Vintage Conditions

Winter rainfall was about average and provided welcome rejuvenation for the ground water. Rainfall from flowering through to harvest was slightly above average ensuring fresh healthy canopies which assisted in even ripening. The growing season was consistently warmer than average, without any damaging heat. The warm weather in late November and early December was ideal for flowering, with excellent berry set and seed development. This resulted in even maturity and berry size at harvest. The 2010 vintage in Coonawarra enjoyed even and early ripening, with moderate yields delivering full fruit flavours and balanced acidity.
