Jan 6, 2012: For Immediate Release

New Website for Catholic Lectors Debuts

One-Stop Online Center Offers Access to Extensive Resources for Training, Enrichment and Inspiration

DeBary, FL – Jan 6, 2012... LectorResources.com is new information and learning center for lectors and readers. It is designed to equip and inspire them to proclaim God's Word with greater impact on their fellow parishioners, and penetrate their hearts and minds more deeply.

The site provides access to a wide selection of books, tutorials and training tools by credible Catholic writers, and gives references and links to other lector sites that focus on preparation for assigned readings and scripture commentary.

LectorResources.com also posts engaging and inspiring articles on a regular basis to fuel the lector's passion for this ministry; and features a community page where lectors from any location can ask questions, share their thoughts and experiences, and give support to each other.

Typically, most information for lectors and public scripture readers, both online and offline, is scattered, sparse and often time-consuming to find. In response, LectorResources.com aims to be a one-stop go-to source for developing ones proclamation skills in an enjoyable and easily navigable way. Call it a "lectors' oasis" where they can come to be equipped and inspired to become the best proclaimers of God's Word that they can be.

Website founder, George Miller, is a veteran Catholic lector, lector trainer and former ministry head who writes and publishes under the name of Miller Resources LLC. For more information or to interview George, contact him at 407-227-3602, george@lectorresources.com, or P.O. Box 530534, DeBary, FL 32753. Also visit the site at www.lectorresources.com.
