Gerry Kaplan

Gerry lives in Tokyo, Japan where he is a Software Engineer for Merrill Lynch Securities. His proudest moment in life was the completion of building his first harpsichord; Passing the Japanese Language Proficiency Exam and Publishing a book. This is what he has been up to since the last reunion in his own words. I worked for a variety of investment banks (JPMorgan, Merrill Lynch, etc.). Moved to New York in 1988, then to Japan in 1994, back to New York in 1997, and once again back to Japan in 1999. Studied Japanese at a private language school in New York. Passed the Japanese Language Proficiency Exam December 2000. In 1995, after having written a number of articles for technical journals, was contacted by McGraw Hill to write a book for one of their computer series. Although it was eventually published in 1996, it turned out to be the worst homework assignment ever—the classic five paragraph theme that I had become so familiar with just couldn't be spread over 500 pages and the publisher insisted on using small proportional font despite my repeated requests for triple spaced 36 point courier font. The real world can be so unfriendly at times. While at FSU (way back when), I fell in love with the sound, looks and history of the harpsichord, and in 1998, I embarked on building my first one a French Double (2 Keyboards). It took more than 1.5 yrs to build. After moving to Japan and leaving the instrument back in NY, I decided to build another one, which is almost complete this time, a Flemish Double (again, 2 keyboards). Although I was never athletic in high school, sports became my second favorite past time. After moving to New York and finally getting a chance to see what it felt like to wear ice skates, I decided to take lessons which eventually evolved to 3 times per week. I focused on ice dance. I took various levels of ice dance tests and passed up to the pre-silver level. I still take ice dance in Japan where it is much more popular than I expected. On a less serious level I enjoy tennis, cycling and any other team sports that I have a chance to play. Under the bulky figure that I had back in RHS was a body that was dying to play sports and have fun, and over the past 10 years I've take advantage of my good health and had a lot of fun trying new things I once never though possible. On the Professional side, I've ridden the technology wave and slid between a variety of companies every few years. I'm now on the Java bandwagon developing Web based applications for internal use at Merrill Lynch. I'm playing with bleeding-edge technology and having a blast with it. Youngsters today (oops, did it say that?) have no concept of punch cards and 300 baud modems, but we were the generation that kicked off the technology revolution. What a great time to be alive.
