

Dear Members of Mt. Zion,

Last week I shared with you words of concern for the people of the Carolinas and Georgia as they prepared for Hurricane Florence as it was making its landfall. By now, you and I have been watching the new reports showing us the scenes of destruction and allowing us to hear the real life conversations of people whose lives have been tragically altered. And the horrible news of how much destruction this hurricane has caused, and will cause in the future, grows every day. As of today, the death toll has climbed to 36 people. And that number could grow higher. Our hearts go out to those who grieve the loss of loved ones. Beyond the tragic loss of human life, we also hear reports about those who have lost their homes, of millions and millions of people who are without power. We have become aware of how people's livelihoods have been effected. The Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services has been counting the loss of livestock in the field. As of Thursday, September 20th, they report that 3.4 million chickens and turkeys have died so far, along with 5,500 pigs. Whatever happens to the farming industry has dire effects for all of us. We can now have a greater understanding how the Americans in Puerto Rico are trying to deal with the devastation caused by Hurricane Maria a year ago.

Again, I ask that we keep this situation in our prayers and invite us to seek God's wisdom as to how we might follow our prayers with compassionate acts that will help those adversely effected by Hurricane Florence. I was greatly touched in last week's worship service when Chad Hawthorne shared with us how the Scout Troup of Mt. Zion would be meeting that same day to put together 100 relief buckets to send to the Carolinas. That is God's love in action.

Grace & Peace,

Gary
