While we can't promise you'll never have to travel again, we can promise you'll never lose your luggage on a Hanby conference call. And almost certainly, you'll save money and increase your productivity too. So before you pack your suitcase or catch the early morning flight, consider the advantages of Hanby conferencing.

- The average cost of a domestic business trip is over $1,000. Compare this to 8¢ per minute per line for Hanby audio conferencing.
- A typical business trip lasts 2 to 3 days. If you travel a lot, you know that most of that time is wasted – travelling to and from the airport, waiting for your flight, and actual flying time. Substitute some of your business travel with Hanby conferencing and we think you'll be surprised how much you can increase your productivity.
- The majority of business travelers say the time they spend with family has been significantly reduced in recent years. Conferencing can help you reclaim valuable time to nurture and enjoy the personal relationships in your life.
- Many companies are looking for ways to reduce their carbon footprint. By replacing just one long-haul flight with a conference call you'll save about 1 metric tonne of CO₂, a leading contributor to climate change.
- During a pandemic or other disaster that may threaten the ongoing operation of your business, conferencing can play a vital role in communications with employees and other stakeholders.

Audio conferencing

Hanby audio conferencing provides instant access to a conference bridge from any telephone in the world without the assistance of an operator. You can hold your planned and impromptu meetings when it's convenient for you, without the need and hassle of making reservations. To join a conference call, all participants call the same dial-in number and use the same access code. It's that easy.

Hanby audio conferencing is also very affordable. There are no set-up fees, no monthly subscriptions and no hidden charges. Our pay-as-you-go pricing model means you pay only when you use the service. For only 8¢ per minute for each line, your conference participants have the freedom to call in from anywhere in Canada and the United States.
