

Ending rituals are best when approached as celebrations of life. When a loved one passes we want to remember their unique personality and their brilliant moments. Cookie cutter just doesn't do enough to honor our friend and family. Endings can take many forms, such as the end of a long relationship, leaving a family home, saying farewell to a core group of friends as we move on to the next chapter in our lives.

Whatever your ending, I will work with you to fashion a ceremony or ritual that brings closure and honors all that has gone before in ways that reflect the best of that history and experience.
