Grace Notes

Of Soccer Balls and Saints

A number of years ago, our family experienced a time of great change. It began in early October, 1999, with Cindy heading back to paid employment one day a week. For various reasons this one day schedule fluctuated to as many as 4 and 5 days a week and instantly I was Mr. Mom (I tip my hat to all you women who raise kids!!!). Juggle schedules became the sport of choice in our home as the girls began their careers in Basketball, T-Ball, Swimming and now Soccer. We had officially joined the “passing like ships in the night” crowd.

The most interesting change took place with the last of these sports. Kjarista and Kari were now part of AYSO. After the beginning of the season we learned that each team had to provide 2 people who would be trained as referees before the team could get their uniforms. Two weeks before the start of the season THE call came, “I’m desperate!!! Will you volunteer to be a ref?” All I could think about was how desperate the couch must be if he was calling me. I know “American Football,” not this world sport known as “Futball.” Well, I did know a little: Ricky Martin had sung the theme song, La Copa de Vida, for World Cup in ‘98 and the American Women had just won World Cup and made the cover of every magazine, but I didn’t know anything else!

So there I was, sitting at a cold picnic table with 30 other people as we went through a crash certification course over two nights in order to ref a bunch of bumblebees (the politically correct way of talking about the younger groups who are just beginning to play the sport). We talked lines, and flags, and whistles and yellow cards and red cards, and shin guards and, and, and...

Special points of interest

- How can we guide them in that direction? Since children learn by example, we need to demonstrate how God is a part of the decision making process. the quiet that can come with “place” has been disturbed
- “This is the sum of the matter: let everything be done so that the Word may have free course.”

Working Together

In 2015, ELCA members gave $1.75 billion in unrestricted offerings* to support God's mission and ministry through the three expressions of the ELCA.

Thank you for your generosity!

*Unrestricted offerings do not include special offerings (e.g., congregational capital improvements or gifts to ministries like Lutheran Disaster Response).

Making Choices

We all hope that our children will make wise decisions throughout their lives. How can we guide them in that direction? Since children learn by example, we need to demonstrate how God is a part of the decision making process. Include children in appropriate family decisions. Begin the decision making process with a prayer asking for God's guidance.

In the upper elementary grades, your child will learn that choices that are pleasing to God are not always the choices of his or her peers. Your child will need encouragement and support to help him or her stay with the right choice in spite of what "everyone else" might be doing. Make family Bible story reading and devotions part of your household routine. Tell your child about times when your faith made it possible for you to stand firm on a decision that was unpopular with your friends. Don't be afraid to share your mistakes as well. As your child's faith matures, so will the ability to discern which choices are compatible with his or her faith.

Local Outreach

A total of 29 personal care kits and 44 school kits were assembled during August. Good Job everyone! Let's keep the good work going. Don't forget that the focus for September is the Domestic Violence Shelter (Laundry Detergent, Cleaning Supplies, 13 gal. garbage bags, Paper products, Bleach, Children's socks and underwear, Women's socks and underwear, Bra's, Sweats—all sizes, Baby diapers—all sizes, Phone and Gas cards, Frozen meats, Lunch meats, Frozen dinners, Juices) and in October it will be hats, gloves and more school supplies!

Be a friend of the Triennial Gathering

Join the conversation as we explore the triennial gathering theme "All Anew." Listen to inspiring speakers; participate in worship and praise; learn by attending workshops, viewing films and engaging in servant events. Visit the exhibit hall where you can gather, shop and connect. And don't forget our special events where women in their 20s and 30s can eat chocolate and join others to run it off later. And where's it all happening? In Minneapolis, at the Minneapolis Convention Center.

While this is an official event of Women of the ELCA, all women in the church are invited to attend. One need not be a participant in Women of the ELCA. In fact, we invite all our ecumenical partners to attend as well, so share this invitation.

Mark your calendars for the Tenth Triennial Gathering, July 13-16, 2017, at the Minneapolis Convention Center in Minneapolis, Minn.

We are real women talking about our faith. About our doubts and challenges. About joy and what inspires us. We'll experience simple conversations between friends—old and new—that will develop into a movement sweeping the church, inspired and infused with the Holy Spirit.

collector they show themselves to be the lost. That's my take. Whenever we do the "us and them" thing I believe we stand judged. Jesus may well be defending himself against charges that he consorts with the wrong people, but ... "These, too, are of great value to God!" However, such a claim doesn't really change perceptions, does it? "Alright, hang with the little people if you want. I guess somebody needs to." If that's the point I'd say Jesus' teaching here is pretty weak!

