

During this trip, I really learned a lot. For example, Love. I learned what's true love. Before I went to the orphanage, I thought all the kids are sad and boring, but now I know how their mother devoted their life to take care and love the children. The most important lesson I learned from the orphanage is simply just how my parents also devoted their life for me but I don't appreciate them and also take their love for granted, so now I finally learned to appreciate their love. Second thing I learned from this trip is calm, because I realized how loud I was before which was super disrespectful, so now I learned to control myself. Lastly, I want to Thank you, John for giving me this great chance to attempt this trip and going so many cool places and eat so much delicious food.
