

A Mothers Love Never Dies

*She carries you with her from a seed to a child,
Then after that you are hers all the while.
Attached at the hip, or even a bottle she wonders
When you will begin to waddle.*

*There are times when she must let you fall.
But the real pain is not yours but hers. For she Knows this is how you must grow and be tall.
Then after that when you are grown and out of the house. She wonders does she know I Love her, did I teach her enough? Or was I too
Quiet, quiet even as a mouse.*

*She is there through the good times, and bad,
And hopes there are more yet to be had. For
The things in life may not be easy as pies, but
A mothers love never dies.*

*Now as a mother, A mother of several. You
Wonder how you will treat them all equal.
Each with there own little wants and desires.
Just think back to your own little mother.*

*Now she is aging, aging quite fast, you know
There is truth when you heard in the past, that
A mothers love never dies.*

*You bring her home, home for a while, and
Give her the love and care she gave you as a child.
Now it is hard, hard to determine who is the mother,
And who is the daughter. She fights hard not
To give up her roll, but nature always, always wins over.*

*She gets into a wheelchair so you can take her a
Walk, but she wants to take you for a stroll around the block.
You stay up at night to see what's on TV but she is so
Tired, so tired she cant see. But she wont go to bed
Till she knows you are in, for that was the way life
Was back then.*

*Now I can say that a mothers love surely never dies.
It just lives on and on and on, because a Mothers Love
Is that kind of love that can not die, because she has Given it to both you and I.*

*Written on behalf of my dear sweet Grandmother
Dora Mae Weeks 1905-2002
Dedicated to my mother who devoted the last few years of Grandma's life caring for her.*

Thanks Mom for all you do.
