

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

This production could easily have happened without me, but it definitely could not have happened without the hard work of several others. Melody Baughman has worked tirelessly to organize the logistical details involved with the show. Sadie Rose has been the stage manager, props mistress, errand girl, and everything in between. She has willingly and quickly handled everything I asked of her, and remained understanding when I later changed my mind. Most of all, I must thank my wife (and assistant director). She supported my original desire to direct, and has helped me with both her presence and her valuable stage experience.

It is quite remarkable that this school offers the opportunity for an inexperienced director to compile a diverse cast of students to perform such a strange show. Nowhere else could I have had this experience, and for that I am grateful.

Now, I must let you focus on the show. Time (and program space) is of the essence!
