

California CC Sale Expected

Sale of California Country Club in Culver City to a syndicate headed by Sanford Adler is expected to be completed this week end, The Times learned last night.

For the past several years the club has been operated by an investment company of which Bo Roos is president. The principal owners have included Frank Borzage, John Wayne, Mitch Leisen and Fred MacMurray.

The club was one of the most popular golfing centers in the Southland during the 20s and early 30s. No indication of its future status has been given but rumors earlier held that Adler's group planned to subdivide the property.
