If your home is in a state that does not administer its own qualifying installation program, installation of the home will be required to comply with federal requirements, including installation in accordance with federal installation standards set forth in 24 CFR part 3285 and certification by a licensed installer of installation work, regardless of whether the work is performed by the homeowner or anyone else. The certification must include inspection by an appropriate person. The installation of the home may also be required to comply with additional state and local requirements.

If your home is in a state that administers its own qualifying installation program approved by HUD, the installation of the home will need to be installed by a state licensed installer and comply with all state approved installation requirements (see 24 CFR Part 3286.7(b)(1)). The installation of the home may also be required to comply with additional state and local requirements.

Additional information about the requirements in this disclosure is available from the retailer and, in the case of the federal requirements, is available in part 3286 of Title 24 of the Code of Federal Regulations and from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Compliance with any additional federal, state, and local requirements, including a requirement for inspection of the installation of the home, may involve additional costs to the purchaser or lessee.

It is recommended that any home that has been reinstalled after its original installation should be professionally inspected after it is set up, in order to assure that it has not been damaged in transit and is properly installed.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Manufactured Home Dispute Resolution Program is available to resolve disputes among manufacturers, retailers, or installers concerning defects in manufactured homes. Many states also have a consumer assistance or dispute resolution program. For additional information about these programs, see sections titled “Dispute Resolution Process” and “Additional Information—HUD Manufactured Home Dispute Resolution Program” in the Consumer Manual required to be provided to the purchaser. These programs are not warranty programs and do not replace the manufacturers, or any other person's, warranty program.
