As you know, we are establishing an Endowed Lecture for the 2018 ACE Annual Meeting, which will be sponsored by the ACE Fellow and Emeritus Members. The idea of this lectureship is to honor and highlight the work of a renowned epidemiologist who has established or made ground-breaking contributions to a seminal area of epidemiology. This honor will be bestowed in addition to the annual ACE awards with the intention of further enriching the attendance, content, and draw of the meeting.

Further, as this activity will be sponsored by the ACE Fellows and Emeritus Members, it will provide an extra opportunity for interaction among Fellows and Emeritus Members during the annual meeting. If it is successful, we will consider an entire symposium supported in this manner for future meetings.

The selected Lecturer will be a luminary in the field of epidemiology. We anticipate the presentation would be followed by a panel discussion with special expertise in that area of epidemiology and a lively question and answer session. There will also be a special reception for the speaker, with invitations to ACE Fellows and Emeritus Members. Monetary contributions to the endowed lecture will be recognized.

We now have about 250 ACE Fellows and Emeritus Members. To celebrate our success, we are asking for your support, and hope that you will give what you can to fund this exciting initiative, and that most of you will be able to contribute at the $100 giving level, or beyond. This amount will cover the cost of the speaker's travel, an honorarium, and reception.
