Babylon & Assyria

Mesopotamia, the land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, was first settled by the Sumerians around 5000 BCE. At first, they were farmers, but around 3000, the Sumerians began to form large city-states along the two rivers. About 1,000 years after the Sumerians settled in Mesopotamia, two new civilizations arose. One was Babylon to the south. The other was Assyria in the north.

Assyria

The Assyrians built their first city on the stability to the region banks of the Tigris River in modern-day Iraq. and had a very strict They named it Assur after their chief aod, code of law written For hundreds of years, between 2400 to 612 BC, they fought with and conquered their neighbors. As they added land to their territory, expanding their empire from the Mediterranean Sea across Arabia and Armenia, Assvria became a rich and powerful empire in the Mesopotamian region.

The City of Nineveh

The Assyrian capital city was Nineveh, north of Babylon. The goddess Ishtar was the chief goddess of the city. Nineveh was one of the world's greatest cities in ancient times. The city walls stretched for 3 miles along the Tigris River.

Within the city, there were many beautiful buildings and temples, decorated with sculptures of huge demons to protect the city from evil spirits. Some have survived to this day. Researchers know a great deal about life in Assyria because they have discovered artifacts made by long-ago artisans, who carefully depicted scenes of battles, war heroes, and every day occurrences on painted ceramics.

The Assyrians were traders. Their donkey caravans were known throughout Mesopotamia. They carried cloth from Assyria and tin from beyond the Tigris and traded it in southern Turkey for gold, silver, and other metals.

Babylon

In approximately 1780 BCE, King Hammurabi established the city of Babylon as the political and commercial center of Mesopotamia. Marduk, the god of thunderstorms, was the chief god of Babylon. The massive city gates were designed with dragons and bulls in honor of Marduk.

Hammurabi brought down. These laws applied to everyone in the kingdom. They placed were ir public places SO evervone would know what they were.

of The courts Babylon oversaw administering justice and making sure the Code of Hammurabi was followed. Each court had one to four judges. Punishment included capital punishment, mutilation, flogging, fines, and banishment.

Splendid City

The Babylonians were impressive builders. Ancient Greek historian Herodotus describes Babylon as the most splendid city in the known world. It was impressive for both its size and its beauty. Babylon's outer walls were 56 miles in length, 80 feet thick, and 320 feet high.

A 300-foot ziggurat (temple) loomed over the city. - It was built in honor of the god Marduk and could be seen from miles away across the wide plain.

Hammurabi's reign, trade thrived. Babylonian trading caravans traveled far and wide.

During

The Babylonians used lumps of silver for money and kept business records on cuneiform tablets. Many visitors traveled to Babylon to buy gold, jewelry, fruits and vegetables, clothing, date wine, and other goods, such as slaves.

Thousands of people lived inside the city. was king from 668 to 625 There were large inns for travelers, taverns for food and drink, and prisons for those who broke the law. There were skilled laborers, bankers, carpenters, rope makers, stone and brick masons, potters, and even sailors, who manned the boats on the rivers.

Fierce Warriors

The Assyrians had the most powerful army in Mesopotamia. They were the first to use iron-tipped spears and arrows. They made war chariots and protective armor. They used battering rams to knock down the walls of the cities they attacked. Around 1200 BC, the conquered

Assyrians Babylon and burned down the city. With their strong armies, they conquered and ruled the entire Mesopotamian region. Because of their cruel and unfair treatment of other peoples, they were despised (hated) throughout the region. They forced the Babylonians to move to other towns and cities throughout the Mesopotamian region. Then, fearful that the great god Marduk would be angry with them for destroying a city that had been dedicated to him, the Assyrians rebuilt Babylon.

By 900 BC, the Assyrian army dominated the entire region. The Assyrians continued to burn cities and torture their enemies. They earned a reputation for extreme cruelty among those they conquered and were despised (hated) by other people in the region. By 650 BC, the Assyrians had conquered a vast empire, stretching between the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, the Mediterranean Sea, the Black Sea, and the Caspian Sea.

Long Lost Empire

Great Assyrian kings include Sargon II, who ruled around 700 BC and Sennacherib, who ruled after Sargon II. Ashur-Bani-Pal

BCE He assembled the first known library in Nineveh. More than 20,000 clay tablets have been found among its ruins.

In addition to the clay tablets, archaeologists have also found artifacts that indicate the Assyrians believed in an afterlife. They buried their dead with the dead person's favorite possessions, such as weapons, drinking cups, and other small personal items. An oil lamp was kept burning near or at the aravesite, perhaps to light the way between worlds for the deceased.

Destroyed and Restored

In 612 BC, a desert tribe known as the Chaldeans formed an alliance with the Medes to overthrow the Assyrians, bringing their empire to an end. The Chaldean king Nebuchadnezzar restored the city of Babylon to its former glory. He reigned for 43 vears.

Nebuchadnezzar built the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, one of the 7 wonders of the ancient world. It was an engineering marvel, built like a stadium with garden terraces and waterfalls tumbling from one level to the next. Nebuchadnezzar also had the massive ziggurat dedicated to Marduk rebuilt.

studied the moon, the sun, and the stars. They came up with the idea of seven days in a week, naming one day for the sun, one for the moon, and the other five for the planets they knew about. King Nabonidus was the last ruler of Babylon before it was conquered by Cyrus the Great, the king of Persia, in 539 BC.
