Programs in your Neighborhood

Want to go to a class and have your money questions answered by someone who's an expert? Our free programs are interactive and facilitated by individuals from local organizations and government agencies to ensure that you get the best information from the right source. You can search the calendar on the library website for Money Matters programs, or go to <http://www.lapl.org/money-matters> and see all of the upcoming program topics and dates.

Online Learning

With your library card, you can sign up for and take free classes through 2 online classroom portals the Los Angeles Public Library subscribes to.

Gale Courses and Universal Class both offer classes on basic budgeting and money management, as well as how to start investing, running and funding small businesses, and more.

You can browse and explore the class before you commit, and there is no cost! You can complete at home with your own devices or on library computers.
