Lectors' Website Confronts Mediocrity

Declares Indifference toward the Lector Ministry in the Catholic Church as an Invisible Crisis

DeBary, FL – May 10, 2018... Unlike the quality and professionalism parishes demand from priests, deacons, musicians, cantors and catechists, few make similar demands on their lectors.

In response to this imbalance, the website, www.LectorResources.com, offers lectors and parish leaders the training and enrichment needed to raise the ministry's level of excellence in their parishes.

LectorResources.com is an extensive source of information for lectors and Gospel readers, far beyond the basics covered in most parish and diocesan guidelines. Its various sections include... websites for weekly preparation of the readings, preparatory prayers, training materials and workshops, homiletic resources and worship aids for the assembly.

The site's centerpiece is an informative and compelling blog. Some of its recent articles are, Great Speakers Don't Always Make Great Lectors, Beware of Getting too Comfortable, One Thing Lectors Can't Fake, To Proclaim from Memory or Not, Discernment Not Just for Newbies, When You're Called on the Spot, Can We Be Too Dramatic? and numerous others.

Since the site's opening in 2012, it is now accessed worldwide with activity per capita in countries such as the Philippines, Canada and French Guiana, higher than that of the U.S.

Website founder and blogger, George Miller, is a veteran Catholic lector and lector trainer who writes under the name of Miller Resources LLC. For more information, visit www.LectorResources.com, contact him at 407-227-3602, george@lectorresources.com, or P.O. Box 530534, DeBary, FL 32753.
