California Club to Be Operated as Public Course

California Country Club, recently purchased by Hotelman Sanford Adler from a group of Hollywood film people, will be operated as a public course, beginning tomorrow.

Jack Gage, golf pro at the course, has leased the property for an indefinite time, or until Adler and his associates complete plans for subdivision of the Culver City links.

Gage announced yesterday that the clubhouse will also be open to the public a little later after plans for its operation are set. Green fees for the club's opening round as a public course tomorrow will be $3.50 and regular green fees for subsequent play will be announced later, Gage said.
