

Exploring careers in transportation and construction for high school girls

The HOYA Foundation is offering a one week Career Days Discovery for young women. For one week, participants will travel to five different companies to learn the myriad of careers that lie within transportation and construction. The young women will come to each location at 9:00am and stay until 3:00pm. The host will provide lunch. This is part of the HOYA Foundation’s nationwide effort to encourage young women to pursue careers in transportation. Transportation and construction careers include a wide diversity of careers: marketing, human resources, heavy equipment operator, architect, engineer, driver, surveyor, project supervisor, sales, and so many more.
