

What's not to love about

The Campbelltown Theatre commenced life as the Temperance Hall, built by James Bocking and his Sons in 1862. It was purchased in 1884 for £800 for use as a Town Hall. The hall could seat 400 people and was lit by kerosene lamps.

A fire station was built next door in 1891 and taken over by Council for the Clerk's Office. The Board of Fire Commissioners threatened court action but in 1909 it accepted £75 from Council for the premises. The Façade of the fire station and town hall is decorated in solid late Victorian style, and this is the main character of these buildings. These two buildings now appear as one and are located at 297 Queen Street, Campbelltown.
