

Here Be Dragons

When ancient mapmakers drew a map of the known world, they would get to the edge of the page and the edge of what had so far been discovered, and they would print along the borders of the map Here Be Dragons. Beyond this point, they were saying, we have not yet explored and you are on your own, no guarantees.

Sounds like life, doesn't it?

You're invited to join us for a look at one of the dragons of our lives: fear. Where does it come from? What impact does fear have on the community, on our society? What is the relationship between fear and faith? How do we cope with the awful fears that threaten to paralyze us, that suck the joy from our lives?

Sometimes we need to learn how to live without fear. Sometimes we need to learn how to live with fear. Join us as we discover together the tools that can help us.
