

Orientation to Outdoor Digital Photography

Short Description: Beginner outdoor digital photography from the ground up.

More Details: This is a two-hour (with additional live shoot time) course for beginning outdoor digital photography that is conducted in the classroom with a shoot component. Students are taught how to get started, including types of cameras; camera equipment; using a digital camera; what do all those settings and terms mean; basic composition; creative photography; and basic image editing. These classes are designed for those that have used digital cameras very little or not at all and want to become more comfortable with their use and improve your photo quality. This class is for those that have questions they were curious about and where afraid to ask and those that are anxious with all those settings and terms and would like to become more comfortable. Please bring your questions if you want to know something specific about any of the subjects covered in this class. We are eager to help start taking the mystery and anxiety out of digital photography for you. This class does NOT include any live photography. All activities are held in a classroom setting and participants are encouraged to bring your current camera(s), including cell phones.
