YOUNG-ADULT FICTION AUTHOR of the RED BUTTERFLY SERIES

About Butterfly Red Sky, Book 1

Demons and evil lurk in the world of seventeen-year-old Maya Colebrook, especially the shadow man who murders her each night in her dreams-the same man who took her best friend, Lizzy's, life. When Tucker, the handsome cowboy deputy she's falling for, is shot on duty, Maya has to distract herself from Lizzy's case. Twists and turns lead her to discover that her small town of Caldwell, Montana has been keeping dark secrets since the expansion of the new highway. When the two cases suddenly intertwine, Maya must find the shadow man before he finds her.

The only problem-the shadow man could be anyone.

Butterfly Red Sky is the first book to be released in the six-book series.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Young-Adult
Fiction Writer
Aubrey Moore

Aubrey always had pen and paper in her hands—even as a ten-year-old child, she'd find herself sitting on the back steps of her grandparents' house writing stories of youth and the struggles young girls go through in a judgmental society. Her stories developed later into a love for portraying young girls as heroines whose faith and trust in people is constantly being tested.

She often appeared onstage in several plays, studying the lines of the writers' words, developing her own writing form in the process. In a writing course at Foothill College in Los Altos, CA, she wrote a short screenplay, Inheritance, which the college's acting class chose to perform live.

Aubrey took an interest in screenplay writing in her early teens but quickly advanced into writing novels. With binders and journals full of story ideas, the Red Butterfly series emerged.

In 2015, she started her own Publishing Company, RippleEffect Books, in which she hopes to encourage and help young writers through the writing process.

Aubrey Moore, 27, currently resides in Nevada with her husband, rambunctious daughter, two cats, two big dogs, and a couple goldfish.
