About the course	These are informal sessions for creative writers that provide an opportunity to develop and expand your skills in a relaxed environment and although there are regular, monthly workshop sessions, you don't need to have been previously to join us; each session stands alone. Regular attendees have the opportunity to produce short stories for other café users to read on their visits.
Who is the Course for?	Creative Writers of all abilities and experience are welcome to join our workshops.
Course Content	Each workshop focuses on different writing skills and techniques, often using the cafe as a source of inspiration.
During the course	You will learn by taking part in writing exercises and sharing your work with the group.
Refreshments	There will be a break mid-way through when you will be able to purchase a drink and a slice of delicious cake from the café.
About the Tutor	Helen Stockton (www.helenstockton.co.uk) has been teaching creative writing to adults for ten years. She is a qualified teacher with an MA in Literature and an experienced freelance writer. She is the author of a book How to Teach Creative Writing. She believes writing should be a fun and life-enhancing experience and is, perhaps regrettably, best known for her dog-blog and regular magazine column in Magnet Magazine, written from the point of view of her small, scruffy, badly behaved Border Terrier.....
Booking details	Places are secured by booking with The Courtyard (www.thecourtyardrotherfield.co.uk) on 01892 852333 with fees payable on the day. Places are limited to as many as will fit round a large table!
Previous feedback	"I really enjoyed the course – it was taught in a fun way [...] I really feel I've got value for money." - Mike. "Many thanks for the day. Time flew!! Hope to see you on another course." – Judi.
