

"All Good Things" by Jackson Browne

All good things got to come to an end
 The thrills have to fade
 Before they come 'round again
 The bills will be paid
 And the pleasure will mend
 All good things got to come to an end

God I wish I was home
 Laying 'round with my friends
 The call of the wild
 Caution thrown to the wind
 The fall of the child
 Where the longing begins
 All good things got to come to an end

Like a river flows
 Rolling 'till the ends in the sea
 Our pleasure grows
 Rolling 'till it ends in you and me

Now as the dark gathers into the sky
 And legions of might go thundering by
 Regions of light grow dim and then die
 And we with our wings
 Wait for morning to fly

Here where the angels
 Have appeared and are gone
 Your face like an ember
 Glows in the dawn
 But I want you to remember
 All wild deeds live on
 All good times, all good friends
 All good things got to come to an end
