

A Cowboy's Farewell

The trail was long, the sky so wide,
With hat tipped low and a faithful stride.
A cowboy's heart, strong and true,
Rode every storm, the skies so blue.

Like John Wayne, with steady hand,
He stood for right, took a stand.
No frills, no fuss, just grit and grace,
A gentle smile on a weathered face.

The open range, his sacred place,
Where sunsets paint with bold embrace.
He knew the worth of work and land,
Of helping neighbors, lending hands.

Now boots are still, the reins laid down,
A legend's rest, a well-earned crown.
But every breeze, each star up high,
Carries his spirit across the sky.

So raise a glass, a story tell,
For the cowboy we loved so well.
A life well lived, a heart so wide —
He rides again on the other side.

*Always in our thoughts,
Forever in our hearts.*
