Invites you to a special talk

Allison Hill

Coiled Basketry Production

Join us to hear from archaeologist Allison Hill as she discusses her research on how coiled basket production was organized by Native California tribes in the past. Through a review of traditional tribal knowledge, experimental replication, and stone tool analysis, Hill covers how Emigdiano Chumash women likely scheduled the stages of basket production around primary food gathering activities at different locations throughout the year, engaging in basket manufacture across the cultural landscape.
