The Pres Says... Shirlene Ostrov, President

Dear Members,

It's game time! I can't believe that most of the registered voters have their ballots already. Hope you have already sent yours in. But our work isn't done. It's time to get voters to actually vote! Did you know that only 39.6% of registered voters actually voted in the primaries? Less than 40% of the people are deciding our future!!! That means to truly make a difference, we need people like us!

We need you to be part of the "Get out the Vote" campaign for all of our Republican (and conservative non-partisan candidates). Call everyone you know...your friends, family, co-workers, kids, neighbors...and ask them if they have voted. If they are like-minded, urge them to vote! If they didn't receive a ballot, they are likely not registered. Not to worry! Did you know they can register to vote and then vote in one fell swoop? They can!

Because so few Americans vote, the ones who show up have increased leverage. Successful campaign strategists have increasingly theorized that the way to win elections is not to flip voters from one party to another, but rather to flip like-minded citizens from "non-voter" to "voter." WE NEED TO DO THIS!

So you're probably asking yourself, "How can I help?" Here's how YOU can Get Out the Vote:

1. Direct mail. Some of you aren't tech savvy, so drop a note to a friend via mail. Do it today! This involves mailing flyers that remind voters of election dates, ways they can vote, and the candidate you are supporting.
2. Social Media. This is the contemporary heir to direct mail and tends to be geared toward a younger audience. Younger citizens frequently know less about registration and election dates than their old counterparts, and online GOTV efforts often seek to educate them about the process.

3. Phone calls. Call everyone you know and remind them of their voting options and polling place if they want to do it in person.
4. Text messaging. In the era of cell phones, text messaging has proven to be a notably effective way of reaching people. It's a particularly popular way of connecting with younger voters, who may actively prefer texting as opposed to speaking on the phone.
5. Door-to-door canvassing. Get out and talk to your neighbors! This tactic involves volunteers knocking on doors and asking voters face-to-face to show up and cast a vote (or to send in a ballot by mail).
6. Driving voters to the polls. Some voters lack the ability to get to the polls on their own. This is particularly true among the elderly, who tend to be more politically engaged than other age demographics. It is legal to escort a voter to the voting center, but they must enter the ballot box by themselves.

The bottom line is that you (yes, you!) have the ability to make a difference in this election.

We need you now more than ever!

Democracy is very fragile. Be careful with it! Stray but a little and democracy shall fail.

Here are 15 things that put democracy itself in jeopardy every day:

1. Democracy: We can't let democracy get in the way and ruin our perfect democracy.
  2. Independent journalism: Truth can only come from state and corporation-approved sources.
  3. Voter ID: This is Jim Crow supersized times a billion trillion on mega-steroids. Everyone knows the freest, fairest, and most secure elections involve ZERO forms of ID.
  4. The Constitution: It was written by slave owners who wore white wigs. Disgusting.
  5. Questioning the results of any election democrats won: Scary to think about.
  6. Accepting the results of any election Republicans won: Even scarier to think about!
  7. Squirrels: They've got to be up to something.
  8. Only getting four COVID boosters: Your lack of compliance is disturbing.
  9. Criticizing runaway inflation: Shame on you. It's your patriotic duty to pay more for everything.
  10. Not giving all our money to Ukraine: Just how committed are you to defending democracy?
  11. 74 million+ people who voted for Trump: That's right, nearly half of voters are a direct threat.
  12. Red meat: Every bite brings us one step closer to the precipice of destruction.
  13. People praying in front of abortion clinics: Someone needs to call the FBI before democracy collapses!
  14. People talking without Mark Zuckerberg being there to censor their conversation: Already happening in hundreds of coffee shops across America.
  15. Tucker Carlson - REEEEEEE!
- Well, there you have it, folks! Do your part to defend democracy, and report anyone who has done anything on this list directly to the Department of Justice.

Your support over the past two years has allowed us to give contributions to these candidates.

We gave a total of $11,600.00.

Over the next two years we would like to reach a goal of $20,000.00 so we can give even more to deserving candidates.

This is an easier goal to reach than you might think. If each of our members committed to giving only $5 per month - less than 17cents a day - we could exceed that goal.

Please make your committment today.

50/50

Samantha DeCorte won the 50/50 drawing in September. Half of the pot went to Samantha, the other half goes to the OLRW PAC. Thank you to all who contributed.

Hawaii law already preserves abortion right

Josh Green's political-pandering promise to "issue an executive order ensuring that women in Hawaii have access to abortions" is the worst straw man yet ("Stand on abortion issue thrown into governor's race," Star-Advertiser, Sept. 20). There is absolutely no need for an executive order on abortion to preserve the legal standard from Roe v. Wade.

In 2006, when Gov. Linda Lingle was in charge, she signed into law House Bill 1242, House Draft 1. Entitled "Intentional Termination of Pregnancy," the law prohibits the state from denying or interfering with a female's right to choose or obtain an abortion under the Roe v. Wade standard, and further repealed the residency requirement for abortions and legalized performance of abortions in clinics and physicians' offices. That is still the current law.

An executive order on abortion is futile except for crass political motives. Before an executive order could be needed, the membership in both houses of the state Legislature would have to change that statute. In Hawaii?

Homeless kupuna need help, not talk

As I was making my daily walk downtown, one particular homeless person stood out among the many others I've encountered: a wahine kupuna. My heart sank as I watched this precious life walk back and forth with only a dirty small aloha handbag, swollen legs and her beautiful gray hair. Emotion overtook me.

Our kupuna have left a legacy of the true gift and spirit of aloha unrivaled for the world to experience. How can our elected officials campaign on such a crucial life-and-death issue, only to allow it to ripen to a point of no return?

Hilahila 'ole on them. They promise to make these people a priority, but when they get into elected office leave them destitute. Let's not go through the countless reason why — drugs, mental illness, they chose this — they are still people who deserve our love and care. How many more of those, who have raised us in the beautiful land of aloha?

Not all distasteful speech is unlawful 'hate speech'

Reader Daphne Barbee-Wooten is correct in her assertion that the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution does not protect "hate speech" ("Hate speech is not protected free speech," Star-Advertiser, Letters, Sept. 20). There's one small problem with that argument, as it might be made with regard to individual liberties, and that is that arbitrary rules have no application. The First Amendment absolutely protects free speech, not just any one interpretation of speech, no matter how distasteful or objectionable, as it might meet the test of being unrestricted. In her model, any speech that contradicts a given narrative can be viewed as unlawful "hate speech" — and that is a very dangerous precedent that effectively eliminates the marketplace of the exchange of ideas.

Federal funds aren't free money; we will pay

I recently saw a big flashy ad by U.S. Sen. Brian Schatz, telling the people of Hawaii how much federal money he's brought into the state. I feel a need to remind everyone: There ain't no such thing as a free lunch.

Schatz owes somebody something for all those dollars coming to the state. That means we the voters and constituents eventually will have to pay that bill. I wonder what it will cost.
