Background

An unusual battle for the Napoleonic Wars where the long term allies Russia and Austria are fighting against each other. The Austrian's are operating on the Southern flank of the French advance into Russia. The Russian's under General Tormassov have successfully attacked some isolated French allied forces in the south. Napoleon has ordered Austrian General Schwartzburg to push back the Russian forces and they have met near the town of Gorodetschna. After a bit of manoeuvring Reynier's Saxon Corps has moved through forest and around the Russian left flank, causing the Russians to change front.

Organisation

The French have two corps for activation purposes. The Russians have three corps.

Terrain

Hill tops give uphill advantages against attackers on the slopes and they provide crests for infantry fire. The river is fordable.

Set Up

Units are set up anywhere in their corps deployment area including half hexes at the side of a their deployment box. When these half hexes are in the deployment zones of two corps either corps can be deployed in that hex. The Russians set up first.

Victory Conditions

If either side breaks the other the win. If neither side breaks the side holding the most Victory Points at the end of the time limit wins.
