June 3, 2018 - The Most Holy Body and Blood of Christ (Corpus Christi)

Living the Paschal Mystery

"Catholicism is a sacramental faith. We are an earthly people, needing to touch, taste, see, smell, and feel. Is it any wonder that the way we connect with the incarnation of God is to consume the Body and Blood of that incarnation? Rather than merely listen to the word of God, we consume that Word of God made flesh. The sacramental reality reaches something deep within. Our faith is not simply a head trip, or the summary of what can be learned in books. Our faith is something we experience with our senses. We taste bread; we drink wine. By consuming this sacramental meal we participate in the life of Christ and his paschal mystery.

The very word "incarnation" has "carne" (flesh) in its root. We can say that the "incarnation" of the word of God is the "enfleshment" of the Word of God. The graphic nature of the image might repulse us. But we are not disembodied spirits upon this earth. We are earthly, organic omnivores. Our sustenance comes from consumption, and our spiritual sustenance comes from consumption as well. The bread and wine, our sacramental meal, is our living the paschal mystery."
