Like a Local

Did you think that prohibition finished in 1933? Think again...

New York is seeing a new era of "Speakeasies" that have flourished in the past year or two.

We recommend exploring Fig 19, Blind Barber and Bathtub Gin.

48 hours: Our guide to getting the most out of New York

In the "City That Never Sleeps", there will never be a loss for entertainment for tourists. Each neighborhood is so different than the next, so it's always possible to find "that special something" or "where dreams are made" factor that tourists are looking for in New York. Even within just a short trip! If your client is only swinging through NYC for just a quick 48 hours, here's are the must-do's...

On Day One in The Big Apple, tourists shouldn't waste any time and hop on New York's infamous "Citi Bikes" - a bike share system throughout the city that is the trendiest and best way to pop around and see the town. Day passes start at just $12 and bikes racks are located on nearly every other block. We recommend heading to Washington Square Park to lounge in the grass, take in the sights, or catch some live music. Not too far away is West Village, where tourists can continue on their bike tour and browse the charming boutique stores in the area, then finish the day off with dinner at Jeffrey's Grocery for some fresh seafood.

On Day Two, tourists can unwind a bit from their "New York minute" by checking out. The High Line, a 1.5 mile long old railway bridge, turned urban park located in Manhattan. The High Line opened in 2011 and has become a sunny day gem, consisting of various running paths, unique sculptures and views.

End the trip snagging tickets to one of New York's comedy clubs and experience a more cultural side to New York. Comedy Cellar often hosts highly famous comics, such as Louis C.K., with various shows every night.
