

Progeny of Alloura 'super sires' offered

THE lineup of sale bulls at Alloura Angus at Yass features sons of three bulls selected in Angus Australia's Sire Benchmarking Program.

One of the key objectives of the program is to discover new 'super sires', with comprehensive evaluation of progeny from the selected bulls for growth, carcase, fertility and feed efficiency.

It is the largest single breed progeny test program ever conducted in Australia.

Where the show ring was once where studs were made and broken, increasingly beef producers are looking for real results and programs like the Sire Benchmarking Program are being used to identify and test the top bulls – not merely based on how they look, but rather how well their progeny perform.

The Angus Sire Benchmarking Program, now includes bulls from Australia, New Zealand, the USA and the United Kingdom, is co-funded by Angus

STUD SALE: Alloura Angus, located at Yass, will welcome buyers to view and purchase stock during open days on September 16 and 17.

Australia and Meat and Live-stock Australia.

All calves born under the program are weighed for 200 and 400 day Wts and DNA samples are collected for sire verification and high quality DNA storage.

Steer calves are back-grounded before feedlot entry and the steers are feed efficiency tested at the University of New England's Tullimba Research Facility and feedlot before being slaughtered and assessed for carcase and meat quality data. Heifers are grown out for joining to enable assessment of fertility and calving ease data.

Alloura Angus has bred three of the bulls selected in the Benchmarking program - 'Alloura Fourth Dimension F27', 'Alloura Get Up and Go G19' and 'Alloura - Get Cracking G10'.

All three bulls have performed well and now have more than 300 analysed progeny.

For the first time this year Alloura Angus is offering sale bulls sired by all three bulls in the Benchmarking Program.

The bulls will be available for inspection and purchase at the annual Alloura Angus spring open days.

The 2016 Alloura Angus Stud spring open days are scheduled for Friday and Saturday, September 16 and 17, 2016 at 'Alloura', 598 Goodhope Road Yass from 10am and 3pm on each day.

Forty bulls will be available for purchase.
