

Cheyenne Cody

Artist Bio

Cheyenne Cody loves to use her God-given gift of song to minister to the hearts of people, leading them into the presence of the Lord. Influenced by her father, a minister, who sang in local groups and on the radio as a young man, Cody shares the same passion to sing for God's glory.

Cody grew up listening to Gospel music from Billy Graham crusades, Jimmy Swaggart, the Gaithers, Blackwood Brothers, the Imperials and others. Singing since she was a young girl, traveling to churches and singing with her family, Cheyenne's heart for music has stayed with her into her adult years. She participated in choirs whenever possible and developed her gift in choral competitions and solo contests. At her father's urging, she began singing solos in church at the age of 15, ministering in song and touching the hearts of God's people. She later became part of a worship team and grew into the role of worship leader. She also directed a Children's Choir and was able to leave a lasting impression of the joy of music and ministering for God on the children's lives she touched.

God has placed a calling and a passion within Cody, and she believes that God has opened some doors and will continue to open doors for her to spread the news of Jesus Christ. Cody has sung in churches, nursing homes, county fairs and festivals and will go wherever there is an open door. Cody has a repertoire that offers a variety of music; praise and worship, contemporary, traditional, and those favorite southern gospel songs that still stir the hearts. Her desire is to touch people's hearts and minister to their needs, to provide hope, illustrate God's love for them, and usher them into the presence of God.

People are truly moved by her work. At a recent memorial service of a dear friend, she sang "His Eye is on the Sparrow." The song touched many of the attendees. Responses included the comment, "I've never before heard anyone sing that as well as George Beverly Shea!"
