Scotty's Castle

Directions: Locate and correct the missing or incorrectly used capital letters from the passage.

scotty's castle is a mansion at the edge of death valley national park, california, designed by martin de dubovay and built by mat roy yhompson. It gets its name from walter e. scott, a con man and prospector. however, scott never owned the mansion, as it belonged to his friend albert johnson. The construction had been Stopped because it was unaware to johnson that the land they were building on was government Property. When that matter was resolved, they continued construction for a short time until in october, 1929. That's when the stock market Crashed, sending the construction of the castle to a crashing halt. When the Johnsons died, they had nobody to take the castle. so they willed it to the gospel foundation, with the provisions that Scott could live there as long as he desired. In 1970, the national park service bought the castle from the Gospel foundation for over $800,000. When Scott died in 1954, He was buried on the castle grounds, overlooking the mansion.

The castle got its water and electricity from grapevine springs, which was about 300 feet above the castle. The water flow was used to operate a felton waterwheel, which powered the Generator and, in turn, provided electricity for the villa. The castle was never completed, and it lies unfinished to this day. it was turned into a Tourist attraction, and thousands of people visit it each year.

Directions: Correct the words that need capital letters.

last october, my family and i visited the albuquerque international balloon fiesta. it was very exciting seeing the balloons fly through the new mexico sky every day. the fiesta began on a saturday morning and lasted for two weeks. the autumn air was crisp each morning as balloons shaped like darth vader, clocks, and sleeping beauty sailed by.

my dad worked at the fiesta helping matt park campers in the lot. people would come from as far as canada to see these great balloons. the best part about the whole trip was that my whole family got a ride in a hot air balloon. tim was our pilot and he flew us over albuquerque 600 feet in the air. we could see places like mcdonalds and hobby lobby!

we plan to head back to new mexico next october. maybe we will see you there!