Whoever "the other" is for us they are not lesser beings! I believe the framing of "good church folk" and "the lost" is really, really, not helpful. The "other" has God living and breathing through their being as much as I do. There is so much to learn from them, so many ways we might be blessed by them, so much that neither they nor we can do alone, but only together.

This is why we search for the lost. The lost are an essential part of the flock. They are the coin that rounds out the collection. It is the whole that Jesus seeks, and without you, or me, or the immigrant, or the homeless and hungry - without us all, Shalom will never be complete and we will all be less than God intends.

If this is true . . . if this is the text for the week . . . then what does it mean for us?

500 Years of Evangelical Reformation 1517-2017

When Martin Luther posted his "Ninety-five Theses" on the church door in Wittenberg in 1517, no one expected the breadth of evangelical reforms in Christian teaching and practice that followed. In every dimension of Christian faith a renewed trust in God's forgiving mercy replaced a reliance on teachings and practices that, like the sale of indulgences, were vulnerable to abuse and corruption.

Preaching a few years later, Luther said, "I opposed indulgences ... but never with force. I simply taught, preached, and wrote God's Word; otherwise I did nothing. I did nothing; the Word did everything." When he began to propose reforms in worship, he wrote similar words. "This is the sum of the matter: let everything be done so that the Word may have free course."

Nearly 500 years later, the results of this evangelical confidence in God's forgiving and liberating Word are evident today in Christian communities of all types. In the years leading to 2017 ELCA members, congregations and synods will observe the anniversary of this evangelical reformation in a variety of ways with numerous partners.

Dwelling in the Word

17th Sunday after Pentecost -
September 6, 2016

"This fellow welcomes sinners and eats with them." Luke 15:2.

Our Gospel Lesson for this Sunday is about the lost sheep and the lost coin. Most preachers have waded through these waters several times. I've preached sermons on my personal "lost and found" story. We might talk about going out to find the lost, sort of an evangelism sermon. And, of course, we always want to talk about how Jesus loves us (me) so much that he leaves all in love and concern for me. But why does Jesus actually tell these parables? Jesus tells these parables not because the sinners and tax collectors are uniquely lost, but because as the religious folks shun the sinner and the tax

They are really desperate if I am going to ref a game! My attention picked up a little when the discussion turned to the uniform of the referees. We were the men/women in black. What a cool color! We get to run around in these cute little knickers: black shorts, shoes, shirts and socks with three, count them, 3 white stripes!!! When asked why the specificity of color and stripes, the answer was, "So people can identify you."

Identity is very important to us. We often joke, but we don't, when we get mixed up with another person, or more-so when our names are not remembered at all. I am still amazed when I return to my father's home town in Maine, I am not called by my first name, even though my brothers are. At first this was of concern to me until I realized that to many of the folk, though my name is known, to them my identity is wrapped up in the name they use. I am "Morris' boy." In this simple way I am identified as the son of one of the community, who can be traced back through Morris, and through his father Clarence. I am known in relation to my father, my grandfather, my aunts and uncles, and family that I have never met and only know by photo and name. My identity is not mine alone, but known in my relation to others. It is through my identity/relationship with my family that I am related and identified with this community. These folk have helped me to see that my identity is larger than just me. At the end of this month we will celebrate a day of identity. Though intended to be a day to be celebrated by the whole of the church, this particular day has become one that is near and dear to the hearts of Lutherans. It is Reformation Day, this year on Sunday, October 30. We celebrate this day not only for the work of Luther and his desire to see the Church return to her gospel roots, we also celebrate this day as one that defines us, identifies us as a group uniquely linked to the Reformation and one who was central to it. From this man and movement we take, at least in part, our identity. Like the ref who wears black and a certain type of sock, like the eldest son and his lineage, there are unique characteristics that identify us as "Lutheran" Christians. We are inheritors of the cry of the Reformation, "Grace alone, Faith Alone, Scripture Alone;" we continue the struggle to call the Church back to her gospel roots, and in this way remain a movement within the Church catholic. Our identity is bound up with that of the Church, in all its flavors and shades. We come together under one Name, confess but one Name, experience one baptism, participate in one meal. It is this that identifies us as unique, as Christian.

I begin my referee career secure in the knowledge of who I am as identified by my black shirt and shorts, don't forget the black socks with three white stripes. We continue our common life secure in our identity as children of the same Father, under the name of Christ.
