and sunlit place I love so well,
Valley of God, where Adam came from Eden
With Eve, to seek a home where they might dwell.
Sometimes a gentle, smiling face I see;
On quiet paths, I feel them walk with me.

The leafy trees have sheltered generations,
Where first our parents toiled for daily bread.
They whisper still, in humble veneration,
Of exiled saints the Prophet Joseph led,
While barren stones their stories yearn to share
Of ancient Nephites kneeling here in prayer.

The redbuds bloom in springtime to adorn thee;
The leaves of autumn crown thy head with gold.
How like a temple are thy verdant meadows;
Their holy peace my tender heart enfolds.
And joy within my heart begins to grow,
Pure as thy covering of winter snow.

Oh, fairest land - sweet Adam-ondi-Ahman
May I return, though I must leave thee now?
When Christ, with Adam, stands upon thy tower,
And faithful saints before their presence bow,
Remember me, who loved thee in the past,
And bid me come to meet them here at last.
