Storytelling Techniques in Play Therapy

Come learn story-telling techniques that are effective with non-verbal client populations (adults, gender-specific groups, adolescents, substance abuse, etc). Here is your chance to participate in an informative, experiential, interactive training process that includes hands on activities and research driven data. Learn how to help you clients tell their own unique story in a way that can be heard and processed. Story-telling is a great intervention that promotes agency of change.

This approach can be used with a variety of comorbid, co-occurring disorders: depression, anxiety, adult victims of childhood sexual abuse, anger/rage, family-relational conflicts, etc. This training is a great addition to your repertoire for family therapy groups. Storytelling is an excellent way to engage all family members while hearing the "presenting problem" from a variety of perspectives.
