Vigésimo Cuarto Domingo del Tiempo Ordinario

Spite Houses

There once was a millionaire who owned a lot in an exclusive residential area of New York City. This particular lot presented a very unusual problem. The lot was five feet wide and about a hundred feet long. He couldn't do anything with such an odd sized lot, so he decided to sell it to one of the neighbors on either side. But when he went to the neighbors, they didn't want to give him anything for it. They basically said, "Look, you can't build on it and you can't sell it to anyone else. So take our offer or leave it." The millionaire was so angered by their refusal and rebuttal that he decided to get even.

He hired an architect and a contractor, and had a house designed for that weird shaped lot. It was five feet wide and ran the entire length of the property. He moved in and set up house in this narrow home. Each room was barely wide enough for a single piece of furniture. His hatred for the people on either side of this small lot made him decide to ruin the look of the entire area.

The neighbors complained that it was a blight to the neighborhood. But the city fathers couldn't find any code forbidding it. This millionaire moved into it, and lived there the rest of his life. The only one who was really punished was him. He moved into a long narrow little house that held only hate and discomfort. The house became known throughout the neighborhood as "Spite House." It still stands today as a monument to one man's hatred.

When I first read that story, I thought, surely this is an exaggeration. So, I did some research trying to find out whether this was a true story or just one of those myths that has been passed on. Not only did I find out that it was true, I found out the man's name. But what was even more shocking is the fact that I found no less than eight other "Spite Houses" in a simple search online.

There's one in Carlsbad, New Mexico, built to block the Mayor's view and annoy him. There are two in San Francisco; one at Deadman's Point, Maine; one in Huntsville, Alabama; one in Boston; one in Fredrick, Maryland that is supposed to be haunted and has been turned into a Bed & Breakfast; and a triangle shaped "Spite House" in Montlake, Washington, a suburb of Seattle.

Our passage today from the Gospel of Matthew is the parable of the ungrateful servant. It's a story about our debt of sin. It's about God's free and redeeming grace. It's also about anger and spite, and the judgement that follows an unforgiving spirit.

Peace, Fr. Jim

Oración Por La Patria

Jesucristo, Señor de la historia, te necesitamos. Nos sentimos heridos y agobiados. Precisamos tu alivio y fortaleza. Queremos ser nación, una nación cuya identidad sea la pasión por la verdad y el compromiso por el bien común. Danos la valentía de la libertad de los hijos de Dios para amar a todos sin excluir a nadie, privilegiando a los pobres y perdonando a los que nos ofenden, aborreciendo el odio y construyendo la paz. Concédenos la sabiduría del diálogo y la alegría de la esperanza que no defrauda. Tú nos convocas. Aquí estamos, Señor, cercanos a María. Jesucristo, Señor de la historia, te necesitamos. Amén.
