F003 Real World Fireground Strategy & Tactics for Smaller Fire Departments
Saturday

One of the biggest mistakes made by smaller fire departments is trying to operate like their colleagues in the "Big City" departments, in spite of the fact that they don't possess the manpower and resources that their larger counterparts have at their disposal. This class will begin with an overview of basic Size-Up considerations and standard Fireground strategic priorities and tactical objectives. Then we will discuss these tactical operations given the limited manpower and resources common to smaller fire departments. Lastly the class participants will proceed to a designated location for some scenario-based training evolutions to apply the strategic goals and tactical objectives discussed in the classroom.

Instructor: Nick Morgan

Instructor bio: Nick Morgan is a Captain with the St Louis Fire Department, a 36-year veteran of the Fire Service, and has previously served as a volunteer firefighter, and an Aircraft/Structural Firefighter for the US Air Force.
