Sitting out in the prairie town of Hoven, SD, you will find an architectural treasure. The St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church is a site to behold. You can see it for miles as you drive up towards the town out on the prairie. As you look at the brick exterior, you may pass it off as just another old church, but you would be terribly mistaken. This wonderful place is a true gem once you step inside and see the beauty and detail of a church designed after the large cathedrals of Europe. Finished construction in 1921, this "Cathedral of the Prairie" should be on your list of things to see in South Dakota.
