There's an App for that...

REDLIGHT TRAFFIC

Developed by redlighttraffic.org, this app gives people the ability to report suspicious activity that may be related to human trafficking. Users may submit reports under one of three categories: business, person, or vehicle, depending on the situation. All reports are then shared with local authorities. The app also has an informational page on how to recognize physical and behavioral signs of trafficking victims.

BAN HUMAN TRAFFICKING

BAN Human Trafficking was produced with the aim to educate the users about the issue of human trafficking and prevention of this type of crime. By playing this interactive game, the users will be able to get acquainted with different types and stages of trafficking in human beings, from recruitment, exploitation and escape from the trafficking ring, down to recovery, social re-integration, and struggle to exercise the rights belonging to human trafficking victims.

TRAFFICKCAM

TraffickCam was created with frequent travelers in mind. Due to trafficking victims often being photographed in hotel rooms, this app lets users photograph their hotel rooms and upload them to TraffickCam's database. These pictures are then analyzed and run against a database of pictures provided by law enforcement to find sex trafficking locations.

TRUCKERS AGAINST TRAFFICKING

The Truckers Against Trafficking app seeks to educate, equip, empower and mobilize community members (especially those in the trucking and travel industry) to combat domestic sex trafficking. It also provides access to both call and/or email the national hotline to report potential instances of trafficking, in addition to other useful resources.
