You will learn good stage and vocal presence as well as learn how to engage with an audience while entering into another character. Dramatic techniques and line memorization will be part of this sequential learning series in which each session builds on the previous class. The spotlight will be on you so bask in the glory with Shannon Turner.

Harlem Renaissance and Great Migration (3 sessions) – Marilyn Sprouse

Time: 4:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m.

Ages: 13 - 18

Day: Thursday

Dates: Aug 2, 9, 16

Fee: $90.00 (which equals only $8.00 per hour) materials included

Maximum: 15

Details: Participants work with Marilyn Sprouse, an Art Teacher at the Lancaster, VA middle school. Ms. Sprouse is a board member with the Rappahannock Art League where she serves as the Youth Engagement Coordinator. Ms. Sprouse has more than 15 years of experience teaching both youth and adults in the field of visual arts. Ms. Sprouse is also known for her Art Rocks event, in which participants create mini murals on rocks with positive messages and then randomly place them in various locations across the community. During the years, 1919 to 1934 Harlem, New York, became a haven for African-Americans and the backdrop for outstanding authors, poets, dramatists, artists, and musicians in a short span of time. Harlem became the center; the hub from which the works flowed. The Harlem Renaissance is a reflection of the total experience of African Americans in early twentieth-century society. The literature, art, and music of the period portray the despair of generations of unfulfilled promises as well as the dream of a new society based on equality of opportunity. Students will learn about the movement, the history, the production, and the connection of that era to the present. Furthermore, the impact and influence the Harlem Renaissance has had across all forms of visual and performing arts. If you ever wanted to transcend and learn about how a culture broke down barriers in spite of oppression by utilizing the arts as a conduit then jump into the time machine and migrate into Marilyn's transformative creative class.
